2570. Sole trustee.]—CHAPMAN v. LOFTUS (1895), 39 Sol. Jo. 217.

2571. ———.]—The rule that a trust fund in ct. will not be ordered to be paid out to a sole trustee except on the consent of all parties beneficially interested is not an inflexible rule; under special circumstances payment to a sole trustee will be ordered.

A lady, on her marriage in 1890, settled a fund of her own to be held by G., her brother, in trust for herself for life, then for U., her husband, for his life & on the death of the survivor upon trust for the children of the marriage, & in default of children in trust for the settlor absolutely. G. was empowered, while sole trustee, to invest the fund as he thought fit, but if he ceased to be sole trustee, the fund was to be invested on trust securities. U. deserted the settlor in 1890, & they had not since come together. There were no children of the marriage. The fund being in ct., G., & the settlor petitioned for payment out to G., as sole trustee. U. was not a party to the proceedings. G. undertook that if a child of the marriage was born he would have a second trustee appointed:—Held: in these circumstances the fund must be ordered to be paid out to G., the sole trustee.—*LEIGH v. The cestui que trust now presented a petition for payment out of ct. of the money so paid in:—Held: although (1) the ct. could not compel the trustees to pay costs; (2) they could in this case be allowed only the costs of paying the money into ct., & none on the petition.—Re HEMING'S TRUST (1850), 3 K. & J. 40; 26 L. A fund was held in trust for A., an unmarried lady for life but to cease if “by any means whatever” it should vest or become payable to any other person. A., afterwards married, & her life interest was settled to her separate use without power of anticipation, by a settlement to which the trustees purported to be parties but to which they never assented. The trustees thereupon paid the trust fund into ct. under Trustee Relief Act:—Held: as the trusts which they had accepted had not been varied either by the marriage or the settlement, they were not justified in paying the money into ct. & they were refused their costs of appearing on a petition for payment of the income to the tenant for life.—Re LEAKE'S TRUSTS (1863), 32 Beav. 135; 1 New Rep. 417; 7 L. 2607. — Money paid out by mistake.] — A fund was paid into ct. under the Trustee Relief Act to the credit of the trusts of the will of M., deceased. A different person, also named M., who was a lunatic, was entitled under the will of her sister S., whose estate was being administered in the Ct. of Ch., to a life interest in the residue of her estate, to which H. was entitled in remainder. There was a fund in ct. to the credit of the estate of S., & also a fund to the credit of the lunacy of M., the lunatic. By a mistake, which appeared to have first originated in the office of the Accountant-General, the fund in ct. on the trusts of the will of M., testatrix, was included in the account of the property of M., the lunatic, which was filed in the Lunacy Office by her committee & was there treated as forming a part of the residue of the estate of S.

After the death of M., the lunatic, upon a petition in Lunacy, presented by the committee & the heir-at-law & administrator of M., the lunatic, & served only upon H., which contained an allegation that the fund in ct. standing to the credit of the trusts of the will of M., deceased, had been by mistake placed to a wrong account, & that it really formed part of the residue of the estate of S., an order was made by the Lords Justices that a sum of cash, which had arisen from the income of the fund, should be carried over to the credit of the lunacy of M., & that the capital of the fund should be paid to H. This was done. Afterwards, when the persons really entitled under the will of M., the testatrix, to the fund came to claim it, the mistake was discovered. Those persons then presented a petition of re-hearing to the Lords Justices which was entitled in Lunacy, in the matter of M., the lunatic; in Chancery, in the suit to administer the estate of S.; in the matter of Trustee Relief Act, & in the matter of the trusts of the will of M., the testatrix; & also in the matter of the solrs., & their London agents, who acted for petitioners & resp. upon the petition on which the wrong order was made.

The petition of rehearing asked that the original petition might be reheard, & that the order made thereon might be reversed or varied so far as it dealt with the funds wrongly paid away, & that resps.—viz., the persons who had respectively received those moneys, & their respective solrs. & London agents, might be ordered to replace the moneys, & to pay all the costs, charges, & expenses of the petitioners properly incurred in the matter, as between solr. & client:—Held: resps. were jointly & severally liable to make good to petitioners the sums which had been paid to the wrong parties, with interest, & to pay all the costs, charges, & expenses of petitioners properly incurred, as between solr. & client; the persons who had respectively received the moneys being respectively primarily liable to make them good, with interest; & the solr. who presented the petition on which the wrong order was made being primarily liable to pay the costs, charges, & expenses.—Re SPENCER (1869), 39 L. 2615. —[—]—In an action by beneficiaries under a will against the trustees for (inter alia), execution of the trusts of the will, an account of testator's business, which had been carried on by the trustees under a power in that behalf, & administration a receiver & manager of the business was appointed on motion, & the action was ultimately compromised at the trial, one of the terms of compromise being that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the estate including in the costs of the trustees all costs, charges, & expenses incurred by them as exors. & trustees of the will. In the result the action proved disastrous to the trust estate the business which previously had been profitable, having to be closed down for want of capital, & the assets of the estate being insufficient to pay the costs of all parties. On an application by pltf.'s solrs. for a charging order for their costs under Solicitors Act, 1860 (c. 127), s. 28, & by the trustees for a declaration of priority in respect of their costs, charges & expenses:—Held: having regard to the long established practice of the Ch. Div. indemnifying trustees for all expenditure properly incurred in relation to their trust estate, & also to the express terms of the compromise, deft. trustees were entitled to payment of all their costs, charges & expenses in priority to the charging order obtained by pltf.'s solrs.—Re TURNER, WOOD v. TURNER, [1907] 2 Ch. 126, 539; 76 L. J. Ch. 492; 96 L. T. 798; 23 T. L. R. 524; 51 Sol. Jo. 485, C. A.

2616. —[—]—The claim of an assignee under an assignment by a beneficiary of an interest in a trust fund, the assignor not being a trustee of the fund & the assignment being duly notified to the trustee, has priority over a claim by the trustee against the assigned interest for a debt incurred by the assignor to the trustee since the assignment.

But the assignee will lose his priority if he stands by, e.g. in an action by the assignor against the trustee for an account, & allows the debt, e.g. costs payable by the assignor to the trustee, which he could have prevented, to be incurred.

Before action brought pltf. had assigned, by way of mtge., her interest under a will, & the assignment had been duly notified to the trustees. In the action she claimed against the trustees as account, their removal, & cancellation of a receipt given by one of them not in his character of trustee. The claim to cancel the receipt was struck out, & the claim to remove the trustees was dropped. An account was delivered, but pltf. was not satisfied. The ct. refused to proceed till the mtgees. were brought before the ct., & pltf. added them as defts. They intimated that they would not file evidence. It appearing that any account was unlikely to result in any advantage to pltf., the ct. made an order at her peril as to costs, the mtgees. not objecting or remonstrating & attending the subsequent proceedings. The account was taken, the master certifying that nothing whatever was due from the trustees:—*Held: but for their standing by, the mtgees. would have been entitled to have the trustees' costs, so far as pltf. was personally liable, charged upon her interest under the will subject & not in priority, to their mtge. But, having been silent throughout, their security became subject to the suit, & whatever sum was charged upon pltf. in respect of costs incurred subsequent to the order for an account was chargeable on her interest under the will in priority, & not subject, to their claim.—Re PAIN, GUSTAVSON v. 2654. — No order as to costs.—A summons having been taken out by a beneficiary for the administration of a testator's estate under which several questions arose with respect to the accounts of the trustee & his management of the property, the judge made an order as to the questions in dispute & ordered the accounts to be taken & declared that “he did not think fit to make any order as to the costs of the action”.—Held: this declaration was a judicial decision that the trustee was not entitled to costs in the action & he had no right to retain them out of the estate.—*Re HODGKINSON, HODGKINSON v. 2660. —[—A father by his will settled stock upon his daughter for life, remainder to her issue, subject to a life interest in any husband who might survive her. She married & had one only child, a son, & her husband died. When she had attained eighty years of age she married a gentleman, a member of the Irish & English bar, of about fifty-four years of age. She had accumulated much personal property, the savings of her income. Before the marriage, which it was agreed should be kept secret from the son, a very voluminous & long-continued correspondence took place between the lady & gentleman, in which she insisted that her property should be settled so that she should have the command of it "as if still unmarried," he being entitled, as husband, to a life interest, if surviving, in the stock bequeathed by the father's will. The intended husband drew two documents, in very obscure language, in one of which he bound himself to consent to her "disposition of a sum of £2,000 out of whatever funds or dividends she 'should be' entitled to, be possessed of, or have legally acquired at the time of her decease." The marriage took place, & was kept secret from the son until the wife's decease, she continuing the use of her virtual name, which took place in about six months, without her having made any disposition of her savings, leaving her son sole next of kin. After her decease the husband filed a bill against the trustee of the fund settled by the father of the lady for payment of the life interest, & the son filed a bill against the husband praying, amongst other things, a declaration that, as next of kin, he was entitled to the savings of his mother's income.

In the suit against the trustee, the trustee was allowed his costs out of the fund.—CORLEY v. STAFFORD (LORD), CAMPBELL v. CORLEY (1857), 1 De G. & J. 238; 26 L. J. Ch. 865; 30 L. T. O. S.

2662. —[—Two persons were, under a deed of settlement after a marriage, made assignees of a life policy upon trusts stated in the settlement for the benefit of the younger children of the marriage. The husband died intestate. The widow took out letters of administration, & instituted an administration suit, to which the trustees were not made parties, but in which the Ct. of Ch. in Ireland was asked to grant, & did grant, an order for the payment of the policy money into ct. The insurance office knowing of the assignment of the policy, refused to obey the order, & the trustees, on being informed of it, protested against it, & refused to sign receipts for the money. The solrs. for pltf. in the administration suit wrote to them, asking them to give up the trust. They refused, & they again refused to sign the receipts for the payment of the money under the administration suit. A petition in the names of the younger children was then presented to the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, representing that the trustees had declined to act in the trust, & it was prayed that they might be removed, & other persons be appointed in their stead. An order to this effect was made:—Held: these proceedings were altogether irregular; & the cause was remitted, with special instructions. The costs of the trustees were ordered to come out of the funds of the trust.—MUSKERRY (LORD) v. SKEFFINGTON (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 144.

2663. —[—Personal estate was given by will to a large number of legatees. The exors. & trustees, after deducting £10 from each share to form an indemnity fund against certain possible claims paid off the adult legatees, & invested the shares of each infant legatee in his name & theirs jointly. A general release, to which the accounts were scheduled, was they executed by all the adult legatees. Some years after this a bill for the administration of the estate was filed by six of the infant legatees, their next friend being the managing clerk of their solr., acting at the request of their father, who had executed the release. The result of the accounts was to show that the suit was not for their benefit:—Held: that the next friend was entitled to his costs; the fund for payment of costs consisted of the indemnity fund & the undistributed shares of all the infant legatees; but any residuary legatees who had been paid, including the trustees, asking for costs, should bring in the shares which they had received; & the trustees taking large shares, & being therefore unwilling to bring them in, any surplus remaining should be paid to the trustees towards their costs.—

2666. ———. ———.]—The trustees of a will agreed to settle disputes with the surviving partner in a firm of which testator had been a member by selling testator's share to him at a certain price. They then filed a bill to have this agreement sanctioned; a decree was made accordingly, & the sale carried out. Some years afterwards some of the residuary legatees, who were infants, filed a bill by their next friend to set aside the decree on the ground that the compromise was an improper one, & that it had been entered into, & the decree sanctioning it obtained, by the personal fraud of one of the trustees. This trustee answered separately & at the hearing Lord Romilly dismissed the bill with costs, being of opinion that the compromise had been beneficial & the decree sanctioning it properly obtained. The next friend could not pay the costs, & the trustee applied by summons in a suit for the administration of testator's estate to have them taxed as between solr. & client & paid out of the estate:—Held: the trustee was entitled to be paid his costs out of the estate as he had defended the suit for the benefit of the estate, though he had at the same time defended his own character.—*WALTERS v. Defts. being unable to find the next friend, an order was made giving the trustees liberty to retain the costs out of the income of the trust fund already due & to become due to the married woman:—Held: no such order could be made, for the ct. had no jurisdiction to disregard the restraint on anticipation on the ground that it appeared to the ct. to be just to do so; & no income which did not accrue due till after the act on which the claim against the separate estate depended, viz., the improper institution of the suit, could be attached to meet the costs.—*Re GLANVILLE, ELLIS v. In 1881 he contemplated a sale of the estate, but he was restrained from selling, either under the power in the will or under that contained in the Settled Land Act, by an injunction granted in an action brought by persons entitled in remainder. In 1884 the action was dismissed with costs, & in 1885 the tenant for life sold the estate under conditions of sale which stated that the purchaser should in addition to the purchase-money pay for the timber according to a valuation. The tenant for life claimed, under the provisions of the settlement & under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 35, to be paid out of the purchase-money the value of the timber; & he also claimed to be paid the difference of his costs, as between party & party & solr. & client, in the action which was dismissed:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled, in defending the action which was dismissed with costs, to be paid his extra costs of so much of the action as related to the exercise of the powers contained in the Settled Land Act as incidental to the exercise of his power of sale under the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38).

2706. — Recognition of unfounded claim.—[—] M., previously to her marriage with W., was entitled to certain real estates on which a quantity of timber was afterwards felled, producing the clear balance of £942 £3 per cent. Consols. By the settlement on her marriage, those estates were covenanted to be settled to the use of four trustees, of whom E. & R. were two, & the settlement was for a term of ninety-nine years, if M. & W. should so long live, without impeachment of waste, in trust to receive the rents, issues, & profits, & after discharging the outgoings, to pay the residue to such persons & for such uses as M. should alone, & from time to time, & without her husband, as if she were sole, but not by way of anticipation, by any drafts, notes, orders, or writings, signed by her own proper hand, appoint; & in default thereof, to pay same to M., for her separate use, exclusive of her husband, who was not to intermeddle therewith, nor were the rents, etc. to be subject to his debts or control; with remainder to W. for his life; with remainders over. The trustees in 1830 appointed W. receiver of the settled estates, & M. signed a paper writing, dated Dec. 16, 1836, authorising the trustees to pay £200 per annum only of the rents to herself, & the remainder to W. The then trustees presented the paper writing to M. for her signature. M. afterwards signed another paper, dated Apr. 15, 1837, by which she revoked the former paper writing, & directed the payment of the rents to her separate use, according to the provisions of the settlement. This was afterwards communicated to the trustees, two of whom endeavoured to keep M. bound by the terms of the paper of Dec. 16, 1836, which obliged M. in Jan. 1838, to give notice to the then manager of the estates not to pay the rents to W. On one of the other two trustees, (B.), who was friendly to M. intimating his intention to receive the rents, a notice was served on the tenants & the manager, in the name of W. not to pay any rents except to some one authorised by all the trustees. The ct. afterwards, on motion, appointed the trustee B., the receiver, without salary. W. claimed the sum of £942 Consols. on the ground, that if he survived M., he would be tenant for life, without impeachment of waste; & the two hostile trustees insisted that M. had parted with her interest in that sum, by agreeing that the timber should be cut down, & the proceeds applied in payment of W.'s debts. The same trustees throughout the transactions endeavoured to aid the husband, W., in defeating the wife's enjoyment of her separate estate:—Held: the decree was right in ordering those trustees & W. to pay the costs of the suit, same having been rendered necessary by the unfounded claims of the husband, W., improperly recognised & supported by those two trustees.—BAGOT v. BAGOT (1841), 10 L. J. Ch. 116, L. C.

time previously warned the trustees, on the occasion of an injury done by persons other than defts. to these actions, that he should hold them liable if they did not take all necessary steps to protect the property. In Dec. 1881, pltf. applied to the trustees for the rents accrued since May, 1880. The trustees' solr. answered stating the amount of the rents received, & saying that it was less than the costs incurred by the trustees in the action, & that they were out of pocket. A correspondence ensued, in the course of which the trustees expressed their willingness to concur in any arrangement for raising the costs out of the estate, but pltf. insisted on having the rents paid to him irrespective of any arrangement for raising the costs, & brought his action to enforce payment: Held: (1) the direction to raise the costs of the trustees of the old actions out of the estate ought to be affirmed, for the actions appeared to have been brought bona fide & to have been beneficial to the estate, but the reason given in the decree for allowing them ought to be varied, as that result did not necessarily follow from their having been commenced under the advice of the counsel. (2) the order on the trustees to pay costs must be reversed, & directions given for raising their costs of this action out of the estate, for the costs of trustees properly incurred in the administration of the trust are a first charge on both the capital & income of the trust estate, & the trustees were not bound to part with the income till their costs had been otherwise provided for, & they therefore had been guilty of no misconduct.—*STOTT v. By a codicil he expressed his will that his real estate should be sold at any time, either before or after his wife's death. The interest of the share bequeathed to his own relations after his wife's death to be paid to her, & the other moiety devised by his will to be paid to his wife for her own use.

The wife of testator having disposed of the above moiety by her will, purporting to be in exercise of the power given her by his will, her exor. claimed to be entitled to receive a moiety of the proceeds of testator's real estate from the trustees of his will; which claim they refused, on the ground that the codicil did not revoke the power given by the will, although they were previously advised, by the opinions of two counsel, which they concealed from the exor. of the wife, that it did:—Held: they were liable to pay the costs of a suit instituted by the exor. of the wife to recover a moiety of the proceeds of testator's real estate, so far as it was rendered necessary by their conduct.—*ANKERS v. Defts., before they became trustees, were fully aware of the doubt as to the validity of the settlement. Upon a bill filed by some of the cestuis que trust for transfer of their share of the settled fund. The judge held that such transfer could not be ordered except in a suit so constituted as to parties that the question of the validity of the settlement could be decided:—Held: this decision was right; for a trustee who, after accepting the trusts, becomes aware of an adverse equitable claim, cannot safely proceed as if no such claim existed; & the fact of his being aware of the claim when he accepted the trust cannot make any difference except as to his costs.—NEALE v. DAVIES (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 258; 2 Eq. Rep. 530; 23 L. J. Ch. 744; 2 W. R. 358; 43 E. R. 809, L. J.

2739. Liability of trustee for costs.—Repeated applications were made to a trustee requiring to know in what way certain legacies given by the will of a testator, & in which certain parties had life interests, had been invested. 2741. Unreasonable proceedings by beneficiary—No order as to costs.—Pltf. was entitled under a will to the sum of £100, subject to the life interest therein of testator's widow, who was eighty-four years of age. Testator died in July, 1894, & probate of his will was granted in Aug. In Nov. pltf., being desirous of raising money on the security of her reversionary interest, asked the trustees for the particulars of the securities in which the estate was invested. Some correspondence took place, & in a letter of Dec. 11 the trustees said that at the date of the proof of the will the securities consisted of a variety of foreign railway & Govt. bonds, & also a considerable quantity of English railway stock; that the net amount of the personal estate was £12,286 2s. 11d., & that they could not add to these particulars, which they trusted would be considered satisfactory. On Dec. 14, without any further communication with the trustees, an originating summons was taken out on behalf of pltf. against the trustees, asking that they might be ordered to furnish pltf. with particulars of the trust estate & the investments, & to pay the costs of the summons. It appeared that pltf. had in fact obtained a very small loan on the security of the reversion:—Held: pltf. was strictly entitled to the particulars of the investments of the trust estate, & the trustees must furnish them; but the summons had been taken out with unreasonable haste, & both sides being in the wrong, there would be no order as to the costs, either of the appeal or in the ct. below, except that pltf.'s solr. should be disallowed all costs as against her.—*Re DAINTNALL, SAWYER v. The trustees of the settlement appealed to the chief judge, who discharged the order of the county ct. 2747. Negligent conduct of action.—An administration action was commenced in May, 1875, & in Nov. 1887, was heard on second further consideration. It then appeared that the costs would probably amount to a sum almost equal to the value of the estate. The judge thereupon referred the matter to the taxing master under R. S. O., Ord. 65, r. 11, for inquiry & report as to the delay & the costs occasioned thereby, which order was affirmed on appeal. The taxing master reported that there had been great delay in the suit, which was caused by the conduct of the solr. for pltf., & he disallowed considerable sums of the costs as between the various solrs. & their clients:—Held: the ct. will not permit the costs occasioned by improper litigation, or by the negligent conduct of administration proceedings, to be paid out of an estate under its care; the amount of costs allowed by a taxing master as between the client & his solr. was not conclusive of the amount which the ct. would allow out of the estate; & therefore the ct. had jurisdiction to refuse to allow pltf., a trustee, to have the full amount of the costs allowed him in taxation paid out of the estate.—BROWN v. BURDETT (1888), 40 Ch. D. 244; 60 L. T. 520; 37 W. R. 533; 5 T. L. R. 88, C. A. Annotations.—*Re*ld. Formby v. Barker (1903), 89 L. T. 249. Mentd. Re Burn & Berridge (1908), 99 L. T. 606.

2748. — Unnecessary inquiries.—This case came before the ct. for further consideration, & debts. asked that pltf. might be ordered to pay the costs of the action. Pltf. was the sole exor. & trustee of the will of G., a grocer. The property had been realised in the action, & the total amount of the proceeds was about £370. Testator died in 1878, having by his will left all his property upon trust for his wife during widowhood, with power to carry on the business, & on her death or marriage, upon trust for sale, the residue to be divided among his children & the issue then living of any deceased. On May 30, 1879, the writ was issued in this action. In Apr. 1880, the statement of claim was delivered in which the number & names of the testator's children were stated, the only reason given for the action being that difficulties had arisen in the administration of the trust. The widow & J., an adult son, were debts. On Nov. 17, 1880, pltf. applied for & obtained an order for accounts & inquiries. The certificate was not made until June 5, 1889:—Held: the suit being instituted, & the order for accounts & inquiries made before the General Orders of 1883 came into operation, the trustee under the old practice, was not so much to blame as to be ordered to pay the costs.—Re DALE, STUBBS v. DALE (1889), 62 L. T. 28.

She then married again, her first husband being still alive, & on such marriage settled the money so deposited for the benefit of herself & second husband & two illegitimate children. Shortly afterwards she was convicted of murder, & executed. Previous to her trial, she & her trustees applied to the bankers for the fund, in order to employ it in her defence, which the trustees conducted in an extravagant manner, but the bankers refused to pay it over. After her execution, the trustees & the first husband severally brought actions against the bankers to recover the money, which were stayed under an interpleader rule, & an issue was directed to try the question between the first husband & the trustees, under which a verdict was found for the first husband:—Held: the trustees, not having acted bonâ fide, should repay the costs of the bankers to pltf., & also pay all the costs incurred by him in the course of the proceedings.

2779. —[—]—(1) An order giving one set of costs between two trustees who have severed in their defence to an action &, directing such costs to be certified as payable to one only of the trustees, is, as regards the other, an order depriving him of costs within the meaning of R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, & an appeal from such an order will lie.

(2) The mere fact of a trustee severing in his defence from his co-trustee is not, in the absence of evidence that the severance was improper, ground for depriving him of costs.

(3) When two trustees sever in their defence to an administration action, & it appears that the trustee who has separated himself from his co-trustee has separately done work in the administration of the trust estate, the proper order is to allow one set of costs only to the trustees, & to direct that such costs should be apportioned by the taxing master between the trustees, but so as only to give to the severing trustee the costs of work actually done by him.—*Re ISAAC, CRONHACH v. 2780. — Appearance by separate counsel.—Although it is the settled practice that trustees served with notice of an appeal upon the construction of a will are entitled to their costs of appearance by counsel, yet, in taxing their costs of appearance, the taxing master should have regard to the position of the trustees, & especially whether it was such that, at the hearing of the appeal, their assistance would probably be required by the ct.—*CARROLL v. 2789. —[—]— Request of beneficiary.—On the marriage between pltf. & deft. M. the whole of pltf.’s property, except thirty-five shares in the Crystal Palace co., was settled. The shares were taken possession of by the husband in his marital right, & were transferred into his name. A separation afterwards took place, & by the separation deed, which contained a covenant by the trustee under it to indemnify the husband against the wife’s debts, the husband agreed to transfer the shares in question to a trustee for the separate use of the wife, & this was done. A re-cohabitation afterwards took place between the husband & wife.

The costs of all parties were ordered to be paid out of certain funds held in trust for the separate use of the wife absolutely. The trustees of the settlement had, at the express request of the wife, entered separate appearances:—Held: they were entitled to separate sets of costs.—O'MALLEY v. BLEASE (1809), as reported in 17 W. R. 952.

2790. ——— Hostile attack on one trustee—Costs of two counsel allowed.—On further consideration in an administration action a hostile order was sought against one of deft. trustees. Thereupon defts. severed, the trustee attacked appearing by two counsel & his co-trustee by one counsel. The attack failed, & the trustees were given their costs of the action as between solr. & client, & also their costs of appearing separately. In taxing their costs the taxing master disallowed the costs of a leading counsel to the trustee attacked, being of opinion that one counsel for each trustee was sufficient. On summons to review:—Held: the trustee attacked was entitled to the costs of appearing by two counsel.—RE MADDOCK, BUTT v. WRIGHT, [1899] 2 Ch. 588; 68 L. J. Ch. 655; 81 L. T. 320; 47 W. The two trustees, for reasons which were not denied to be sufficient, appeared separately; & one of them dying before the cause was heard on further directions, it was held that he had acquired no lien for his costs on the trust fund in ct.; & the petition of his personal representative, that his costs might be taxed & provided for out of the fund, was refused with costs.—*MALINS v. On taking the accounts deft. was found to have given before action a correct account of the capital, but in the accounts he had rendered of the income he had not accounted for so much as he ought. The misconduct alleged was not substantiated. The judge ordered ptf.'s costs relating to the income account, & deft.'s costs of the rest of the action, to be taxed & set off against the other. 2820. Beneficiaries asking for account—Release by trustees.—This was an originating summons taken out by two beneficiaries asking that trustees might be ordered to deliver an account notwithstanding a release. The objection was taken that pltf. should have brought an action to set aside the release, as the case was not one to be heard on affidavit evidence.—Held: the case was not one to be tried on originating summons, but a writ should issue.—Re ELLIS, KELSON v. ELLIS (1888), 59 L. Semble: if no question of construction arises under the instrument, the ct., even if it has jurisdiction, will not give partial relief by making "a declaration of the rights of the persons interested" under the discretionary Ord. 54A, rr. 1, 4, but will leave the whole matter to be dealt with in an action to enforce the resulting trust.—Re AMALGAMATED SOCIETY OF RAILWAY SERVANTS, ADDISON v. PILCHER, [1910] 2 Ch. 547; 80 L. SUB-SECT. 4.—PARTIES.

A. In General.

2824. Who are proper parties—Beneficiaries.—Seven persons belonging to a friendly society were appointed trustees for winding up the affairs of the society, & distributing the surplus funds among the living members & the representatives of deceased. The trustees appointed their solr. to draw the necessary cheques on their bankers, which were to be countersigned by two of their number. The money was apportioned & the greater part paid, & there remained £700 in the banker's hands, which was irregularly drawn out & invested in the names of the solr. & the trustees appointed to countersign the cheques. The two trustees having died, the solr., as was alleged, applied the money to his own use. The only surviving trustee of the seven filed his bill to recover the trust fund merely, as it appeared though not altogether clearly, but not to administer it, & the solr. objected for want of parties.—Held: the objection was not sustainable.

If the object of the bill was to administer the trust money, it would be necessary to have the cestui que trusts represented here, but as it is only for recovering the trust money in the hands of a stranger, for the purpose of having it administered afterwards, I think it may be recovered in the way in which it is proposed (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—HORSLEY v. PIGOTT (1863), 2 New Rep. 14; 8 L. T. 268.

2826. — Agents of trustees.]—Testator having directed his business to be carried on by his trustees for the benefit of his family, his widow & one of the trustees carried it on with the permission of the other; but the acting trustee having become bkpt., two other persons were successively appointed to assist the widow to carry on the business, the other trustee consenting but taking no part in the business. Bkpt. had, with the concurrence of the widow, withdrawn money from testator's estate, & applied it to his own use. The parties interested under the will filed a bill against the other trustee for the general administration of testator's estate, & an account. An objection was taken to the frame of the bill for want of parties, because the representatives of the persons who had acted in the management of the business were not made parties:—Held: they were only agents of the trustee with whose consent they were appointed, & were not, necessary parties.—*LING v. See, generally, EXECUTORS, Vol. XXIV., pp. 766–770, Nos. 7966–8000.

2841. Trustee failing to perform duty.—Where a trustee fails in performing his duty, it is the office of a ct. of equity to interpose & guide him; where such ct. is bound in conscience to set aside the act of a trustee, it will at the same time decree the proper act to be done; not by referring the matter to his discretion, which is forfeited, but by directing him, as a mere instrument, to perform the thing decreed.—RICHARDSON v. CHAPMAN (1700), 7 Bro. Parl. Cas. 318; 3 E. R. 206, H. L.

2842. No misconduct on part of trustees.—A. having an estate in fee of £8,000 a year, & being tenant for life without impeachment of waste of other estate of £5,000 a year with the reversion in fee after an estate in tail male in B. his only son by a former marriage, became indebted by mtge. annuities, & otherwise, to the amount of near £100,000. A. & B. joined in conveying both estates to trustees, upon trust by sale or mtge., sale of timber, or by rents & profits, to pay debts, & to apply so much of the rents & profits of what should remain unsold as should seem meet to them, as a sinking fund, & to pay the residue to A. & to settle the remaining trust estates, subject to an annuity of £1,000 to B. for the joint lives of him & A., upon A. for life without impeachment of waste, with power to lease for twenty-one years only; remainder to trustees to reserve, etc., remainder, subject to a jointure to the wife of A. & portions for children by her, to the joint appointment of A. & B.; in default thereof to the appointment of B. surviving; in default thereof to B. in tail male; remainder to the other sons of A. in tail male; remainder to B. in tail; remainder to the daughters of A. in tail, with cross-remainders; remainder to B. in fee; with powers of leasing & full powers of management in the trustees, & a provision for the appointment of new trustees, as vacancies should happen. The trustees raised £50,000 by mtge. of the settled estate, which they applied to the debts; & they paid £2,500 a year to A. & £1,000 a year to B. from the date of the settlement. Upon the bill of A. to set aside the deed, except the trust for the debts, upon a general charge of fraud, misapprehension, & misrepresentation, or to control the management of the trust, & for an account against the trustees:—Held: the ct. would not interfere with the trustees, there being no misbehaviour; & the payment of the annuity to B. was good.—*MYDDLETON v. 2843. Trustee failing to execute power.—Where a power is by will given to a trustee, which he neglects to execute, the execution of the trust devolves upon the ct.; but if, in the events which happen, the intended trustee dies before the time arrives for the execution of the trust, & the trust therefore fails, testator is to be considered as having so far died intestate.—*RAY v. 2846.—Legitimacy of child.—(1) The ct. will not refuse to entertain a suit for the execution of the trusts of a settlement, where the settled fund actually exists, merely on the ground that the settled fund is so small as to be of no importance to the cestui que trust, & that the settlement was really made to raise a different question [the legitimacy of a child], which the ct. would not have directly determined, by a side wind. Nor will the ct. allow such a question to be evaded by a counter settlement.

(2) Semble : the ct. would not entertain such a suit at the instance of a stranger, not if it appeared to have been instituted with a malicious motive.—GURNEY v. GURNEY (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 413; 2 New Rep. 106; 32 L. J. Ch. 456; 8 L. T. 380; 9 Jur. N. S. 514; 11 W. R. 659; 71 E. R. 180.

It is a power which has been continually exercised by the ct., & results almost necessarily from the jurisdiction which the ct. exercises over trustees. In the exercise of that jurisdiction the ct. may in general order the trustees to deal with the trust property in whatever mode it may consider to be for the benefit of cestuis que trust who are infants, or under disabilities; & to say that cestuis que trust can, except under very special circumstances, undo what the ct. has ordered to be done, would be to cut away the root of the jurisdiction (TURNER L.J.).—*BROOKE v. In this last case, I observe, it was admitted, that if there had not been the clause in the articles, that the purchase should be made with the consent of the husband & wife, it must have been taken as land: now such clause makes no manner of difference; for, upon a convenient purchase being proposed, the ct. would have taken on themselves to judge thereof; &, without some reasonable objection made, would have ordered the money to be laid out in it, so that such clause seems to have been immaterial in the marriage articles, & as if omitted (JACKYLL, M.R.).—*LECHMERE v. A. was the incumbent, so that on his death no sale could be made until the vacancy was filled up:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to authorise a sale in the lifetime of A. on the ground that it would be beneficial to the parties.—*JOHNSTONE v. 2863. ——Part of the property of testator consisted of a cotton mill which he directed his trustees not to sell, nor to work themselves, but to let. The will also contained a direction to the trustees not to lend any of the personal estate on mtg., & prescribed certain strict modes of investment.

The cotton mill being out of repair could not be let as it then stood; the trustees, therefore, entered into a provisional agreement with a firm of cotton spinners by which the latter agreed to take a lease of the mill for twenty-one years, & to spend large sums of money in machinery & repairs, provided the trustees advanced to them, on the security of the machinery, rather more than half the sum required for such machinery & repairs, & also a considerable sum in the erection of steam boilers, & other landlords' fixtures.

Under the terms of the will the trustees could not comply with such proposals; but, upon it being clearly proved that such an arrangement would be highly beneficial to the trust estate, & was one which it was not unusual for lessors in similar cases to enter into, the ct. sanctioned the agreement, & directed the costs of all parties to the application to come out of testator's residuary personal estate.—Re LEE'S TRUSTS (1875), 32 L. 2873. Service out of jurisdiction—When leave given—Property must be actually situate within jurisdiction—When leave asked for.]—(1) In order to bring a case within R. S. C., Ord. XI., r. 1 (d), which provides for service out of the jurisdiction of the writ in an action for the execution of the trusts of a written instrument of which the person to be served is a trustee, there must be, at the time when leave to effect such service is asked for, property subject to the trusts of the instrument actually situate within the jurisdiction, & not merely property which ought to be, or, if the trusts were duly executed, would be, so situate.

(2) On an application to set aside service in such an action on the ground that when leave to serve out of the jurisdiction was obtained there was no property within the jurisdiction. Seem: the service may possibly be held good if it be shown that property has subsequently come within the jurisdiction.—*WINTER v. SUB-SECT. 9.—WHAT ORDERS MADE.

A. Account.

2882. From what time ordered—Discretion of court—Account of rents & profits paid to person not entitled.]—Trustees entered into possession of rent & profits, & paid them over under a trust deed to a married woman to her separate use; it afterwards appeared that she was not entitled to receive them, but that upon the true construction of a will they ought to have gone to another person. That person filed a bill & a decree was made in his favour, but an account of the rents & profits was only ordered from the date of the filing of the bill:—Held: whether an account should be directed from the filing of the bill, or from an anterior time, is a matter of discretion, & in this case the discretion had been rightly exercised.—*VERNON v. The ct., in ordering an account, directed an inquiry as to deft.'s dealings with the trust fund, & if on taking the accounts it should appear that they had been guilty of wilful neglect or default in the discharge of their duty, they should be charged, in taking the accounts, with such wilful neglect or default.—NASH v. HOWELL (1869), 21 L. T. 743.

2885. Form of decree—Account of moneys received by infant trustee.]—By articles of settlement on the marriage of Mr. & Mrs. G. in 1874, it was agreed that the wife's property should be vested in a trustee or trustees to be approved of by G. & his wife, upon the usual trusts of a marriage settlement with power to purchase a leasehold house. In 1875, G. & wife purchased a leasehold house which was assigned to A. who agreed to hold it on the trusts of the articles. In 1883, a settlement was executed by which after reciting that the property consisted of the house, & certain other particulars, G. & wife appointed R. to be trustee and assigned to him part of the property, & agreed that the rest should be transferred to him. In Feb. 1884, A. assigned the leasehold to R. who did not attain twenty-one until Nov. 1884. One of the children of the marriage took out in 1885 an originating summons against A. & R. to have their accounts taken:—Held: the proper course was to direct an account in the usual form against A., with an inquiry whether all or any & what part of the trust property had come to the hands of R. & what had been his dealings & transactions in respect of the same, & as to the dates of & circumstances attending such receipts, dealings, & transactions.—*Re GARNES, GARNES v. debito justitie, to have it transferred into ct., does not apply to a case where there are discretionary trusts still to be performed.

(2) Under the statutory power to vary securities, a stock mtge. is an improper investment. Where part of a residuary estate has been invested on an improper security, & deft. has an interest therein, the ct., on being satisfied that there is no existing claim on the estate, sometimes confines the amount to be paid into ct. to the share of plff.

An intestate died in 1820, leaving a widow & two infant children. The widow administered, & in 1840 executed a deed which stated that the assets actually realised amounted to £4,000, of which she had appropriated to herself £700, & that the remainder had been invested on mtges., which were specified. In her answer to a bill filed by one of the children in 1843, she stated that this was wholly erroneous, that the residue amounted to £1,600 only, & that plff. had received £390 on account of her one-third. The answer stated that the debts had been paid, but the statements were most unsatisfactory. A sum of £700 appeared to have been lent on an improper security. The ct. on motion, ordered the whole £700 to be brought into ct.—SCORE v. FORD (1844), 7 Beav. 333; 49 E. R. 1093.

2891. —.—.]—A party having a contingent interest in a trust fund may, in a proper case, have it brought into ct. for his protection; but he must show some sufficient ground for it.

Motion to pay trust fund into ct. refused, on the ground that there was no allegation of danger, & that the fund might, if necessary, be sufficiently protected by a distringas.—ROSS v. ROSS (1849), 12 Beav. 89; 50 E. R. 994.

2896. Party in possession without prima facie right.—When a ct. of equity traces out trust money in the hands of a person who has not prima facie a right to hold it, that money must be paid into ct.

The foreign agent of a mercantile house in London, dealing in African produce, was appointed exor. of A., a merchant at Sierra Leone, with directions to sell testator's property, & invest the proceeds in the Bank of England. The agent accordingly wrote to his principals in London, advising them of consignments which he should make to them of some of A.'s property, & directing them to place the proceeds to his credit as exor. of A. The consignments were made, & the merchants placed the proceeds to a separate account, namely, that of A.'s estate:—Held: the goods were specifically & not generally consigned, & the produce of the consignments was trust money in the hands of the merchants, which, upon a motion in a suit filed against them by the representative of A. for an account, they were bound to pay into ct.—LEIGH v. MACAULAY (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 260; 4 L. J. Ex. Eq. 37; 160 E. R. 106.

2897. Denial by trustee of plaintiff's right.—When plff. claims to be entitled, in a particular character, to a fund in the hands of a trustee, & the trustee, by his answer, says he does not know whether plff. fills that character or not, plff. cannot have the fund brought into ct. in the suit.—*DUBLESS v. 2900. Benefit of infants.—What has been the conduct of the father in this case . . . He is separated from his wife, not apparently from any misconduct or imputation of misconduct, but in consequence of his pecuniary difficulties. He applied to a solr., by whom he is told, that the only mode in which the property can be protected is by the institution of a suit in the ct.

It is said that this protection would have been given to the infants, either by filing a claim, or by the trustees being required to pay the fund into ct. under Trustee Relief Act. It is true, that under the particular circumstances of the case, as they are suggested in the bill, either of these processes might have afforded adequate protection; but it is in the power of the ct., at the hearing of the cause, to judge of this question (TURNER, V.-C.).—*SMALLWOOD v. 2902. Property must be in actual possession.]—

An originating summons was taken out under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 55, by one of the residuary legatees under the will of testator, against the exors. & trustees thereof, asking that certain questions or matters arising in the administration of the estate of testator might be determined & relief given in respect thereof.

The summons asked that a sum of stock standing in the names of the trustees might be transferred into ct.; that a mtge. deed for securing the payment of a sum forming part of testator's estate might be deposited in ct.; that the trustees might be ordered to pay into ct. a sum forming part of the estate & improperly used by them in their respective businesses; for proper accounts; a declaration of the rights & interests of the persons beneficially entitled; that so far as might be necessary for the purposes aforesaid the estate might be administered by the ct.; & that the trustees might be ordered to pay the costs. It was objected that the case ought to have been commenced by a writ in an action, inasmuch as trustees could not properly be charged with wilful default by an originating summons:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction, upon an originating summons, to order payment into ct. of moneys which had been received by trustees & improperly applied by them; & therefore, to grant the relief asked for in the present case.—Re CHAPMAN, FARDELL v. In answer to an interlocutory motion that deft. should pay into ct. money which arose from the sale of shares, of which he had been a trustee for pltf., but which he alleged though pltf. denied it, that pltf. had given to him, deft. admitted that he had received the proceeds of sale, & had transferred the shares to the purchasers. But he deposed: "Before any question was raised as to the transfers I in good faith paid away & disposed of all the purchase-money in the belief that I was entitled thereto, & no part thereof is now in my hands, & I have no power over the shares or any of them".—Held: it was not shown that the purchase-money was not under deft.'s control, & he must be ordered to pay the amount into ct.—Re BENSON, ELLITSON v. At that date J. was in partnership with B. in the business of solrs. The trust fund was, as H. alleged, paid by J. to & was received by J. & B.'s firm, & was paid into their banking account. In Dec. 1890 the partnership between J. & B. was dissolved by mutual consent, it being arranged that all debts due to & owing by that firm would be received & paid by B. Application having been made by H. to B. to produce a security showing the proper investment of the trust fund, but without any satisfactory result, an action was brought by H. against J. & B. claiming that the trust fund should be paid into ct.; & consequential relief. There being an admission in S.'s statement of defence & answer to interrogatories to the effect that the trust fund had been paid by J. into the banking account of the firm, thereby making the firm responsible for it, the judge made the usual order at chambers upon B. to pay the trust fund into ct. A motion having subsequently been made before the judge in ct. to discharge that order, upon the ground that the admission was inserted by mistake & was not in accordance with the fact, the judge gave B. leave to amend his statement of defence & to put in a further answer to the interrogatories. Part IV.—Duties of Trustees.

SECT. 1. IN GENERAL.

2944. —[—] While remaining trustee.—(1) Trustees & exors. who, for upwards of a year after their testator's death, allowed a considerable portion of the assets to lie unproductive in the hands of a banker who failed, were, under the circumstances, charged with the loss.

(2) A man may renounce a trust or he may refuse to undertake it, but having once accepted it, . . . he must discharge its duties, so long as his character of trustee subsists (LORD BROUGHAM, C.)—MOYLE v. MOYLE (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 710; 39 E. R. 565, L. C.

2947 ii. —[—]—This ct. looks upon the equitable right as if it were the estate: & if the person who has the legal title thinks proper to desert his duty, & abandon the party whom it was his business to protect, this ct. will not only compel him to perform his duty, but in the meantime will give to the cestui que trust all the benefit he would have regularly obtained if his trustee had acted properly.—MALONE v. GERAGHTY (1843), 5 I. Eq. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 263; 2 Con. & Law. 235; affd. (1847), 1 H. L. Cas. 81.—IR.

2947 iii. —[—]—A person who has accepted property as a trustee & held it as such is not at liberty to dispute the title of his cestui que trust, though that title be doubtful.—NELIGAN v. ROOPE (1879), 7 I. R. Eq. 332.—IR.

accepting trust with discretionary power.]—A person, before he accepts a trusteeship, to which a discretionary power is annexed, is bound to disclose any circumstances in his situation, which give him a bias or an interest against the due exercise of that discretionary power.

If he accepts the trusteeship, without disclosing such circumstances in his situation, he cannot afterwards exercise the discretionary authority for his own benefit.—PEYTON v. ROBINSON (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 191.

2949. Duty to convey—To cestui que trust.]

Where a trust estate descended to one who refused to execute a conveyance to the cestui que trust, after it had been approved by his solr., unless he were paid a sum of money, the ct. ordered the conveyance, with costs against deft.—WATTS v. TURNER (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 634; 39 E. R. 244.

The party, who had the more legal estate & no beneficial interest, refused to convey it to the equitable trustee, unless the persons interested as cestuis que trust under the deed of even date were made parties to the conveyance. He was not justified in that refusal, but as he had acted bonâ fide under the advice of a conveyancer of character, the ct. made the decree against him, without costs.—*ANGIER v. 2955. Duty to administer trust strictly—Whether deviation permitted—In interests of cestuis que trust—Necessity to satisfy court that deviation beneficial.]—A trustee is not in all cases, to be made liable upon the mere ground of having deviated from the strict letter of his trust; for such deviation may be necessary or beneficial to the interests of the cestuis que trust; but when a trustee ventures to deviate from the letter of his trust, he does so under the obligation & at the peril of afterwards satisfying the ct. that the deviation was necessary or beneficial.—HARRISON v. CARRUTHERS, [1896] A. C. 659, H. L.

2959. Duty of trustee to devise estate—To prevent vesting in lunatic or person out of jurisdiction.]

Semble: a trustee can, & it may often be his duty to devise a trust estate to prevent the legal estate from vesting in a lunatic or a person out of the jurisdiction or in any other person who ought not to be a trustee.—WILSON v. BENNETT (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 475; 21 L. J. Ch. 741; 19 L. T. O. S. 243; 16 Jur. 966; 64 E. R. 1205.

2960. Duty where clear legal title shown.]

2961. Duty to explain rights to cestuis que trust.]

—Testator, by his will, gave the residue of his property to three trustees, whom he appointed exors., upon trust to sell & invest same & to pay the income thereof to his widow for life, & after her decease, to his children, who were all infants at the time of his death. The eldest child attained twenty-one in 1839, & the youngest in 1846. The three exors. proved the will, but one of them almost exclusively acted. The money which was the proceeds of the estate was suffered by two of the exors. to remain in the hands of the third, who ultimately became insolvent. On the youngest child attaining twenty-one, he, on behalf of himself & his brothers & sisters, attempted to obtain payment from the acting exor., & in 1848 wrote to him a letter consenting to receive payment of the amount then admitted to be due by annual instalments. In 1849, & shortly before the insolvency of the acting trustee, a bill was filed by all the children against the three trustees for the purpose of making them each responsible:—Held: inasmuch as it was the duty of the three trustees to have explained to their cestuis que trust what their rights were, & as they had not done so, there was nothing in the conduct of the children to deprive them of their remedy against the three trustees, who were accordingly declared to be jointly & severally liable to make good the deficiency.—BURROWS v. WALLS (1855), 5 De G. M. & G. 233; 3 Eq. Rep. 960; 25 L. T. O. S. 18; 3 W. R. 327; 43 E. R. 859, L. C.

2962. Duty to give name to action on behalf of cestui que trust—Although of opinion that action unreasonable.]—A trustee cannot, upon receiving a proper indemnity, refuse the use of his name to his cestui que trust, for the purpose of prosecuting an appeal in the House of Lords, on the ground that he thinks such appeal unreasonable, & that he is the solr. of the party in whose favour the decree appealed from was made.—PAKINGTON v. BENBOW (1857), 29 L. T. O. S. 194; 5 W. R. 670.

2965. Duty not to oppose wishes of testator—With regard to cestuis que trust.]—Testator by his will desired his trustee to give up his farm to his nephew, pltf., if the landlord would accept him as tenant; & in that case he bequeathed to him the farming stock. He also gave some real property to pltf., & gave legacies & annuities to pltf.'s father, mother, & sisters, & other persons, including the trustees. One of the trustees of the will was steward to the landlord. There were hardly any assets to pay the legacies & annuities if pltf. took the farming stock, upon which the trustees represented the case to the landlord, who left it to their decision whether pltf. should be accepted as tenant. They accordingly refused to let him be accepted, unless he executed a deed making over the devised real estate to pay the legacies & annuities:—Held: it was a breach of trust on the part of the trustees to endeavour to induce the landlord to refuse his consent to pltf. having the tenancy, which testator had by his will expressed his wish for him to have; & the deed having been obtained by means of that breach of trust, must be set aside.—*ELLIS v. 2966. Duty to protect estate.]—An estate was sold under the ct., the auctioneer & surveyor being appointed in chambers. The taxing master disallowed the scale charges, & eventually the trustees of the estate took out a summons to review the taxation, seeking to have the scale charges allowed against the estate. The solrs. did not appear:—Held: the application being made by the trustees, whose duty it was to protect the estate not to seek to charge it, made the application too objectionable to be entertained.—WOOD v. CALVERT (1886), 55 L. T. 53; 34 W. R. 732.

SUB-SECT. 1.—POSSESSION.

2976. Trustees must obtain possession of property.]—Trustees charged with a loss occasioned by their negligence, though without any corrupt motive. The property would not have been in a situation to sustain that loss, if it had not been for their negligence.

If they had taken possession of the property, it would not have been in his possession (GRANT, M.R.).—CAFFEY v. DABBY (1801), 6 Ves. 488; 31 E. R. 1159.

2978. ———.]—By a marriage settlement, a debt due from A. was assigned to A. & B., upon trust, "with all convenient speed," to get in & invest in Consols. For two & a half years B. took no steps to get in the money, & A. then became bkpt.

Held: B. was responsible for the loss.—GROVE v. PRICE (1858), 26 Beav. 103; 53 E. R. 836.

2979. ———. Person having possession unable to pay.—No proof of bankruptcy.]—A marriage settlement made in 1811, recited that the husband was entitled to 20,000 rupees secured by a note of the East India co.; & 10,000 rupees, part thereof, were thereby assigned, with certain property of the wife, to the trustees of the settlement, upon trust, for the husband & wife for their lives, with remainder for the children of the marriage. One of the trustees died six weeks after the settlement was made. The husband died in 1819 & the wife in 1822. The trustees did not, nor did the survivor, take any step during the lifetime of the husband to recover the 10,000 rupees. After they had attained their ages of twenty-one years, the children filed a bill against the surviving trustee & the representatives of deceased trustee, for an account of the trust funds, charging them with the 10,000 rupees. Under a reference to the master, to inquire whether debt, might, due by diligence, have received or got in the 10,000 sicca rupees, debt, produced evidence showing it to have been the common belief of persons who knew the husband, that he was not possessed of any such property, but no proof was given that the husband was insolvent; & the ct. charged the surviving trustee with the fund, & interest from the death of the wife, & directed a reference to inquire the value of the 10,000 rupees at the time of the settlement. The representative of the trustee who died six weeks after the making of the settlement was not a necessary party, such trustee not having possessed any part of the trust funds, & not being chargeable with the default.—SIMES v. EYRE (1847), 6 Hare, 137; 67 E. R. 1113.

2980. ———. Power to leave outstanding with consent of beneficiary.—Consent not retrospective.]

—By a marriage settlement in 1834 the husband gave a bond for £2,000 to the trustees, to be paid within six months of the marriage; to be left outstanding with the consent in writing of the wife & husband; & to be called in with the like consent. Another debt of £4,000 was included in the settlement. The £2,000 was never got in. The husband became bkpt. in 1836; the trustee proved for the debt, but afterwards joined in a supersedeas, on the bkpt. guaranteeing to his creditors 16s. 6d. in the pound. The other creditors were so paid; the trustees never took their compensation. In 1838 the wife & husband gave a written consent that the debt should remain out on the husband's bond. No other consent was ever given. The husband was again bkpt. in 1847. In 1834 the trustees, had at the instance of the husband, having no power to invest in the purchase of lands, purchased copyhold land & buildings with part of the £4,000. The husband erected new & valuable buildings on the land at his own expense, increasing its value far more than £2,000. There was no evidence to connect this outlay with the discharge of the bond debt:—Held: the trustees were liable for not getting in the money before 1836 if there was no consent; (2) the wife's consent in 1838 was not retrospective.

2981. ———. Recital of transfer in marriage settlement.—Transfer not effected.]—A marriage settlement of 1807, executed by all parties, contained a recital of the transfer of a sum of stock into the name of trustees. The stock never was transferred. The trustees died, one in 1827, the other in 1840. The person who ought to have transferred the stock became bkpt. in 1848, & died in 1851, only a fourth part dividend being got in under his bkpcy. — Held: a bill filed in 1855 by a child of the marriage, who had attained twenty-one years in 1839, was not too late; & the estates of the two trustees were declared to be jointly & severally liable.—STORY v. GAPE (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 706.

2982. ———. Unless injurious to beneficiaries.—Discretion of trustee.]—Now, the next question is, was there improper neglect? Was there neglect in realising the trust fund? I have read the evidence of [the witnesses] & they all satisfy me of one thing that it would have been impossible to have drawn out & realised the whole of this fund without creating the immediate bkpcy. of W. It clearly, therefore, was not his duty to do that, because by doing that he would have ruined W., who was one of the objects of the trust, & would have ruined & done great injury to W.'s children, who were also objects of the trust. No man can say he did not exercise a sound discretion in not attempting to draw out the whole of the fund, when drawing it out, or attempting to draw it out, would have been attended with consequences such as I have stated (LORD LYNDHURST, C.).—WARD v. 2986. — Money left with banker.—Absence of security.—Trustee for children under a marriage settlement, who was to take the best security, takes personal security, & lodges the money in the hands of a banker without taking bond; for money of his own he took bond: The banker fails. This is gross negligence in trustee & shall make him liable, & it is no excuse to say he could get no good mortgage security; for then he should have placed it on public security.—ANON. (1774), Loft, 493; 98 E. R. 764.

2987. — Trustee leaving country after depositing.—Breach of trust by allowing moneys appropriated by trustee for a particular purpose, to remain in hands of bankers in India after trustee had quitted that country. BROWN v. CLARK (1837), 1 Jur. 838, L. C.

2988. — Retiring trustee.—Transfer of property to trustee incompletely appointed.—A retiring trustee transferred stock into the name of a proposed new trustee, whose appointment was, however, never completed. The latter subsequently sold out the stock, & allowed the cestui que trust to misapply the proceeds:—Held: the retiring trustee was chargeable with a breach of trust in transferring the stock.—PEARCE v. PEARCE (1850), 22 Beav. 248; 25 L. J. Ch. 893; 28 L. T. O. S. 34; 2 Jur. N. S. 843; 52 E. R. 1103.

2989. — Trustee removed by court.—Failure to pay fund to new trustees within reasonable time.—A trustee was removed by decree of the ct., & ordered to pay the balance of the trust fund in his hands to the new trustees appointed by such decree; but no time was fixed by the decree for the payment. The retiring trustee, having omitted for some weeks to make the payment ordered, a correspondence took place between his solr. & the solrs. of the new trustees, who in their last letter fixed a day by which they said the payment must be made. Shortly before the day so fixed, the bank in which the trust balance had been deposited by the retiring trustee failed:—Held: the retiring trustee was personally liable to make good the fund to the trust estate.—LUNHAM v. BLUNDELL (1857), 27 L. J. Ch. 179; 4 Jur. N. S. 3; 6 W. R. 49.

2990. — Information of intended breach given to cestui que trust.—It is the duty of a trustee to observe the trust & to preserve the property for the benefit of those entitled in remainder, & he cannot be permitted to escape from the liability incident to that duty simply by informing his cestui que trust that he has committed, or intends to commit, a breach of it.—LIFE ASSOCN. The estate was sold, but the purchaser requiring G.'s confirmation, his share was deposited in the names of E. & P. in the bank on a declaration of trust. On the confirmation arriving, E. was repeatedly applied to for more than four months but neglected to hand the fund over, alleging a difficulty in making out the account; the bank failed, & the money was lost:—Held: E. was liable to restore the money with interest & pay the costs, P. being always ready to hand over.—GOUGH v. ETTY (1860), 20 L. T. 358.

2992. — Fraud of trustee's solicitor.—(1) Scmble: a trustee is liable for the loss of a trust fund caused by his solr. having committed a fraud on the occasion of the investment of the fund on mtgc.

(2) Upon the occasion of the investment of a trust fund on mtgc., the trustee employed the same solr. as the mtgor. Subsequently he had reason to suspect the sufficiency of the security, but took no steps to inquire into the matter. It afterwards turned out that the solr. had practised a fraud on the trustee, & that the security was insufficient:—Held: the trustee was liable for the loss occasioned to the trust estate.—SUTTON v. 2993. — Assignment of insurance policy to sole new trustee.—By a marriage settlement the husband assigned a policy of assurance on his life to the two trustees of the settlement, & covenanted to pay the premiums. One trustee disclaimed; & the other, by assigning the policy to a single new trustee, enabled the husband to mortgage & dispose of the policy & a bonus thereon:—Held: such breach of trust being an act of commission & not of omission only, the trustee so assigning to the new trustee was liable to pay to the trust estate the money actually received for the policy.—KINGDON v. But to this obligation there must be reasonable limits & where the deeds have to be frequently referred to, e.g. for the purpose of realising the trust estate, it is proper for them to be in the custody of the solr. to the trustees.

(2) In the case of bonds & certificates payable to bearer the trustees alone are responsible for their safe custody, & are not justified in leaving them under the control of a solr. or any other agent, but must deposit them in some safe place where they cannot be got at without the consent of the whole body of the trustees.—*FIELD v. 3005. Duty of trustees to take legal proceedings—To obtain money due on covenant in marriage settlement—Money left outstanding with consent of cestuis que trust.—Application by cestuis que trust to call in money.]—Where by the terms of a marriage settlement a trustee was to compel payment of a sum of money due on covenant, but by consent of the cestui que trusts the money was left outstanding on that security. Upon their subsequent application to have the money called in & invested:—Held: the trustee was bound, if necessary, to enforce payment by an action on the covenant, without requiring any indemnity from the cestuis que trust; & in default of so doing he was compelled to pay the costs of a suit brought against him to enforce the execution of the covenant.—KIRBY v. MASH (1839), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 295; 8 L. J. Ex. Eq. 33; 3 Jur. 221; 160 E. R. 714.

was of ability during these seven years to have paid £4,200 in part performance of the covenant. No exceptions were taken to the report. On the hearing of the cause on further directions:—Held: the trustee was liable to pay £4,200, & had the report been excepted to, it would have been confirmed.—MITTAND v. BATEMAN (1844), 13 L. J. By a marriage settlement it was covenanted & agreed, that £5,000 Consols, part of the wife's property, should be transferred to trustees, upon certain trusts for the husband, wife, & children. At the time of the settlement, a sum of £1,946 was standing in the name of the wife; but the trustees took no steps to enforce a transfer, & it was sold out & misapplied by the husband:—Held: the trustees were personally responsible for the loss.

Where trustees are sought to be charged with a breach of trust by reason of their omission, the ct. takes care to see, before the trustee is charged, that it was within his power to perform the act which it was intended he should do (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—*FENWICK v. 3009. — — — — ——A marriage settlement, executed in 1816, contained covenants by the husband to pay £3,000 within three years to the trustee, or, in default, to secure this sum by mtge. of certain real estate. This sum was to be held on trust for husband & wife successively for life, with remainder to their issue. No steps were taken by the trustee to enforce the covenants, & in 1846 he acted as solr. on a sale by the husband of the real estate bound by the covenant. In 1848 the trustee died. His extrim. & devisees had notice of the breach of trust. In 1852 the husband became bkpt. The extrix. of the trustee refused to prove for the trust sum under the bkpcy., though requested so to do by the bkpt. In 1865 new trustees of the settlement were appointed by the ct., but their claim against the bkpt.'s estate was rejected as barred by lapse of time.

The husband died in 1866. Twenty years after the death of the trustee the bkpt.'s widow & children filed a bill against the representatives of the trustee to make his assets liable for the loss of the trust fund:—Held: the omission of the trustee to enforce the covenants was a clear breach of trust, & lapse of time was no bar to the rights of the cestuis que trust against his assets, as his representatives had, upon his death, notice of the breach of trust.—*WOODHOUSE v. Not to make such deduction is a breach of trust, & the trustee is liable to refund to the estate the sum thus overpaid; but Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8, bars all claims against him beyond six years, except in the case of an annuity given to himself.—*Re SHARP, RICKETT v. In this case where no culpable acts were expressly charged against them by the bill but the circumstances of the case disclosed to the ct. that they had neglected their duty by remaining passive & supine where the interest of the cestui que trust was invaded, & did not appear to have been attempted to be protected by them the ct. reprobated their want of attention & activity as a gross breach of duty, & refused to give them, although necessarily made nominal defts. to the bill, their costs of suit.

The settlor having died in 1870, the first tenant for life being in possession, & the income being insufficient, after keeping down charges & incumbrances, to pay for repairs, for the cost of new buildings, & generally for improvement of the property, out of capital, the ct. allowed payments in draining upon which the tenants paid 5 per cent., & in erecting new buildings.

These trustees, whose duty it was to act on behalf of the estates as prudent owners would have acted, have acted conformably to their duty, & they are entitled to be recouped their expenditure out of the capital moneys (BACON, V.C.).—Re LESLIE'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1876), 2 Ch. 3033. ———.]—Trustees are bound to conduct the business of their trust in the same way in which an ordinary prudent man of business would conduct his own.

Trustees advanced money on the security of freehold land, which had lately been purchased by the mtgor. They did not have any fresh valuation made for the purposes of the mtge., but accepted the valuation put upon it at the sale. They were, however, both men of business, & made a personal inspection of the property, & otherwise appeared to have satisfied themselves that the security was sufficient.

The money advanced exceeded by a comparatively small amount two-thirds of the amount of the valuation of the property at the sale. The mtge. was made in 1870. Interest was regularly paid down to 1877, since when it had been in arrear, & owing to the agricultural depression, the mtgor. had become bkpt., & the property so depreciated in value that the mtge. debt & interest could not be raised.

The cestui que trust commenced this action against the surviving trustee, & the exors. of the deceased trustee, for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that they were liable to make good the loss, on the ground that the lending without a separate valuation, & to more than two-thirds of the value, were breaches of trust:—Held: the trustees had acted to the best of their ability, & in no way otherwise than a prudent man would have acted in the conduct of his own affairs, & the mere fact of not having the property revalued would not make them liable.—Re GODFREY, GODFREY v. FAULKNER (1883), 23 Ch. D. 483; 52 L. J. (Ch. 821; 48 L. T. 853; 47 J. P. 676; 32 W. R. 23.

In so doing he acted upon the advice of his solr. & upon a favourable report & valuation made by a respectable firm of architects & surveyors. A bank of good standing moreover consented to postpone a charge of theirs to his mtge. The mtgors. failed three years afterwards, whereby this lease of that part of the property whereon was most of the clay & shale necessary for the carrying on of the business became forfeited. The remainder of the property proved unsaleable & rapidly went to ruin. An action was subsequently brought by the cestuis que trust to make the trustee liable for the loss sustained by them, & it appeared that the report & valuation proceeded ex facie in some respects upon faulty principles:—Held: applying the rule in Re Godfrey, Godfrey v. Faulkner, No. 3033, ante, that the trustee had acted as a prudent man would have acted in dealing with his own property & was therefore not liable.—Re PEARSON, OXLEY v. SCARTH (1884), 51 L. 3036. ———.]—A trustee is bound to act in the execution of his trust as a prudent man would in dealing with his own property.—SMETHURST v. HASTINGS (1885), 30 Ch. D. 490; 55 L. J. Ch. 173; 52 L. T. 567; 33 W. R. 496; 1 T. L. R. 335.

Annotation:—Refd. Mala v. Browne, [1895] 2 Ch. 69.

3037. ———.]—A trustee must, in order to escape liability for a loss of the trust property, show that in connection with the transaction in which the loss occurred he acted, not only in the ordinary mode of business, but also in the mode in which a prudent man of business would act in such a transaction.

B., one of the trustees of a marriage settlement, was employed by his acting co-trustee to make a change of investment of part of the trust property; but although he sent to his acting co-trustee contract notes for the new investments, the latter were never completed, & the moneys were misappropriated by a third party. B.'s co-trustees made no inquiries at all for the securities to which the contract notes related for over eighteen months, & made no efficient inquiries until three years after the transaction had taken place; & when the loss was discovered B. had shortly before become bkpt., having up to within a few months of that time been in good credit:—Held: B.'s co-trustees were liable for the loss, having been guilty of negligence in not prosecuting early inquiries, which would have resulted in information upon which they might have recovered the trust moneys from B.—BULLOCK v. BULLOCK (1886), 56 L. J. Ch. 221; 55 L. T. 703; 3 T. L. R. 131.

3038. ———.]—(1) Trustees invested trust money on the security of a 5 per cent. mtge. of a freehold brickfield, with buildings, machinery & plant affixed to the soil, being advised by competent valuers that the property was a good security for the amount invested. The valuers' report was in fact based upon a valuation of more than double the amount invested & upon the supposition that the concern was going, but the report did not state this, nor distinguish between the value of the land & that of the buildings, machinery, etc. The trustees acted bona fide but acted upon the report without making any further inquiries. The security having failed:—Held: the trustees had not acted with ordinary prudence, & were liable to make good the money, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the last payment; & the tenant for life was not liable to return to the trustees 1 per cent., which was claimed on the ground that the higher interest was due to its being a hazardous security.

(2) I think it is quite clear that a trustee is entitled to rely upon skilled persons in matters in which he cannot be expected to be experienced (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

(3) The ordinary course of business does not justify the employment of a valuator for any other purpose than obtaining the data necessary in order to enable the trustees to judge of the sufficiency of the security offered. They are not in safety to rely upon his bare assurance that the security is sufficient, in the absence of detailed information which would enable them to form, & without forming, an opinion for themselves (LORD WATSON).

(4) As a general rule the law requires of a trustee no higher degree of diligence in the execution of his office than a man of ordinary prudence would exercise in the management of his own private affairs. Yet he is not allowed the same discretion in investing the moneys of the trust as if he were a person sui juris dealing with his own estate. Business men of ordinary prudence may, & frequently do, select investments which are more or less of a speculative character; but it is the duty of a trustee to confine himself to the class of investments which are permitted by the trust, & likewise to avoid all investments of that class which are attended with hazard (LORD WATSON).

(2) It is not the usual course of business for purchasers of colonial or other inscribed stocks to attend personally at the bank & accept the transfer, though that course is recommended by a note on the common form of stock receipt issued to purchasers by the bank. A trustee will not, therefore, be held liable for the fraud of his co-trustee, acting as broker, because he did not so attend & accept such a transfer, though he would have discovered the fraud if he had done so.

(3) The mere fact that a trustee improperly accepted a share of commission from his co-trustee acting as broker, which he repaid to the trust fund before trial, does not make him a partner with his co-trustee, or liable to make good the loss occasioned by the fraud of the co-trustee committed in the transaction for which the commission was paid. - *SHEPHERD v. necessarily or peremptorily," insure the lives of the cestuis que vie & apply the insurance money in renewing, & out of the rents & profits raise sufficient money to renew so often as a renewal should be advisable, & he gave a power to mortgage for the same purpose:—Held: (1) the trustees were bound to renew, if they could do so on reasonable terms; (2) if the trustees refused, the ct. would exercise it; & (3) they were bound to raise the necessary funds in such a mode as would be most beneficial to all parties interested.

The trustees are not to sacrifice the tenants for life to the persons interested in remainder, but they are to exercise their discretion & act in such a manner as they consider most advantageous for keeping the estate in its present condition, for the benefit of all persons interested under the will (ROMILLY, M.R.).

(4) There is a clear distinction between a mere discretionary power in trustees & a trust which they are bound to execute. . . . The will contained no provisions for the management of testator's real estate. One of testator's sisters was married & had two infant children, & their only means of support was the half share of income given by the will. The other sister remained unmarried. The only real estate of testator was in Ireland, let in one hundred & fourteen holdings, for the most part at judicial rents fixed under Land Law (Ireland) Act, 1881 (c. 49). It was charged with the payment of annuities; but the net annual income after satisfying all outgoings amounted to about £571 3s. 8d. The annual income of testator's personal estate amounted only to about £38. Up to 1898 the trustees had found, after inquiries, that a sale of the real estate was impracticable; but in that year the surviving trustee obtained a report from an Irish land agent that it might with some difficulty be sold at a price which in Guaranteed Land Stock would produce a net annual income of about £200 available for division between the tenants for life, who urged him to postpone the sale. On a summons by the surviving trustee against the tenants for life & the husband & children of the married one, as defts., asking for liberty to postpone the sale of the Irish estate until order:—Held: a direction to trustees to sell

The trustees at the instance of the tenants for life abandoned their original intention of investing in the funds, & invested on mtge. so as to obtain an increased income, but it did not appear that the tenants for life approved of the particular securities which were taken & which proved insufficient. On the trustees being decreed to make good the loss:—Held: the tenants for life & their interests in the trust funds were liable to recoup to the trustees the amount ordered to be paid by them to the extent of the income received by the tenants for life respectively from the mtges.

I am not disposed to hold out any encouragement whatever to the notion that a trustee, in the absence of any power for that purpose, is entitled to lay out the trust fund upon mtge. . . . Assuming that an exor. or trustee, acting in the ordinary exercise of the discretion belonging to him in that character, could properly make such an investment of the trust fund without any power expressly given to him so to do, it is clear that, in making such an investment, it is his bounden duty to have regard to the rights & interests of all parties concerned, & if it appears that he has made the investment at the instance & for the benefit of one or more of cestuis que trust, without having regard to the interests of the others, & loss has resulted from the investment, that is a breach of trust (TURNER, L.J.).—*RABY v. made residuary legatee, & the exors., who were also trustees, having renounced probate, letters of administration of testator's estate were granted to M. M., with moneys which were part of testator's personal estate, purchased for £40,700 estates of which he took conveyances to himself in fee. One of these, the L. estate he devised by will to his eldest son L. absolutely subject to the payments, liabilities & demands of the original testator's will & in exoneration of his, M.'s, other estates, which he devised to his younger children. the loan, he conveyed to the trustees three houses, including his purchase from the trust, upon each of which there were prior incumbrances to an amount exceeding two-thirds of the estimated value as stated by the borrower. Besides these securities the trustees held the personal obligation of the borrower & his father-in-law; both of whom were engaged in trade. Some of the other beneficiaries remonstrated in 1874, & again in 1880; but the money was allowed to remain on these securities until 1884, when the borrower & his father-in-law became bkpts., & about £10,000 was lost to the trust. The trust deed contained (a) a clause empowering the trustees to lend out the proceeds & other funds of the trust on "such securities heritable or personal" as they might think proper; & (b) an immunity clause declaring that the trustees should not be liable for "omissions, errors, or neglect of management." The same law agent acted for the trustees & the borrower:—Held: the trustees had not acted with perfect impartiality between the beneficiaries, nor had they brought to the management the same care & diligence which a man of ordinary prudence would have exercised in his own concerns, in these circumstances neither the immunity clause nor the authority to lend on personal security were sufficient to protect them, & they were personally liable to make good the deficiency in the trust funds.—KNOX v. MACKINNON (1888), 13 App. Cas. 753, H. L.

3064. Mortgage of trust property—Duty of trustees to pay mortgagee—Extent of duty.]—W., being entitled in reversion to one-eighth of a sum of £8,000 bequeathed to trustees, assigned it by way of mtge. to G., with power to give receipts in the name of W. or otherwise, with a proviso for redemption. On the death of the tenant for life of the fund, J., to whom the mtge. had been transferred, claimed to receive from the trustees £1,000, the whole amount of the share, the sum due on the mtge. being only about £400. The trustees of the will, who had received notice of subsequent incumbrances, expressed themselves willing to pay to J. what was due on his mtge., but declined to pay over to him the whole share. J. took out an originating summons to compel payment:—Held: the trustees were not bound to pay over the whole share to J., & the summons must be dismissed.—*Re BELL, JEFFERY v. 3065. ———.]—A member of a land society mortgaged his share in the society to ptlf., another member of the same society, by a deed to which the powers conferred by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), Part IV., were incident. The mtgor. died intestate, & there was no legal personal representative of his estate. A sum of money having become due to the mtgor.'s estate from the society, ptlf. relying upon his power to give a receipt under s. 22 (1) of the Act, claimed to have the whole amount paid to him as mtgee. The trustees, however, not being furnished with an account & having reason to believe it questionable how much was due on the mtge. offered to pay ptlf. so much of the money as upon taking an account should be found due to him, but declined to pay him without such an account.

In an action by ptlf. to recover the money from the trustees, it was held that the trustees were entitled to act as they had done; & upon their undertaking to pay the money into court under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), the action was dismissed.—*HOCKEY v. 3067. Duty to account.—No difference between the implied contract of trustees, assignees, & exors., & of a receiver or agent; bound to account faithfully, at least when called upon, & not to suppress, conceal, or overcharge; liable therefore to interest, as a receiver.—HARDWICKE (EARL) v. WELLS (1883), 32 W. R. 26.

3069. — Trustee of infant's estate.—Lands were devised in trust, to maintain the infant till he came to twenty-three, & then to account, & pay him the rents, & reconvey the estate to him, but if he died before, to reconvey it to another; the infant is not entitled to an account till he come to twenty-three, for that is a condition precedent, but the surplus profits, if he die before, go to the heir of testator, not being devised over, but the infant & the heir, on suggestion of insolvency in the trustees, may bring a bill for an account.—TILLY v. SIMPSON (1729), Mos. 244, 25 E. R. 374.

3070. — [—]—Testator gave his residue, on trust to apply the income for the maintenance, education & support of his children until the youngest attained twenty-one. The children having been maintained, etc., the ct. declined directing an account of the application of the income during the minority of the youngest child, without a special case being made out.—HORA v. HORA (1863), 33 Beav. 88; 55 E. R. 300.

3071. — To cestuis que trust—& persons claiming under them.—Tenant in fee simple would have a right to say to the trustees, what estates have you sold? What debts have you paid? & those who claim under him have the same right.

Prima facie, the Marquis of Ormonde, & all claiming under him, have a right to ask what was the value of the estates, the amount of the moneys raised by sales & from the rents & of the debts & incumbrances paid, & of those remaining unpaid.

If there was a settlement of all the matters relating to this trust, the trustees would be entitled to the possession of the vouchers, as their discharge to the Marquis; but he would have a right to the inspection of them as his documents, to be used by him against all who might be making demands upon him, in relation to these debts (LORD ELDON, C.).—*CLARKE v. Exceptions to such answer were allowed, & the ct. refused to let them stand over till the hearing, on the ground that plffs. were entitled, before going to the expense of establishing their case, to know whether there would be assets to satisfy their claim in case of success.—*BROOKES v. PART IV. SECT. 9.

3067 i. Duty to account.—Where one of two co-trustees has died, the beneficiaries are entitled to accounts against the surviving trustee only, unless there has been some misapplication of the trust estate, in which case accounts against the exors. of deceased trustee may be ordered.—*SMITH v. trust estate, to demand that they should be guaranteed against the expense of complying with the requisition; & this rule is not affected by the circumstance that one of the trustees happens to be a solr.—Re Bosworth, Martin v. Lamb (1889), 58 L. J. Ch. 432.

3075. — Duty to keep accounts.]—If a testator appoints a person to discharge the duties of an exor., inasmuch as he is sworn to discharge his duties as exor., his first duty plainly is, if he cannot keep accounts, to provide some one who can, because in this ct. the first & primary duty of every exor., or trustee having money in his hands to be received & to be paid is, that an account should be kept, to be produced to those interested in the account when it is properly demanded (STUART, V.-C.).—Wroe v. Seed (1863), 4 Giff. 425; 9 L. T. 254; 9 Jur. N. S. 1122; 66 E. R. 773.

3076. — ———.]—An exor. or trustee is bound, in the absence of very strong reasons to the contrary, to render the accounts of his testator's estate to the solr. of the residuary legatee, & if he pertinaciously refuse to do so, will be ordered to pay the costs up to the hearing of a suit to have the accounts taken, although such suit may embrace other matters.—Kemp v. Burn (1863), 4 Giff. 348; 1 New Rep. 257; 7 L. T. 666; 9 Jur. N. S. 375; 11 W. R. 278; 66 E. R. 740.

Annotation:—Apld. Jefferys v. Marshall (1870), 23 L. T. 518.

3077. — ———.]—The duty of a trustee is threefold: there is the duty to keep accounts, the duty to deliver accounts, & the duty to vouch accounts; but the considerations which apply to them are not the same. The duty of a trustee to keep accounts is an essential duty, he must keep such accounts so as to be able to deliver a proper account within a reasonable time showing what he has received & paid. As to the duty of delivering accounts, different considerations apply. In the case of very long accounts the trustee may incur considerable expense, & he cannot be called upon to deliver accounts until his expenses have been guaranteed. As to the duty of vouching accounts, that cannot arise till after the accounts have been delivered (KEKEWICH, J.).—Re Watson (1904), 49 Sol. Jo. 54.

3078. — Duty to vouch accounts.]—Re Watson, No. 3077, ante.

3079. — Duty to deliver accounts.]—Re Watson, No. 3077, ante.

3080. — What amounts to a refusal to account.]—(1) Where a trustee, under a power in a marriage settlement to invest in freehold, copyhold, or leasehold security, invests in leaseholds having only fourteen years to run with a very small margin of value, the ct. will direct the investment to be called in.

(2) Where a trustee, in answer to an application by a solr., on behalf of the cestui que trust, replies that had the cestui que trust himself applied he should not have answered the application, but, in courtesy to him, the solr., begged to state so & so, that is not a refusal to account.—Pince v. Beattie (1863), as reported in 9 L. T. 315; 9 Jur. N. S. 1119; 11 W. R. 979.

3081. — Liability for breach of duty.]—In Apr. 1856, by two deeds J. conveyed & assigned his real & personal estate to three trustees, upon trust to sell & convert for the benefit of his creditors. The trustees did not sell, but permitted J. to remain in possession of his property, & to carry on his business of brewer. One of the trustees died, & the other two paid the creditors two dividends, amounting to 10s. in the pound. Shortly after payment of the second dividend pltf. S., a creditor, wrote to the trustees' solrs. asking for an account of the trust estate, but no answer was returned to his letter. S. then filed this bill, on behalf of himself, & all other creditors, for an account. The acting trustee, by his answer, admitted that J. was still in possession of the trust property, & set forth an account of the personal estate which had come to his hands, of how it had been dealt with & employed in the brewery business & of such parts of the same as were still outstanding. S. then amended his bill, charging wilful neglect & default. The accounts were then taken by the chief clerk but no material difference was found between his certificate & the statement scheduled to the answer:—Held: up to the filing of the amended bill the acting trustee having omitted to furnish a statement of the accounts when called upon to do so, must pay pltf.'s costs, the other trustee bearing his own costs; & as the result of taking the accounts showed no gross misconduct on the part of the trustees, they were entitled out of the estate to their costs of the subsequent proceedings.

One of the duties of a trustee to his cestui que trust is to afford him all reasonable & proper information in reference to the matters of the trust (STUART, V.-C.).—Springett v. Dasiwood (1860), 2 Giff. 521; 3 L. T. 542; 7 Jur. N. S. 93; 66 E. R. 218.

3082. — ——— Costs.]—Testator devised realty to trustees on trust, with consent of his three daughters to sell & apply proceeds for benefit of his daughters for life, with remainder to their issue. Testator died in 1840. Payments were made to tenants for life up to 1864, when one daughter died, leaving issue. After 1864, payments were made to the surviving tenants for life alone. Letters were written on behalf of the cestuis que trust in 1867 & 1869 asking for accounts, which were not given. A bill was then filed to administer the trusts of the will:—Held: the trustee must pay the costs of the suit.—Jefferys v. Marshall (1870), 23 L. T. 548; 19 W. R. 94.

I cannot say that it was not the duty of the trustees to preserve evidence of that distribution in 1855 (BACON, V.-C.).—Payne v. Evens (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 356.

3084. — ———.]—Where a trustee had taken a wrong view of his position towards his cestui que trust, & had put him to expense & delay by an indefensible course of conduct in the taking of an account:—Held: the ct. must not only deprive the trustee of the costs of taking the account, but must order him to pay them.—Re Holton's Settlement Trusts, Holton v. Holton (1918), 88 L. J. Ch. 444; 119 L. T. 304; 62 Sol. Jo. 403.

3085. Duty to give information.]—(1) Primâ facie there is this distinction between exors. & trustees; that one exor. can, & one trustee cannot, give a discharge (LORD ELDON, C.).

(2) It is the duty of trustees to afford to their cestui que trust accurate information of the disposition of the trust fund (LORD ELDON, C.).

The husband purchased a leasehold interest for £8,911, to which he took the assignment for himself alone, & obtained from the trustees, out of the trust fund, money to complete the purchase, & for other purposes, to the amount in all of £11,696, as a security for which they took a mtge. of the leasehold interest & a collateral security for £1,310, amounting with the purchase-money to £10,221, being upwards of £1,400 less than the sum advanced out of the trust fund. The husband granted a lease at a great undervalue for his own term, of part of the purchased lands, to the attorney who managed the purchase for him, which purchase turned out a very beneficial one:—Held: the first son of the marriage was entitled to follow that part of the trust fund which had been misapplied, & to have the benefit of the purchase, & to have the lands sold discharged of the lease to the attorney, whose equity against him, the son, as personal representative of his father, was barred by notice of the settlement & breach of trust.

Testator directed that the daughter's annuity should not exceed £600 a year, & that the profits of the mine should not be deemed income until £10 per cent. was set apart for expenses: & he gave all his property, subject to the legacy & annuities, to his son, & empowered his trustees to let his son into possession of all the property upon his securing the legacy and annuities. He appointed his two trustees & his son exors. At the death of testator his debts exceeded the amount of the pure personality exclusive of the colliery. The son alone proved the will, the trustees having disclaimed the trusts & renounced probate. The son entered into possession of the whole property. The colliery was worked out, & yielded a profit of altogether £27,000. 3117. Trustee employed by firm as clerk on commission basis—Introducing business of trust to firm—Liable for commission to trust estate.—Deft., one of two trustees of a will, was employed as a clerk by a firm of stockbrokers on the terms that his salary should consist of half the commission earned by the firm on business introduced by him. At the recommendation of deft. the firm was employed to value his testator's securities. The firm's charges were paid out of testator's estate &, in accordance with their contract with deft., they paid to him half the fees so earned. Deft. took no part in making the valuations or in fixing the fees to be charged. In an action by his co-trustee claiming that deft. was bound to treat the fees so paid to him as part of testator's estate:—Held: it was deft.'s duty as a trustee to give the estate the benefit of his unfettered advice in choosing stockbrokers to act for the estate, but, as the recipient of half the fees earned by the firm on business introduced by him, it was to his interest to choose his firm to act. The services rendered to the firm by deft. remained unchanged but his remuneration for them was increased, & increased by virtue of his trusteeship. That increase was a profit which deft. would not have made but for his position as trustee, & he was bound to treat it as part of the estate of his testator.—*WILLIAMS v. At testator's death the shares were at a premium, & considered a good & safe investment. Soon after testator's death the bank issued new shares, offering them to the original shareholders at par. Nine were offered to the trustees in respect of testator's shares, & being at a premium were purchased by them, though the trust for investment did not authorise investment in shares. 3124. Discretion to postpone.—[Testator being possessed of Mexican Mint shares, on which bonuses were paid out of profits as well as dividends, by his will gave all his property to trustees, upon trust to sell & convert into money, but with power to postpone such sale & conversion as long as they should think reasonable; & in the meantime to pay the annual produce to the tenant for life:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the bonuses as well as the dividends until conversion, but was not entitled to have the conversion of the shares delayed contrary to the wishes of the trustees.—MURRAY v. GLASSE (1853), 1 Eq. Rep. 541; 23 L. J. Ch. 126; 22 L. T. O. S. 35; 17 Jur. 816.

3126.—[Testator by will devised & bequeathed all his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion, with power to the trustees in their absolute & uncontrolled discretion to postpone the sale or conversion. The will contained a provision that until sale or conversion the rents, profits, & income arising from such part of the residuary estate as should for the time being remain unsold or unconverted should be paid or applied to the persons to whom & in the manner in which the dividends, interest, & income arising from the investment of the proceeds of sale of the residuary estate would have been payable or applicable under the trusts declared concerning the same;

& the trustees were to stand possessed of the proceeds of sale of the residuary estate in trust for testator's children who should attain the age of twenty-one years in equal shares as tenants in common.

Testator left seven children who were under twenty-one years of age; one of them on attaining twenty-one claimed that he was entitled to be paid his one-seventh share of the residuary estate or to have his share appropriated to him:—Held: he was not so entitled so long as the trustees in the bona fide exercise of their discretion determined to postpone the sale.—*Re KIPPING, KIPPING v. 3127.—[Testatrix by her will devised & bequeathed her residuary real & personal property to her trustees upon trust to sell & convert & out of the money to arise from such sale & conversion to raise the clear sum of £230,000 & to invest the same in manner thereby authorised; & she declared that "all or any part" of the sum of £230,000 which should not for the time being have been raised or appropriated should bear interest from her death at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, & such interest should be deemed "part of the income of the investments representing" the £230,000, & she declared that the trustees should stand possessed of the £230,000 & the investments for the time being representing the same, thereafter designated "the trust fund" upon trust to pay "as from the day of my death" the income of the trust fund to C. during his life & after his death to hold the same on the trusts therein mentioned. Subject & without prejudice to the raising of the £230,000 testatrix directed that her trustees should hold the residue upon certain trusts therein mentioned. She empowered her trustees at any time or times in their "uncontrolled discretion" to appropriate unconverted investments in or towards satisfaction of the trust fund or any legacy or share in the premises, & "at their discretion" to postpone the sale or conversion "of any part or parts" of the residue, & directed that the income of the unsold residue should "from the period of my death" go as the income of the proceeds of sale would go "if such sale or conversion into money were then actually made." The trustees refused to raise or appropriate to, the legacy or any part thereof on the ground, as the Ct. of Appeal held in fact, that in the interests of all parties concerned in the management of the estate the present time was most inopportune for realisation. They, however, stated that it was possible that they might in the exercise of their discretion appropriate some of the investments which had a fixed value towards such satisfaction. The bona fides of the trustees were not questioned:—Held: the trustees were entitled to postpone & delay the conversion of the residuary estate beyond one year from the death, & in postponing or delaying the sale & conversion of the residuary estate the trustees had not improperly exercised the discretion vested in them.—Re CHARTERIS, 3128. — For reasonable time.]—Testator by his will devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate, which included a large number of shares in a limited co., to trustees upon trust to convert, & he empowered them to postpone the conversion of the whole or any part of his residuary estate during so long as his trustees in their uncontrolled discretion should deem proper, & in particular to retain any shares, stocks, & securities of the co., or any other investments held by him at his death, during any period without being liable for any loss arising thereby. He then divided his estate into certain shares, some of which he settled.

Several of the trustees were directors of the co., & had large holdings; & it was stated that if these shares were all kept together the trustees would have a preponderating influence in the co.

In the events which happened a son & two grandsons of testator were absolutely entitled to certain shares of the residuary estate & claimed to have transferred to them their proportion of the shares in the co.:—Held: the co. was a public company; the trustees had not shown that it was necessary or desirable in the circumstances to retain all the shares; the power to postpone was for a reasonable time only; & in the absence of special circumstances the right of the absolute owners to have a transfer of their shares ought to prevail over the discretion of the trustees.—*Re MARSHALL, MARSHALL v. Ordered, that the sale should be postponed until the further order of the ct.—MORRIS v. MORRIS (1858), 32 L. T. O. S. 14; 4 Jur. N. S. 802; 6 W. R. 493.

D. Failure to Convert.

3133. Liability of trustee.]—W., by his will, after giving some specific legacies, left the remainder of his property to his wife for life, to be invested in the public funds, & at her demise to be divided equally between his three daughters, free from the control of their husbands, or to the heirs of their bodies, should they be taken away before the time of "our demise." The estates were retained unsold:—Held: there was a direction to convert, but as loss was not charged by non-sale, the trustee was not liable.—PATTENDEN v. HOBSON (1853), 1 Eq. Rep. 28; 21 L. T. O. S. 84; 17 Jur. 406; 1 W. R. 282; sub nom. PATTENDEN v. HOBSON, PATTENDEN v. CHURCH, 22 L. J. Ch. 697.

3134. ——*Testator gave the residue of his estate to trustees, who were also his exors., desiring them, immediately after his decease, to convert all his personal estate into money, & to invest the amount "in the Bank of England," & to permit his daughter to receive the rents & profits, dividends or "other annual produce" of his personal estate for her life, for her own use, & after her death the property was to go to her children equally. Testator died in 1825, possessed of, among other things, £24 long annuities, which the exors. did not convert, but permitted the tenant for life to enjoy in specie. On the death of the survivor of the exors., his exors. also neglected to convert the long annuities. The tenant for life had represented, both to the original exors. & to the exors. of the survivor, the propriety of a conversion. She had mortgaged her interest, & two of the children had mortgaged their shares in the residue. Upon bill filed by all the children against the exors. of the surviving exors. & their mother:—Held: the non-conversion was a breach of trust, & the exors. must account for the difference between the value of the long annuities at the end of one year from the date of testator's death, & their value when paid into ct.; the tenant for life was not liable to refund the over-payments voluntarily made to her, & the facts disclosed no case of acquiescence either on the part of the tenant for life or those in remainder.*

(2) I think the trustees are entitled to all costs, except as to so much of the costs of suit as relates to the breach of trust . . . those costs I cannot give them, but I will not make them pay costs, for it was not a breach of trust by which they were to benefit themselves (LORD CRANWORTH, C.)—*BATE v. SUB-SECT. 3.—PROPERTY OF WASTING NATURE AND REVERSIONS.

3142. Necessity for conversion into permanent securities—Settlement by will.]—General rule, that where personal property is bequeathed for life with remainders over, & not specifically, it is to be converted into the 3 per cents. subject in the case of a real security to an inquiry, whether it will be for the benefit of all parties; & a tenant for life is entitled only upon that principle.

It is given as all his personal estate, & the mode, in which he says it is to be enjoyed, is to one for life, & to the others afterwards. Then the ct. says, it is to be construed as to the perishable part, so that one shall take for life, & the others afterwards; & unless testator directs (the mode so) that it is to continue, as it was, the ct. understands, that it shall be put in such a state that the others may enjoy it after the decease of the first; & the thing is quite equal; for it might consist of a vast number of particulars; for instance, a personal annuity, not to commence in enjoyment till the expiration of twenty years from the death of testator, payable upon a contingency, perhaps. If in this case it is equitable, that long or short annuities should be sold, to give every one an equal chance, the ct. acts equally in the other case; for those future interests are for the sake of the tenant for life to be converted into a present interest; being sold immediately, in order to yield an immediate interest to the tenant for life. As in the one case that, in which the tenant for life has too great an interest, is melted for the benefit of the rest, in the other that, of which, if it remained in specie, he might never receive anything, is brought in; & he has immediately the interest of its present worth (LORD ELDON, C.).—*HOWE v. Acts believed to be necessary to execute trust.]—Where there was a reasonable ground for contending that a legacy was a charge upon an estate vested in trustees for sale, & they, in the exercise of a bona fide discretion, for the purpose of satisfying a purchaser who refused to complete unless the legacy was discharged, paid it:—Held: whether the objection would have been tenable or not, the payment ought to be allowed to the trustees as between them & the persons beneficially interested.

I have always understood the law of this ct. to be that where trustees are acting bona fide in the exercise of their discretion, they may, though they incur some risk in doing so, make payments which are in their judgment necessary for the due execution of the trusts, & that such payments ought to be allowed to them (TURNER, L.J.).—*FORSHAW v. 3155. ———.]—The act of the majority of trustees cannot bind a dissenting minority nor the trust estate. In order to bind the trust estate the act must be the act of all the trustees.

There is no law . . . which enables the majority of trustees to bind the minority. The only power to bind is the act of the three, & consequently the act of the two, even if it could bind them by reason of delay or acquiescence, could not bind the trust estate, & therefore in no way was the trust estate bound or the mtge. released (JESSEL, M.R.).—*LUKE v. 3156.—[.]—R. by will gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to convert & to invest in their or his names upon the public stocks, funds, or securities of Great Britain or of any foreign or colonial Govt., & he gave them power to postpone for such time as should seem expedient the sale, conversion, or getting in of any part of the trust estate. Testator's estate consisted chiefly of foreign stocks & bonds, some of which were payable to bearer. The trustees retained these securities for some years; then one trustee wished to realise; the other three thought it best to further postpone the sale. On a summons taken out by the trustees who wished to realise:—Held: under the power to invest in their names the trustees had not power to purchase foreign Govt. bonds payable to bearer; they had power to postpone the sale of such bonds possessed by testator at his death, but this power to postpone could only be exercised by the trustees unanimously, & if one trustee objected the bond or other unauthorised securities must be converted.—*Re ROTH, GOLDBERGER v. He then requested the exors. of his will to sell his farming stock, furniture, etc., & out of the moneys so arising & all other portions of his personal estate, he required them & their respective heirs & assigns to pay all his debts, etc. One of the trustees & exors. died. The two survivors agreed to sell the real estate.

The ct., in a suit for a specific performance of the agreement, rejected the word "respective," & held that the two surviving trustees & exors. could sell & convey the estates to the purchaser.—JONES v. PRICE (1841), 11 Sim. 557; 10 L. J. Ch. 195; 5 Jur. 719; 59 E. R. 988.

3167. —.]—Testator devised his real estates to A., B., C. & D., & their heirs, on certain trusts which required the legal estate to be vested in them, & gave a power of sale to them or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of the survivor, & declared that their or his receipts or receipt should be a good discharge to the purchaser, & if any of them should die or decline to act, that it should be lawful, & he thereby willed & directed that the survivors of them should, immediately or within two months afterwards, by any deed, nominate some fit person to be a trustee in his place. D. died; & A. & B. by one deed, & C. by another, both of which were executed more than two lunar months, but less than two calendar months after D.'s death, nominated a new trustee, but did not convey the legal estate to him. A., B., C., & the new trustee agreed to sell the estates to M., who objected to complete his purchase, (a) because the appointment of the new trustee had not been made within two lunar months, (b) because it had not been made by one single deed, & (c) because the power of sale was suspended during the vacancy in the trust. The ct. overruled the objections; but held that the new trustee had not been duly appointed, because no conveyance had been executed to him; notwithstanding which, A., B. & C. could make a good title & give an effectual discharge for the purchase-money.—*WARBURTON v. The trustee by deed directed the manner in which the estates should be sold, & the proportions of the proceeds applied, & directed the division thereof amongst the other objects to be postponed until after the death of P., & nominated other persons to execute the trusts, which might remain unexecuted at his, the trustee's, death, & directed them to distribute the surplus proceeds of the estates amongst other objects according to their exigencies:—Held: the trustee, for the government of his own discretion, might properly have regard to the directions of the unattested codicil, even as to the proceeds of the real estate, so far as he was not restrained by the effect of the will; the prospective directions in the deed of appointment were not necessarily invalid, especially those which related to the future maintenance of P., & the attempt to delegate powers which the trustee could not transfer did not invalidate the directions in the same deed which he had power to give.—*HITCH v. 3196. — Disagreement between trustees.]—Under a will, & in the events which happened, one third of testator's residuary estate was held in trust for his daughter, a married woman, for her life without power of anticipation, & after her death for her issue, with a gift over in default of her issue for his sons & their issue respectively. The will empowered the trustees to raise not more than a moiety of the vested share for the time being of any of testator's children & to apply the same for the advancement or benefit of such children in such manner as his trustees should think fit.

Owing to the circumstances of her birth & to the increased cost of living caused by the war, the daughter was unable to pay the legacy duty, which was at the rate of 10 per cent. on her settled share out of her income, & applied to the trustees for assistance. On a summons by the trustees the ct. was of opinion that the trustees could, in the exercise of their discretion under the power of advancement, raise & pay the duty out of the corpus of the settled share, & left them to decide whether they would so exercise their discretion. One of the trustees was willing to exercise the discretion in aid of the daughter, but the other trustee, testator's widow, declined to exercise it because her daughter had married without her consent:—Held: the ct. in the exercise of its control over the discretion of the trustees, could direct the trustees to raise out of the corpus of the settled share a sum sufficient to pay the duty.—KLUG v. KLUG, [1918] 2 Ch. 67; 62 Sol. Jo. 471; sub nom. Re KLUG, KLUG v. KLUG, 87 L. J. Ch. 569; 118 L. T. 696.

3197. Trustees not bound to give reasons for decision.]—Where trustees are appointed to execute a trust according to discretion, they are not bound to state reasons for any conclusion at which they may arrive in fulfilling the duty imposed on them; their discretion must, however, be exercised with an absence of indirect motives, with honesty of intention, & with a fair consideration of the subject; & the duty of the ct. generally is to see that the discretion of the trustees has been thus exercised, & not to deal with the accuracy of the conclusion at which they may have arrived.

If, however, in such cases trustees think fit to state a reason for their conclusion, the ct. may consider the validity of the reason thus stated, & if it sees that the reason does not justify the decision, it may correct the decision accordingly.—

3199. Exercise by old trustees—Appointment of new trustees—Right of new trustees to question exercise.]—A. by deed, in 1844, settled certain profits & moneys upon such trusts as he should by will appoint, & in default upon other trusts, with a proviso that the trustees might lay out all or part of the trust moneys in effecting a policy on the life of the settlor. This was accordingly done. In 1851 the trustees having, as it was alleged, no funds wherewith to meet the premiums, with the assent of A., assigned the policy to E. in satisfaction of a debt due from A. to E., who thereupon held the policy & paid the premiums upon it. Subsequently to this assignment L. & B. were appointed new trustees of the deed of 1844, & the trust fund was assigned to them in general terms, without any mention of the policy. A. died, having appointed the fund by will, & the trustees L. & B. claimed the proceeds of the policy:—Held: as the trustees had, in the exercise of their discretion, parted with the policy to E., they were answerable to the cestui que trust, but it was not competent to L. & B., the new trustees, to question their conduct.—JOHNSON v. SWIRE (1861), 3 Giff. 194; 4 L. T. 677; 7 Jur. N. S. 670; 66 E. R. 370.

3200. Right to consultation with beneficiaries.]—I am satisfied that the trustees acted in good faith, & that their decision to retain this stock was an honest exercise of the discretion given to them by the will. It would be extremely dangerous to hold that trustees, having such a discretion to exercise, might not freely discuss with the beneficiaries the reasons for & against a particular decision, without running the risk of being held to act against their own judgment, if they should disregard, in the end, objections to which they had thought it right to direct attention (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—FRASER v. After his death the trustees, in the bond fide exercise of their discretion, held the shares for some years in a generally falling market:—Held: (1) having exercised their discretion bond fide, they were not liable for loss incurred thereby; (2) the fact that some of the trustees, in exercising their discretion honestly, modified their opinion as to a sale in deference to the views of a co-trustee who had a personal interest in the matter did not amount to a failure to exercise a discretion & was not a breach of trust.—Re SCHNEIDER, KIRBY v. No proceedings resorted to by creditors of the beneficiaries can in such a case abridge the powers of the trustees.

Testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for the behoof of his children, "with & under the modifications to be afterwards stated." The shares of residue were to vest at testator's death, & be payable six months after his decease; but powers were given, "notwithstanding the period above appointed for payment of the shares of the residue," to the trustees "to postpone as long as they should think it expedient to do so, the payment of the provisions or shares of residue in the case of all or any of the children or grandchildren . . . & to apply the interest or annual produce of the same during the period of the postponement, to or for behoof of such children or grandchildren, or, by a deed under their hands, to retain the provisions, or any of them, vested in their own persons, or to vest the same in the persons of other trustees . . . so that the children & grandchildren, or any of them, as the case might be, might draw & receive only the interest or other annual proceeds of their respective provisions during their lives, or for such time as the trustees might fix, & that the capital might be settled on or for behoof of such children or grandchildren, & their lawful issue, on such conditions & under such restrictions & limitations, & for such uses as the trustees in their discretion might deem most expedient, of which expediency, & the time & manner of exercising the powers & option hereby given, they should be the sole & final judges."

The trustees during a period of five years after testator's death paid the whole of the interest, & a part of the capital of his share to J., a son of testator. Subsequently judgment creditors of J. used arrestment in the hands of the trustees against the balance of the residue of his share still due to J., & raised an action of forthcoming. Thereupon the trustees executed a deed restricting the right of J. to a life rent, & settled the fee on his children; & again by another deed they resolved to hold the balance, & apply the interest as an alimentary fund for J.'s behoof:—Held: the arrestment could not in any way abridge the ample discretionary powers of the trustees, & the trustees were at 3221. —.]—Under a will certain property, consisting of freehold land divided into numerous plots on which houses had been built & now let on leases for long terms, stood limited to trustees upon trust for E. for life with remainder to S. in base fee. A number of provisional valuations had been made by the district surveyor under the Finance (1909-1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), for the purpose of assessing the increment value duty under the Act. S. applied to the trustees to take measures to check the provisional valuations & for that purpose to have valuations made. E. opposed this on the ground of expense. S. then applied to the Comrs. as a person interested under s. 27 (5) of the Act that he might be supplied with copies of the provisional valuations, & this was promised. He then took out this summons for an order directing the trustees to have valuations made for the purpose of checking the valuations of the district surveyor. The only evidence in support of the application was an affidavit by a surveyor of standing & experience that the valuations under the Act were usually too low.

The judge held that on the true construction of the Act the duty of protecting the estate in the matter of these valuations was thrown on the owner (i.e. in the case of settled land, the tenant for life) & not on the trustees. Under s. 39 the trustees if they did interfere could charge their costs on the estate, but the ct. would not direct the trustees to take proceedings except in a case where serious injury was threatened to the estate, & in this case there was no sufficient evidence of any such threatened injury:—Held: in the course of their ordinary duty trustees had to exercise their discretion in such cases; the trustees in the present case had honestly exercised that discretion; & there was no reason why the ct. should interfere with it.—*Re KNOLLYS' TRUSTS, SAUNDERS v. The masonic temple was to be used for masonic ceremonies, & smaller rooms for lodge meetings, business, & meetings of a social but not political character. Upon a summons by the widow of testator, who was also one of the exors., to ascertain whether the legacy was valid or not:—Held: the whole income of the fund being charged with a trust, at the discretion of the trustees, for a primary object which was invalid, the ct. was not entitled to control this discretion, & institute an inquiry at chambers as to the amount of income necessary to be applied for maintenance & upkeep of the temple, so that the gift of the balance would be valid.—*Re PORTER, PORTER v. 3240. Discretionary powers — Extension of — Where previously limited by trust instrument.—A settlement of real estate of which there were four trustees, provided that if the trustees thereby appointed "or any future trustee or trustees to be appointed in the place of them or any of them as hereinafter mentioned" should die or be desirous of being discharged, etc., it should be lawful for "the surviving or continuing trustee or trustees for the time being," with the consent of the tenant for life or in tail for the time being entitled in possession, to appoint a new trustee or new trustees in the place of the trustee or trustees so dying, etc. In 1872, four new trustees were appointed under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), in the place of two deceased & two retiring trustees. After this a decree was made for carrying the trusts of the settlement into execution. Two of the trustees of 1872 being dead, & another desiring to retire, pltf. who was an infant tenant in tail in possession, took out a summons to appoint new trustees: W., the continuing trustee took out a summons asking that he might be at liberty to appoint new trustees. A reference to chambers being directed, W. proposed new trustees whom the ct. considered to be proper persons, but to whom all the persons beneficially interested objected:—Held: the persons nominated by W. must be appointed, though the tenant in tail in possession did not consent, for as the power in the settlement only applied to filling up vacancies in the number of original trustees, or trustees appointed under the power, it had come to an end when new trustees were appointed by the ct. in 1872, & the fetter imposed by the settlement on the exercise of that power did not apply to the new power given to the continuing trustee by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), which enabled him to fill up vacancies in a body of trustees not coming within the scope of the power in the settlement.—*CECIL v. 3251 General rule.]—Trustees of real estate sold parts of it to the Metropolitan Board of Works, & they sent in a requisition that the vendors should attend personally to receive the purchase-moneys or direct the moneys to be paid to their joint account at a bank. One or more of the trustees resided in the country. On summonses taken out under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), by the board:—Held: the requisition must be complied with by the trustees.

The theory of every trust is that the trustees shall not allow the trust moneys to get into the hands of any one of them, but that all shall exercise control over them. . . . If by their acts they enable one of themselves to receive the moneys, they are liable for the receipt of them just as much as if they all received them, because they enabled the one trustee to do that which but for their special authority he would not have been enabled to do (KAY, J.).—Re FLOWER (C.) & METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS, Re FLOWER (M.) & SAME (1884), 27 Ch. place of a retiring trustee of a sum of War Stock inscribed in the names of the old trustees, the retiring trustee, with the advice of her own independent solrs., joined with her two co-trustees, one of whom was a solr. acting for the trust, in executing a joint power of attorney authorising named brokers to sell & transfer all or any part of the stock & to receive the consideration money. This sale & transfer power was signed in lieu of an ordinary transfer power in order that certain trust costs might be raised & paid before the fund was transferred to the new & continuing trustees. The power of attorney was, with the solrs.' approval, handed to the solicitor trustee, who lodged it with the brokers. By his instructions they sold the whole fund, & without any authority from the retiring trustee, handed him the proceeds in cash & bearer bonds, which he forthwith misappropriated. Neither the retiring trustee nor her solrs., though fully aware that the solicitor trustee was a dilatory & incompetent muddler, had the remotest suspicion that he was dishonest:—Held: in the circumstances the retiring trustee committed no breach of trust in signing the power of attorney, & that being so & the power of attorney containing no authority to the attorneys to pay the money to the solicitor trustee the retiring trustee was not responsible for the loss resulting from his fraudulent misappropriation of the trust fund.—*Re MUNTON, MUNTON v. 3272. Investment of trust funds—Solicitor.]—Trustees of stock sold it out & committed the proceeds to their solr. for investment, by whom it was misapplied & lost:—Held: the trustees were liable for a breach of trust, & the cestuis que trust were entitled to relief against both the trustees & the solr., & they might sue either the trustees alone or the trustees jointly with the solr. The short result of the case is, that the trustees, instead of themselves seeing to the investment of the trust fund, delegated that duty to their solicitor, who misapplied the money.

The trustees were bound to satisfy themselves in some other way than by the mere assurances of their solr., & by payments made by him as for interest, that the money was really advanced on mtge. (LORD TRURO, C.)—ROWLAND v. WITHERDEN (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 568; 21 L. J. Ch. 480; 42 E. R. 379, L. C.

3273. — Broker—Usual course of business followed.]—(1) A trustee investing trust funds is justified in employing a broker to procure securities authorised by the trust & in paying the purchase-money to the broker, if he follows the usual & regular course of business adopted by ordinary prudent men in making such investments. A broker employed by a trustee to buy securities of municipal corps. authorised by the trust, gave the trustee a bought-note which purported to be subject to the rules of the London Stock Exchange & obtained the purchase-money from the trustee upon the representation that it was payable the next day, which was the next account day on the London Exchange. The broker never procured the securities but appropriated the money to his own use & finally became insolvent. Some of the securities were procurable only from the corps. direct & were not bought & sold in the market, & there was evidence that the form of the bought-note would have suggested to some experts that the loans were to be direct to the corps.; but (as the House held on the facts) there was nothing calculated to excite suspicion in the mind of the trustee or of an ordinary prudent man of business; & such payment to a broker was in accordance with the usual course of business in purchases on the London Exchange:—Held: the trustee was not liable to the cestuis que trust for the loss of the trust funds.

As a general rule, a trustee sufficiently discharges his duty if he takes in managing trust affairs all those precautions which an ordinary prudent man of business would take in managing similar affairs of his own. There is one exception to this: a trustee must not choose investments other than those which the terms of his trust permit, though they may be such as an ordinary prudent man of business would select for his own money (LORD BLACKBURN).

3278. ——— Trust administered by court.—Trustees are not justified, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, in allowing a solr. to receive any part of the trust moneys, & the fact that the trust estate is being administered by the ct. is immaterial, or to retain the securities upon which the trust moneys are invested.

Trustees of an estate which was being administered by the ct., under the impression that they were protected by the administration, allowed a solr. to receive the whole of the trust funds, & authorised him to make investments from time to time. The solr. on several occasions purported to invest the trust moneys upon mtge., & the trustees made no inquiries as to the proposed investments, & did not ask to see the deeds. The solr. misappropriated some parts of the trust funds, & advanced the rest upon fictitious or worthless securities:—Held: the trustees were liable to make good the whole of the loss arising from the default of their solr.—*Re DEWAR, DEWAR v. 3279. ——— Permission to hold longer than necessary.—(1) Three persons were trustees of a fund set apart to answer a life annuity, & divisible on the decease of the annuitant among the persons entitled in remainder. The sum of £3,700, part of this fund, was invested on a heritable bond. On July 15, 1887, the bond was paid off. The trustees allowed their law agent to receive the money & to retain it in his hands uninvested for rather over six months. At the end of that time the law agent became bkpt., & the greater part of the fund was lost:—Held: the trustees were guilty of a plain & positive breach of trust, & were liable to replace the money lost.

The trustees might properly employ their law agent to receive the money from the mtgees., but it was their duty to see that the money, when received, was immediately reinvested or placed on deposit in their own names & under their own control (LORD DAVEY).

(2) The immunity clause only applies to the intromissions of a factor or agent within the legitimate scope of his agency, which does not authorise him to retain the money in his own control.

(3) The proviso to sect. 2 (1) of Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), reproduced in sect. 17 of Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 63), that a trustee is to enjoy no exemption from liability if he allows money to remain longer than is necessary in the hands of a banker or solr. is declaratory of the law of England, & must by analogy be treated as applicable in the case of Scottish trustees.—*WYMAN v. 3280. ——— Actual or constructive knowledge of trustee as to receipt.—In order to bring into operation Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 17 (3), which provides that nothing in the sect. is to exempt a trustee from any liability which he would have incurred if the Act had not been passed, in case he permits money, received by a solr. under a deed containing a receipt for the money, to remain in the latter's hands or under his control for a period longer than is reasonably necessary to enable him to pay the same to the trustee, the circumstances must be such that the trustee either knew or ought to have known of the receipt of the money.

X. & Y., who were trustees, were in July, 1902, told by B., their solr., that a mtge. forming part of the trust property would shortly be paid off & that the mtge. money would be placed to the joint account of the trustees at a bank, & they accordingly sent to B. a reconveyance of the mtged. property, which contained in the body of it a receipt for the mtge. money, executed by them. B. then proceeded, on the mtgors.' behalf, to sell the property in lots, & he from time to time received the purchase-money for the lots, which money he ultimately misappropriated; but before any of the money had been received by B., X. died. Y. trusted in B.'s honesty & bona fide believed him to be a proper person to be entrusted with the mtge. money, & did not before Dec. 4, 1902, know that B. had received any of the money. In the meantime Y. frequently inquired of B. whether he had received the money & was told by him that he had not received it. By Dec. 4, 1902, it had become impossible to recover the money which B. had received.

The case was argued on the footing that the authority conferred by the reconveyance justified the receipt by B. by instalments & that the death of X. before any money was received by B. did not affect the question of Y.'s liability:—Held: Y. was not liable to replace the misappropriated trust funds.

Qu.: whether the death of X. revoked the authority conferred on the solr. by the delivery to him of the reconveyance.

Qu.: the delivery justified the receipt of the mtge. money by instalments.—Re SHEPPARD, DE BRIMONT v. HARVEY, [1911] 1 Ch. 50; 80 L. J. Ch. 52; 103 L. T. 424; 55 Sol. Jo. 13.

Valuation & share of partnership—Accountants & valuers.]—A partner, on retiring from his firm, left his capital, £15,000, in the business under an agreement with the continuing partners that it should be a debt due from them to him & bearing interest until repayment. The agreement contained a stipulation that the outgoing partner should have free access to the books at all times, & various provisions intended to satisfy the outgoing partner from time to time of the solvency of the business; upon breach of any one of these provisions he was to be at liberty to call in his capital. The outgoing partner subsequently died, having by his will bequeathed his residuary estate, which included his capital in the business, to a trustee upon trusts for one for life & for other in remainder:—Held: (1) the trustee was at liberty to employ accountants & valuers for an audit & stocktaking once a year if desired, or oftener if special circumstances so required; & (2) the expenses thereof were costs, charges, & expenses properly incurred by the trustee in the execution of the trusts of the will & for the benefit of the whole estate, & were therefore payable out of capital & not out of income.—Re BENNETT, JONES v. 3286. Whether employment of co-trustee a breach of trust.]—It is no breach of trust, to permit one of the trustees to receive all or the most part of the profits, it falling out many times that some of the trustees live far from the lands, & are put in trust out of other respects than to be troubled with the receipt of the profits.—TOWNLEY v. 3287. — — —.]—Estates in Scotland were conveyed by trust-disposition to three trustees, to collect & apply the rents as therein mentioned, with £100 a year for their trouble, besides all the necessary expenses of managing the estates; & with power to appoint & remove factors, pay their salaries, & settle their accounts annually; & within six months after clearance with the factors, to get their own accounts approved by an accountant, whose approbation would be a discharge of them; each liable only for his own actual intromissions, & no farther liable for the factors than that they should be reputed responsible at the time of their appointment. The trustees appointed one of themselves to be factor, with a salary, & he, though of undoubted responsibility at that time, afterwards retained large balances at the annual settlements of accounts; whereon one of the trustees, who was cashier, urged him to pay up; but the balances against him increasing, both trustees, after failing in their exertions to obtain payment, revoked his appointment as factor, & he became bkpt., owing a large debt to the trust estate:—Held: (1) the appointment of one of the trustees to be factor was not of itself such a breach of trust as subjected the other trustees to all the consequences resulting from it; (2) there was not such gross negligence, in the two trustees permitting the factor to retain balances, as to subject them to liability for the ultimate balance due from him to the trust estate.—HOME v. Employment to sell by auction—Sale by private treaty.]—C., a solr., & one of three exors. & trustees for sale, acted professionally in the management of the personal estate, & also by the authority of his co-trustees conducted an attempted sale by auction of the real estate. A., another of the trustees, hearing that his son was in treaty for the purchase of the estate, wrote to C. to say that he, A., would not take any interest either directly or indirectly in the matter, C. then, with the concurrence of the co-trustee, contracted to sell the estate by private contract to another person. On a bill filed by the purchaser to compel performance of this contract:—Held: C. had not derived any general authority to sell by private contract, by reason of his employment as solr. to the trust estate or as agent to sell by public auction; & he had derived no special authority from A.'s letter to sell to any one but to A.'s son. Semble: under the circumstances, A. could not have delegated to his co-trustees an authority to sell to his son without reserving to himself a veto upon the contract.—BULTEEL v. E. Liability of Agent.

3323. Liability of solicitors—Joining with one cestui que trust in misapplication of trust property.]

—A party executed a settlement in favour of certain trustees, who accepted & chose an agent to act for them: the agent in conjunction with one of the trustees, the husband of a cestui que trust, who was also heir-at-law of the trustor, procured said cestui que trust to make up a title to part of the trust estate passing over the trust, & thereupon to execute a disposition in his favour, on the ground that it was in security of advances for the trust. The agent thereupon took ineffectment, & executed a conveyance in favour of third parties:—Held: the agent was bound in the first instance, without awaiting the result of an accounting, to restore the estate in integrum against the real security created by the disposition & ineffectment.—FRASER v. STEVENS'S TRUSTEES (1839), Macl. & Rob. 171; 9 E. R. 61, II. L.

3325. — Countenancing dealings with trust money at variance with order of court—Order in administration action.]—In 1855 a bill was filed for the administration of the estate of H., & in Feb. 1857, a decree was made which, among other things, directed the personal representative V. to get in the outstanding estate, & to pay the moneys so received into ct. from time to time within two months after their receipt respectively. After this decree was made, an estate, which was mortgaged to testator, was sold, & the purchase-money was received by the solrs. of V., who, instead of paying it into ct., retained a part of it in payment of some costs due to themselves, & allowed V. to receive the rest. V. having become a defaulter, a bill was filed by the beneficiaries against the solrs.:—Held: the solrs. were liable to make good the whole sum thus received by them, less the costs of actually realising it, together with interest.

It was equally impossible for the solrs. to admit any application of the money of that kind. It was their duty to see at all events that nothing was done which should be counter to the order of the ct., & above all, not themselves to receive any part of the money or appropriate any part of the money in any way which would be at variance with the order which the ct. had made (CAIRNS, L.J.).—HARRIES v. 3327. — Negligence in conduct of petition.]—Trustees paid into ct., under Trustee Relief Act, a legacy of £500 bequeathed to D. an infant, to the credit of an account in the matter of the trusts of the will of testator. Two years afterwards they transferred into ct. to the same account a sum of Consols, representing a legacy of £7,000 bequeathed to M., & after her death to her children, & on both occasions the trustees in the petitions stated that the office of N., their solr., was to be the place for the service of any notice in reference to the funds. A year after the transfer of the Consols a petition was presented by M., by her next friend, a solr., & by the trustees, for the purpose of dealing with the Consols, & the solrs. on the record for petitioners were the firm of whom N. was a member, & the office of N. was to be the place where any notice was to be served relating to the trust fund. The petition set forth what had been done in respect of the Consols & other matters. An order was made in reference to the Consols & dividends; but in drawing it up an error occurred by including in it the whole of the fund standing to the credit of the account, & the future dividends were, as ordered, paid to M. during her life. D. had suffered loss by payments wrongly made to M., now deceased, & she, on attaining majority, presented a petition asking that the estate of M. might be made primarily liable for the loss which she had suffered, & that N. might be made liable for any deficiency :—Held : N., as officer of the ct., had been guilty of negligence in not seeing that all the facts relating to the funds were brought before the ct. when the order was made, & he must, after D. had exhausted the estate of M., make good any deficiency, & pay the costs of the petition.—Re DANGAR'S TRUSTS (1889), 41 Ch. 3328. — As constructive trustees.]—Where a trustee has delegated his trust, there is no question of primary & secondary liability in respect of a breach of trust, but all are equally liable.

In an action by cestui que trust against their trustees, it was alleged that they had delegated their trusteeship to their solrs., who had improperly mixed the trust funds with their own moneys :—Held : if the allegations were well founded, they were amply sufficient to charge the solrs. as constructive trustees, & they & the trustees were equally liable for breaches of trust.—COWPER v. STONEHAM (1893), 68 L. T. 18; 3 R. 242.

It having been held by the judge that a solr. had constituted himself a constructive trustee, & that both he & his partner in business were liable to make good a loss which had resulted from improper investments of the trust funds :—Held : upon the evidence, in the matters in question the solr. had acted only in the character of solr. to the trustees, & consequently neither he nor his partner were liable as constructive trustees.—MARA v. BROWNE, [1896] 1 Ch. 199; 65 L. J. Ch. 225; 73 L. T. 638; 44 W. R. 330; 12 T. L. R. 111; 40 Sol. Jo. 131, C. A.

3330. Liability of accountants.—Acceptance of trustees' statements as correct.—Intended application of trust funds.]—Accountants employed by trustees, through whose hands the accounts of the trust estate passed, are in the nature of servants, & bound to accept as correct statements made by one or other of the trustees with regard to the intended application of the trust fund, & are not liable for the misapplication of the trust fund by their employers on the ground of negligence, by not seeing that the fund was applied properly.—*ROBBARD v. 3333. — — —.]—In an action by a cestui que trust against his trustees for administration, the solrs. of the trustees were joined as defts. It was alleged that grossly exorbitant sums had been allowed in the accounts as costs to the trustees' solrs., & the relief asked for against them was that their bills might be taxed. The solrs. demurred :—Held : such an action could not be maintained by a third party, cestui que trust, against solrs., & the proper remedy was by petition under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 39.—*Re SPENCER, SPENCER v. 3334. —[—]—Trustees acting under the advice of their solrs. invested £3,000, part of the trust fund, upon the security of a contributory mtge. for £6,000, the remaining £3,000 being advanced by the solrs. themselves. The legal estate in the mtgd. property was not vested in the trustees, the mtge. being taken in the names of one of them & of a stranger to the trust. The mtgees. executed a contemporaneous declaration of trust declaring that their names should stand in the mtge. as to the sum of £3,000, part of the sum of £6,000, & the interest thereof in trust for the trustees, & as to the further sum of £3,000, "residue of the sum of £6,000, & the residue of the interest to become due & payable" under the mtge. in trust for the solrs. By another contemporaneous document the solrs. guaranteed to the trustees the sufficiency of the security for the sum of £3,000 & interest, & further guaranteed to the trustees the repayment of the £3,000 & interest. The solrs. assigned their portion of the security to other persons, & were afterwards adjudicated bkpts. The mtgd. property having failed to realise the whole of the £6,000:—Held: the trustees were not entitled to priority for their £3,000 as against the assignees of the solrs.

In my opinion the investment was . . . a breach of trust. I also think that in omitting to advise the trustees that this was so, Messrs. N. P. & G. were guilty of a neglect of duty to the S. trustees, their clients . . . but under ordinary circumstances they would not have been responsible to the cestus que trust as for a breach of trust (STIRLING, J.).—*STOKES v. 3338. —[—]—Trustees having employed a solr. in the distribution of a trust estate, certain beneficiaries obtained an order for the taxation of the solr.'s bill of costs under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 39:—Held: the costs must be taxed as between the trustees & their solr., & if properly chargeable against the trustees as such, must be allowed out of the estate irrespective of their ultimate incidence amongst the beneficiaries, which was a question outside the scope of such a taxation.—Re MILES, [1903] 2 Ch. 518; 72 L. J. Ch. 704; 88 L. T. 863; 52 W. R. 47; 47 Sol. Jo. 655.

3339. —[—]—Indemnity not dependent on actual prior payment—Resort to estate as liability arises.—[—]—In order that a solr. of a trustee may be debarred from accepting payments out of the estate in respect of costs properly incurred, notice must be brought home to him that at the time when he accepted them the trustee had been guilty of a breach of trust, such as would preclude him from resorting to the trust estate for payment of costs. A trustee allowed his solrs. to retain costs out of the trust estate. At the time the solrs. had notice that the trustee had committed a breach of trust in secretly buying for himself part of the trust estate. In an administration action the trustee made default in payment into ct. of the balance fund to have come to his hands:—Held: the solrs. could not be compelled to pay in the sums received by them out of the estate.

What is the position of a trustee or exor. who has to employ a solr., an auctioneer, or a stockbroker? He enters, unquestionably, into a contract, with reference to the employment of a solr.; or an auctioneer, or a stockbroker, on which he is personally liable, but by law he is entitled to be indemnified out of the trust estate. What is the right of indemnity? I apprehend that in equity at all events it is not a right of the trustee to be indemnified only after he has made the necessary payments . . . but that he is entitled to be indemnified not merely against payments actually made but against his liability . . . he is not bound in the first instance to pay those persons out of his own pocket & then recoup himself out of the trust estate, but he can properly in the first instance resort to the trust estate & pay those persons whom he has properly employed proper remuneration out of the trust estate (STIRLING, J.).—*Re BLUNDELL, BLUNDELL v. Subject to the term of one hundred years, he gave his real estate to A. for life, remainder to his first & other sons in tail male, with divers remainders over. He gave power to any tenant for life in possession who should have attained twenty-one & to trustees during minorities, to grant building leases.

A. had attained twenty-one, but not twenty-five. The first tenant in tail in existence was an infant. The trustees having purchased a building estate, a petition was presented by the trustees & A., & the first tenant in tail, asking that power to grant building leases might be vested in the trustees so long as there should be no tenant for life in possession who should have attained twenty-five:—Held: as all parties interested concurred, & the exercise of a power of leasing would be beneficial to the estate, the ct. would give the power.—Re HARRIS'S SETTLED ESTATES (1880), 42 L. drawn—Enforceability of contract.]—The doctrine of part performance of a parol agreement is not to be extended by the ct., & it is inapplicable to a case where a trustee has a power to lease, at the request in writing of a married woman which has not been made.

Land was vested in a trustee for the separate use of Mrs. E. a married woman, & the deed gave the trustee a power to lease at the request in writing of Mrs. E. The trustee & Mrs. E. agreed by parol to let the property to ptfs., & a lease was prepared approved of & executed by the trustee & by Mrs. E. but before their solr. had parted with it & before ptfs. had executed it, Mrs. E. recalled her assent to it. She had made no request to the trustee "in writing":—Held: there was no contract binding on Mrs. E. & no part performance, & ptfs. could not enforce the agreement.—PHILLIPS v. EDWARDS (1864), 33 Beav. 440; 3 New Rep. 658; 55 E. R. 438.

3366. Lease not conformable to power—Whether void in toto—Trustees of undivided moiety.]—Testator, seised in fee of an undivided moiety in certain real estates, devised all his real & personal estate to two persons, their heirs, exors. & administrators, in trust, to receive the rents & profits, & pay thereout various annuities, which they were authorised to raise by mtg. of all or any part of the estates. The will also contained a power to the trustees to accept surrenders of old leases & to grant new ones, with certain specified conditions:—Held: as the trustees took an estate in fee in the freehold & an absolute estate in the leasehold property, leases executed by the surviving trustee, though not conformable to the power, were valid at law, as to testator's moiety.—DOE d. BLAgrave v. STEPHENS (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 541.

3367. — Whether void or voidable.]—Where a lease is made by trustees in exercise of a power, which is accompanied by a proviso that no such lease shall be valid unless the lessee shall execute a counterpart containing certain covenants; Qu.: is the lease void. Semle: it is only voidable at the option of the party entitled to take advantage.—*DORRITT v. 3369. Exercise amounting to breach of trust.]—M. by his will devised estates to trustees, in trust for his daughter, an infant, with power to the trustees to demise & lease the same for any term not exceeding twenty-one years "at the best yearly rent that could be gotten for same respectively, without taking any fine or premium for the making thereof"; with power to appoint new trustees. In pursuance of this power the trustees some time afterwards, appointed R. sole trustee, & conveyed to him the estate so devised, upon the trusts, & subject to the powers expressed & declared by the will of M., & for "no other trust, intent, or purpose whatsoever." By an indenture of lease between R. & B., certain part of the premises said to be described in & devised by the will of M. were demised by R. to B. for twenty-one years, in consideration of the yearly rent of £1,100, the first five years of which rent was to be paid in advance, in manner therein provided, & the remainder, after the expiration of such five years by equal quarterly payments:—Held: as the granting of such a lease was a breach of the trusts of the will of M., same ought to be declared void & set aside, & the premises assigned to the persons to be appointed trustees of the will of M.—BOOTH v. A'BECKETT (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 201; 9 L. T. 68; 15 E. R. 676, P. C.

The daughters were parties to a deed of family arrangement under which power was given to trustees to manage or lease the mines & minerals in order to provide the moneys necessary to pay the annuities. Under the will, the trusts of which were to be treated as incorporated in the deed, the surviving husband of any daughter was entitled for his life to the annuity given to his wife by the will, & the deed contemplated the exercise of the power of leasing during the life of the surviving husband, who was not necessarily a person who was alive at the date of the execution of the deed:—Held: as the trustees might have exercised their power of leasing so as to create for the first time a new interest in land after the perpetuity period had expired, the power of leasing was void.

3375. Power conferred by Act of Parliament.—

An Act of Parliament declared that certain hereditaments should be vested in trustees, their heirs, & assigns, for the purpose of granting building leases, to contain specified covenants; & went on to authorise the trustees to pay the costs incurred out of the rents, & declared the same to be a charge on the premises:—Held: (1) the legal estate was vested in the trustees; (2) the costs were a charge on the estate; & the ct. had power to direct a sale of the corpus for payment of the costs; a purchaser under the ct. could not object that the leases were invalid.—DIXON v. WILKINSON (1853), 1 Eq. Rep. 556; 22 L. J. Ch. 981; 21 L. T. O. S. 297; 1 W. R. 513.

3376. Power during minority of tenant in tail—

Execution of contract entered into by late tenant for life.—By a will devising real estate in strict settlement, powers of granting building leases were given to any tenant for life & to trustees during the minority of any tenant in tail. The tenant for life, in pursuance of his power, entered into a contract to grant a building lease, but died without having executed a lease, & was succeeded by an infant tenant in tail:—Held: the trustees had power to effectuate the contract of the tenant for life by executing a lease.—DAVIS v. HAKFORD (1882), 22 Ch. D. 128; 52 L. J. Ch. 61; 47 L. T. 540; 31 W. R. 61.

3377. Validity of lease granted—Where no covenant to build.—Testator by his will devised & bequeathed freehold & leasehold lands upon trusts, & empowered the trustees to contract for leases thereof with or without optional powers of purchase on the lessees, & to grant leases thereof either for building or other purposes, so that no lease of the site of a building should be made for more than ninety-nine years, & no lease for any other purpose for more than twenty-one years & so that while leases for twenty-one years were to be at the best rents which could be obtained, building leases might be at a rent to increase progressively. After testator's death the trustees granted to A. a lease of part of the freehold & leasehold lands of testator for thirty-five years, with an option to purchase during the first twenty-one years of the term, & at an increasing rent as to the freehold part, by an indenture which recited that they had power to grant building leases, but contained no covenant to build, though it contained covenants to repair, amend, & keep, & to insure all messuages erected or to be erected on the land demised. A. exercised his option to purchase as to a leasehold portion of the demised property, which was duly assigned to him, & he afterwards sold & assigned part of those leaseholds to C. C. contracted to sell to a purchaser, & in order to avoid any question as to the validity of the lease by the trustees, a memorandum was indorsed upon it signed by A. & the trustees declaring that pursuant to Leases Act, 1849 (c. 26), the lease should be considered in equity as a contract for the grant of a valid lease for twenty-one years. The purchaser, however, took the objection that the lease was invalid. Upon a summons taken out under Vendor Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78):

—Held: (1) the lease though intended to be a building lease was invalid as such owing to the absence of any covenant to build, & being bad as a building lease under the power it could not by the operation of Leases Act, 1849 (c. 26), be turned into a contract for the grant of a valid lease of a kind different from that which it was originally intended to be; moreover, even if it could by this means be turned into an ordinary lease, it would be bad as such, inasmuch as the rent reserved on the freehold part was an increasing rent, which was not authorised by the power to grant ordinary leases; (2) as there was no power to grant an option to purchase otherwise than in a valid lease under the power, & the lease granted was invalid, the option to purchase must fall with the lease.—HALLETT TO MARTIN (1883), 24 Ch. 3387. — Bankruptcy of tenant for life.—T., by his will, devised certain freehold & leasehold property to a trustee, upon trust, to permit his son H. to receive the rents during his life, subject to the payment of rents & performance of the covenants reserved & contained by & in the present or future leases, whereby the leasehold premises were or should be held; & also all taxes, fines, & expenses attending the same; remainder upon trust for the sons of H. in fee, as tenants in common. The tenant for life became bkpt. & afterwards died. His assignees received a sum of £2,000 subsequent to the bkpy. for rents.—Held: these rents were liable to the fines for renewal.—*HULKES v. 3391. Power to renew—Equivalent to trust.—Testator being possessed of leaseholds for lives insured each of the lives, & by his will directed the insurances to be kept up & the leases renewed from time to time. He then gave his real & personal estate upon trust, subject to a life interest, for A. in tail:—Held: the trust for renewal was valid, but, subject to such trust, the moneys received by virtue of the policies were part of the personal estate of testator, & vested absolutely in the tenant in tail.

A power which, from the nature of the case, is one which trustees ought to exercise, will be treated by the ct. as a trust.—MELLER v. STANLEY (1864), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 183; 4 New Rep. 124; 10 L. T. 512; 12 W. R. 780; 46 E. R. 345, L. J.

3393. Renewal impossible—Expiry of time for renewal—Failure of trust.—Testator made his will in 1851, & thereby gave renewable leaseholds to his wife for life & then over, & gave his personal estate to trustees upon trust to repair & insure & renew his leaseholds at the accustomed times, & then to pay the annual proceeds to his wife for life, & after her death to pay the corpus to charities. Testator died in 1873. The time for renewing the leaseholds had expired at the time of his death, & renewal had become impossible:—Held: the trust for renewal had failed altogether.—PINFOLD v. SHILLINGFORD (1877), 46 L. J. Ch. 491; 25 W. R. 425.

3394. Renewal impossible—Sale of leaseholds—Proceeds invested.—Testator gave to his trustees a tithe rentcharge held under an ecclesiastical lease for twenty-one years which was in practice renewed every seven years on payment of a fine, upon trust to renew out of the proceeds, & to apply the surplus in a certain way during the life of his wife, & directed that after her death it should form part of his residuary estate. He gave his trustees power at any time to sell the leasehold interest. The lease having ceased to be renewable:—Held: the leasehold interest ought to be sold & the proceeds invested, & only the income of this fund & of the renewal fund applied as income.—*MADDY v. 3398. Trustee with discretionary power—Submitting to decree for sale—Court not bound to execute sale.]—A trustee having discretion to sell the trust property submitted to a decree for sale in a suit instituted in relation to the trust:—Held: the ct. was not therefore bound to carry the sale into execution.—*POLLEY v. 3400. Trustees of settlement with power of sale—Devise by tenant for life to other trustees—Whether powers over devised estate in trustees of settlement or trustees of will.]—The trustees of a settlement had vested in them a power of leasing during the minority of the beneficial owners, a power of sale & exchange at the request of the tenants for life, & a power to cut timber, but they had no legal estate, except to preserve contingent remainders.

The first tenant for life devised his own estates to other trustees in fee, to the same uses & subject to life powers as the settled estates stood limited:—Held: the powers over the devised estates were exercisable by the trustees of the settlement, & not by the trustees of the will.—TAYLOR v. MILES (1860), 28 Beav. 411; 3 L. T. 115; 6 Jur. N. S. 1063; 54 E. R. 424.

3401. — — — — —.]—By a marriage settlement real estate was devised to trustees upon trust after the death of the survivor of the husband & wife "to pay & transfer the hereditaments & premises" to the children of the marriage as the survivor of the husband & wife should appoint. The settlement contained powers for the trustees to sell the property during the lives of the husband & wife & the survivor & during the lifetime of any child. The husband survived his wife & by his will appointed the property to trustees on trust for sale & conversion & directed them to stand possessed of the proceeds upon a series of complicated trusts for the benefit of his children. The trustees of the will purporting to act under the trust for sale therein contained contracted to sell the property. The purchaser took the objection that the proper persons to sell were the representatives of the last surviving trustee of the settlement:—Held: inasmuch as the trustees of the settlement were directed to "pay & transfer" the property to the appointees the trust for sale by the trustees of the will was expressly authorised by the terms of the power & overrode the powers of sale contained in the settlement; the trustees of the will were the proper persons to sell the property & could call for a conveyance of the legal estate.—Re ADAMS' TRUSTEES & FROST'S CONTRACT, [1907] 1 Ch. 695; 76 L. 3411. Power of sale on death of tenant for life—If mortgagee will not wait for money—Power only arises on refusal of mortgagee to wait.]—A., being possessed of a copyhold estate at F., subject to a life estate of B., & also subject to a mtge. devised his freehold & copyhold estates to trustees for his two daughters, in equal moieties, as tenants in common, & they provided, that in case the mtgee. of the estate at F. would not wait & take his principal & interest out of the rents & profits of that estate, after the death of B., then his trustees should have power to sell the estate, after the death of B., he then directed that the money arising from the sale should be first applied to the discharge of the mtgee., & his other debts, & the residue equally divided between his daughters. By subsequent codicils he directed the residue of his personal estate together with the money arising from the sale of the estate at F., to be equally divided between his daughters:—Held: this does not constitute a fixed trust to be executed on the death of the tenant for life; but only gives a power to the trustees to sell, on the mtgee. refusing to wait for his money.—*BOWMAN v. “if the purchaser shall fail to comply with these conditions, his or her deposit shall be thereupon actually forfeited to the vendors,” who were to be at liberty to resell, & recover any deficiency & the cost of resale from the purchaser. Plff. paid a deposit of £300. An abstract of title was delivered within seven days; & from the abstract it appeared that the vendors sold as trustees under a will which devised the estate to them on trust to pay the income to F., testator's son in law for life, or to permit him to receive same, & after his decease, on trust to sell the estate & hold the produce” upon the trusts for the children of the said F. as therein mentioned”; it was further stated in the abstract that F. would join in conveying the property. He then proceeded to "authorise" his trustees or trustee to "adjust & pay all claims made upon my estate, & generally to act in the premises as my trustees or trustee shall in their or his discretion think fit." He appointed his trustees exors. of his will:—Held: this authority did not like a direction to pay debts, make it the duty of the trustees to pay debts out of whatever property of testator was vested in them, & did not charge the debts on the real estate, & the trustees had not during the life of the widow any power to sell the real estate.—Re HEAD'S TRUSTEES & MACDONALD (1890), 45 Ch. Two of the children of Mrs. C. were married women, having children, who were minors, & they had settled their portion of the money to arise from the sale of the estate in trust for themselves for life, with remainder to their children:—Held: neither the children of Mrs. C. nor the trustees had legal capacity to join in a conveyance.—*MOSLEY v. the proceeds in trust for his children then living, & issue then living of any deceased child or children, in substitution for their parent or parents, in equal proportions. Testator revoked the devise to G. & E. for life. G. & E. survived testator:—Held: the devise to the trustee took effect immediately upon the death of testator, & thereupon the trust for sale arose.—Re JOHNSON, DANIEL v. JOHNSON (1893), 68 L. The owner, on the marriage of his son, settled A. in strict settlement, & the trustees were empowered "from time to time, when & as occasion should require," to sell any part of A., & pay off the mtge., so as to exonerate B. The owner afterwards mortgaged B., to plff., but without any express mention of the exoneration clause. Plff. having filed a bill to enforce the exoneration clause, without making the trustees of the settlement parties, it was dismissed, with costs.*

he declared that if she should not think fit to reside therein then the premises should form part of his residuary estate. He then directed the conversion of his real, & the residue of his personal estate, & gave a power to postpone such conversion, directing the rents & profits, in the meantime to be deemed annual income. Under the trusts of the residue the widow took one-fourth of the income thereof. A railway co. having taken the premises under their compulsory powers, while the widow was in occupation, made an agreement with her as to her interest, & a separate agreement with the trustees. The latter declined to assign on the ground that the trust for sale had not arisen, & required the consideration money to be paid into ct. On a special case:—Held: their contention was right, for though the house, subject to the interest of the widow, was part of the residuary estate, it would not be a proper exercise of the trust to sell during the continuance of the occupation of the widow.—*SMITH v. D. Duration of Power.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 23.

3426. Depends on intention of donor of power.]—

A devise of real estate to the use of trustees & their heirs upon trust, as to two undivided fifths, for two persons in fee, & as to the other three-fifths, upon trust for certain persons for life, with remainder to their children in fee. A power of sale was given to the trustees. Testator died in 1830. All the trusts were exhausted except those of one share. It was the intention of testator, to be gathered from the whole will, that the power of sale should extend to all the shares:—Held: a good title could be made to the whole property under the power.

A general power of sale will be supported, if it be restricted, although not in express terms, yet by unavoidable inference, to the duration of the trusts which are within the legal limit of time: in other words, the intent of the power of sale is to be gathered from the language of testator (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*TAITE v. should have no children or if all his children died under twenty-one without issue, then their testator gave that one-fifth to three other sons, & his daughter E., equally, the share of E. to be settled in the same manner as one-fifth, originally devised for her benefit & as to another fifth share testator directed his trustees to apply the income for the maintenance of E. till she attained twenty-five or married, & if she married before she attained twenty-five, in trust to settle it, & testator then gave the trustees a power of sale "during the continuance of the trusts." W. died, leaving three infant children. E. married under twenty-five & by her marriage settlement after reciting that the real estate devised by the will had not been sold but it was intended that it should be sold under the power contained in the will, she assigned to trustees all her share in the moneys which should be produced by the sale of such real estates. The surviving trustee of the will contracted to sell the real estate of testator :—Held : as to W.'s share the trusts were still continuing, his children being infants, & as to E.'s share, the trustee took a power of sale by implication, from the mode in which that share was treated in the settlement, & the contract for sale was therefore, enforced against the purchaser.—*WOOD v. The settlement contained a collateral power of sale not in terms restricted as to time. In 1850, the daughter's issue being spent, & the daughter being a widow & more than seventy years of age, the trustee executed a deed purporting to be made in exercise of the power, & to be a conveyance of the fee simple :—Held : (1) the power was valid & subsisting at the date of the deed of 1850; (2) it was well exercised by that deed, although, under the trusts of the settlement, the effect of its exercise was to change the devolution of the property, passing it, in the events which had happened, to the daughter absolutely.—*LANTSBERY v. Where an intention is shown that the power should be exercised for the purposes of division of the estate among the persons absolutely entitled, the power does not determine on the death of the last tenant for life, but remains exercisable for a reasonable time afterwards for that purpose, & being so exercisable, does not infringe the rule against perpetuities.—Re SUDELEY (LORD) & BAINES & CO., [1894] 1 Ch. 334; 63 L. Act, the entirety of his Lancashire estates was limited to trustees for a term of one thousand years, with power to sell or exchange. In the meantime, & subject thereto, H. & G. were each entitled to a life interest in an undivided moiety of the estate. During the existence of the term the trustees were entitled to the rents & profits of the estate, which were to be applied in paying off incumbrances.—Held: (1) para 1 of Part IV. of the First Schedule to above Act, applied to land held in undivided shares vested in possession only when two elements were present, namely, the absence of any antecedent freehold estate, & present immediate beneficial enjoyment by possession, physical or notional, & therefore did not apply to this case; H. & G. were not "a person entitled to the income of 'land'" who had the powers of a tenant for life under s. 20, (1) (viii), of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18) because, undivided shares in land being excluded from the definition of "land" in that Act, it was impossible for two undivided moieties of land to constitute "land" within the sect.; & as the entirety of the estate was settled by the will, & there was no tenant for life, or person having the powers of a tenant for life, the trustees of the will had the powers of a tenant for life, & the fee simple was vested in them under above paras. & Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (b); (2) the powers of sale & exchange & other powers given to the trustees by the will remained exercisable by them.—*Re STAMFORD & WARRINGTON (EARL), PAYNE v. The trustees, purporting to exercise their power of sale, sold part of the real estate comprised in the latter residuary gift:—Held: as between the vendors & the purchaser, the power of sale was valid not on the ground that testator showed any intention that it should be exercised for the purpose of division among the beneficiaries, but on the ground that the debts & legacies were charged on the real estate.—Re DYSON & FOWKE, [1896] 2 Ch. 720; 65 L. 3464. — To raise fixed sum—Discretionary provision for valuation to ascertain amount—Trustees may sell whole of real estate in spite of provision.—A direction by testator that his trustees shall stand seised & possessed of his real & personal estate upon trust to raise & pay an annuity, & subject thereto to raise out of his real & personal estate a sufficient sum to make up, with what his daughter A. had received on her marriage, an amount equal to the property his other children would be entitled to under his will; & a devise of all his real estate & the residue of his personal estate to his other six children as tenants in common, & until a sale of all his real & personal estate should be made; & in order that no such sale should be required to ascertain the amount of the share of his daughter A., he authorised his trustees, if they should think fit, to cause a valuation to be made of his real & personal estate, & according to its amount, after deducting debts, etc., to fix the share of his daughter A., which should be accepted by her; with a further direction that she should not be entitled to any interest on her share, until each of his other children had received interest on a sum equal to the amount previously advanced to her; & that no valuation should be required to be made until each of the other children had received such equal sum; & a clause declaring that the receipts of the trustees shall be sufficient discharges for any money payable to them under his will, & that the person paying it shall not be liable to ascertain the necessity or regularity of any mtg., sale or disposition under the trusts of the will:—Held: the trustees had a power of sale of the whole real estate of testator, which it was at their discretion to exercise in case they did not think fit to proceed by way of valuation.—BIRD v. FOX (1853), 11 Hare, 40; 68 E. R. 1178.

3465. — To discharge incumbrances—Proceeds applied in paying inclosure expenses—Proceeds properly applied.—Trustees under a settlement had power to sell & exchange the estates, & were to apply the proceeds of a sale in discharging subsisting incumbrances, or in the purchase of other land. In 1852, they sold part of the estates, & paid the proceeds to the tenant for life, who applied the money in payment of the expenses of inclosures. By Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), the person in possession or receipt of the rents & profits, in this case the tenant for life, & not the trustees, may charge the allotments with the expenses of inclosure to the extent of £5 per acre by executing a mtg., & by Inclosure Act, 1848 (c. 99), the sum so raised is to be paid to the comrs. The tenant for life died without having executed such a mtg.:—Held: the sums expended were nevertheless to the extent aforesaid a charge on the allotments, & were to be allowed as a proper application of the money produced by the sale.—VERNON v. MANVERS (BARL. (1862), 31 Beav. 617; 1 New Rep. 117; 32 L. J. Ch. 244; 7 L. T. 553; 9 Jur. N. S. 9; 11 W. R. 133; 54 E. R. 1278.

3466. Sale decreed by court—To save expense.—A., by his will devises, that trustees shall sell his real estate, & what arises by such sale shall go to his daughter & her issue, & if she die without issue, then to two other daughters. Pltfs. preferred their bill to have the real estate sold, & to have the money arising by such sale; but the two daughters defts. opposed it because of the contingent interest they had by the will, in case pltf. died without issue; but pltf. insisted there could be no such limitation of a chattel, as this would be, if the land was sold; & the ct. accordingly did decree a sale to be made; for it would be preposterous to oblige the trustees to sell lands in order to lay the money arising out again on lands; & being pltf. was of age, she could bar her two sisters by a recovery, which this ct. might save the trouble & expense of, by decreeing this sale, & converting the land into money.—RIDGE v. HUDSON (1717), Bunb. 12; 145 E. R. 577.

3467. Duty to receive purchase-money personally.—There is no absolute rule that in all cases a purchaser can require the vendor to receive the purchase-money personally; but the vendor cannot refuse, where circumstances justify the purchaser in requiring him to do so. Semble: where the vendor is a trustee, such a request is reasonable.—VINEY v. CHAPLIN (1858), 2 De G. & J. 468; 27 L. J. Ch. 434; 31 L. T. O. S. 142; 4 Jur. N. S. 619; 6 W. R. 562; 44 E. R. 1071, L. C. & L. J.J.

Testator left seven children, one of whom, a daughter, afterwards died, & her husband had become absolutely entitled to her share. The trustees, with the consent of the surviving children & of the husband of deceased daughter, put up the estate for sale:—Held: the question, whether an effectual sale could be made without consent of all the seven sons & daughters, was too doubtful for the title to be forced upon a purchaser.—SYKES v. SHEARD (1863), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 6; 3 New Rep. 144; 33 L. J. Ch. 181; 9 L. T. 430; 9 Jur. N. S. 1262; 12 W. R. 117; 40 E. R. 276, L. J.

3472. Power of sale with consent of tenant for life entitled to possession—Life estate subject to annuity—Rents & profits substituted by codicil for annuity—Necessity for consent of both tenant for life & former annuitant.]—Testator by his will devised his real estates to trustees for a thousand years, & subject thereto in strict settlement. The trusts of the term were to pay testator's wife a life annuity of £200, & subject thereto, for the persons entitled under the prior limitations. He also gave the trustees a power to sell the property, the power to be exercised during the life of any tenant for life, who should be for the time being entitled to the possession, or to the receipt of the rents of the estates, with his consent. The sale moneys were to be reinvested in land. By a codicil testator directed his trustees to stand possessed of the term, & of the like term to arise in the real estates which might be purchased under the trusts of the will, on trust to pay the surplus of the rents of all the estates, after paying the interest on his mtge. & other debts, to his wife, during her widowhood, in lieu of the annuity. In case she should marry again, the trust for payment of the annuity was to take the place of the trust for payment of the surplus rents. Testator's debts having been all paid:—Held: the trustees could exercise the power of sale with the consent of the tenant for life, the widow also consenting.—ROBERTSON v. WALKER (1875), 44 L. J. Ch. 220; 31 L. T. 817; 23 W. R. 224, L. C. & L. J.

A. & B. were both dead, & C. was an infant:—Held: the trustees could during the minority of C. exercise the power of sale & enfranchisement without consent, & make a good title.—Re NEAVE & CHAPMAN & WREN (1880), 49 L. 3474. Necessity for consent of court—Administration action pending.]—TURNER v. TURNER, No. 3371, ante.

3475. ———.]—Testator devised his real estate in strict settlement. The will contained a common law power for the trustees, during the lifetime of the tenant for life with his consent, to sell the settled property. A legatee, who was also entitled in remainder to a share of the settled property subject to a life estate & estates tail, brought an action against the trustees to administer the estate. By the order made on the further consideration of the action the costs were directed to be taxed & various directions were given. Further consideration was not adjourned, but general liberty to apply was reserved. After the making of this order the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, but without the sanction of the ct. sold part of the settled estate. The trustees applied to the taxing master to have their costs incurred in relation to the sale taxed. The taxing master refused to tax them, on the ground that the trustees were not entitled to exercise the power of sale without first obtaining the sanction of the ct., having regard to the administration action. No proceedings had been taken to impeach the sale:—Held: the trustees were entitled to exercise the power of sale, & to have the costs incurred in relation thereto taxed.—*Re MANSIE, RHODES v. remain in their actual state of investment at the time of my decease; & that it shall not be necessary for them to sell my real or leasehold estates, or any part thereof, during the life of my said wife, unless she shall in writing request them so to do." The trustees were not agreed as to the expediency of a sale; but the remaindermen desired it. Testator's widow had not made any request in writing to the trustees:—Held: it was not obligatory on the trustees to sell the real & leasehold estates during the life of testator's widow, unless she should in writing request them so to do, or unless the trustees were both of opinion that a sale ought to take place; but if they did not so agree that a sale was desirable, & there was no such request in writing, then they could not be compelled to sell.—*Re LEVER, CORDWELL v. 3478. — Direction against exercise save with consent or on request—Person required to consent may keep property unsold.—A trust for sale, with a direction that it shall not be exercised unless a particular person shall in writing consent to or request a sale, is not an absolute & imperative trust to sell, but gives to the person required to consent a right to have the property retained unsold.

Where by a deed of family arrangement certain freehold, messuages, lands, & hereditaments were conveyed to trustees to be held by them in fee simple upon the trusts in the deed declared, & the deed provided that the trustees should, "upon the request in writing of the parties hereto of the first, second & third parts respectively," sell the freehold hereditaments thereby conveyed, & hold the proceeds of sale upon certain trusts, & where no request had been made to the trustees to sell the properties:—Held: the real estate comprised in the deed remaining unsold had not been converted in equity into money, but still retained its character of real estate.—Re GOSWELL'S TRUSTS, [1915] 2 Ch. 106; 84 L. 3479. Power of sale at request of person seised of freehold & inheritance—Tenant for life with ultimate remainder—Subject to intervening limitations—Request of tenant for life insufficient.—A power of sale & exchange was given to the trustees of a settlement, at the request of the person for the time being "seised of the freehold & inheritance of the manors," etc.:—Held: (1) reading the word "and" conjunctively, the power could not be exercised at the request of a tenant for life, who, subject to intervening limitations, had the ultimate remainder in fee; (2) the word "and" could not be read disjunctively as "or."—MALMESBURY v. MALMESBURY, PHILLIPSON v. TURNER (1862), 31 Beav. 407; 54 E. R. 1196.

3480. Power of sale at request of persons entitled to actual freehold—Request of tenant for life—Speculative evidence by remainderman of future increase in value—Power may be exercised in spite of such evidence.—Independently of the cumulative powers of sale given to tenants for life by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), the tenant for life & the trustees under a will which gives them power to sell the estate at the request & by the direction of the person or persons for the time being entitled to the actual freehold of the devised property, will not be restrained from selling the estate at the request & for the benefit of the tenant for life on merely speculative evidence adduced by the remainderman objecting to an immediate sale, of an expected future increase in the value of the property from the development of coal mines, & the construction of a railway through the estate.—*THOMAS v. 3481. Power to sell at request of tenant for life—Trustees must sell when requested.—Money which the trustees of a settlement are empowered to invest, at the request of the tenant for life, in the purchase of particular land is money which is "liable to be laid out in the purchase of land" within the meaning of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 33.

Where by a settlement, which comprised a moiety of certain freeholds, the trustees were empowered, at the request of the tenant for life, to invest money comprised in the settlement in the purchase of the other or unsettled moiety of the freeholds:—Held: the case came within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 33, & money in the hands of the trustees might be invested, as capital money, in the purchase by them, jointly with the owner of the unsettled moiety, of land convenient to be held together with the freeholds.

Where there is a direction or power to trustees to sell or purchase at the request of the tenant for life, that means that if the tenant for life makes the request the trustees must sell or purchase & not merely that they may do so (KEKEWICH, J.).—*Re HILL, HILL v. 3482. Power of sale "as soon as conveniently might be"—Trustees have discretion to postpone—Test of exercise of discretion.—Testator directed his trustees, "as soon as conveniently might be after his decease to sell his real estates," & invest the produce in Govt. or real securities. The trustees postponed the sales for eleven & thirteen years. The value of the estates at testator's death, was £1,580, which would then have produced £2,030 Consols. The estimate, however, realised £2,122, but which only produced £2,300 Consols:—Held: (1) under the terms of the will, the trustees had a discretionary power of postponing the sales; (2) such discretion had been discreetly exercised; (3) where trustees have a discretion, the test of a negligent breach of trust is, what would have been the course of the ct. under similar circumstances.—*WARNER v. 3484. Power of sale at discretion of trustees —Coupled with direction as to moneys arising from sale—Power nevertheless discretionary.]—

Testator after devising his real estates in strict settlement subject to the payment of his debts & legacies, declared that it should be lawful for his trustees, & he authorised & empowered them, if they in their discretion should think fit, absolutely to sell his estate at C.; & after giving them full powers in regard to the conduct of the sale, he directed & declared that they should stand possessed of the moneys arising from the sale upon trust, after payment of all costs, to apply & dispose of the remainder in such manner as thereinbefore had been directed concerning the residue of his testator's personal estate. One of the trustees was afterwards removed from his office by a codicil. The sale of the estate was not required for the payment of debts or legacies:—Held: the power of sale vested in the trustees was discretionary, & the residuary legatee of the personality could not compel a sale.—*SHIPPERDSON v. 3485. — Annuity charged on personal estate—

Personal estate insufficient—Trustees not compelled to sell real estate.]—Testator gave his real & personal estate to trustees, in trust to convert his personal estate, except his leaseholds, & out of the produce "to appropriate a sufficient portion" to pay an annuity which he had agreed to pay on the marriage of his daughter. He gave his trustees a discretionary power to sell his real & leasehold estates, & they were to hold the produce in the manner directed concerning the money arising from his residuary personal estate. The debts exhausted the personal estate, but the realty & leaseholds were sufficient to pay the annuity. A bill having been filed before the annuity was in arrear, to have a fund set apart to secure it:—Held: the trustees were not bound to sell, & ct. only made a declaration that the annuity constituted a charge on the whole estate.—BURRELL v. DELEVANTE (1862), 30 Beav. 550; 31 L. J. Ch. 365; 8 Jur. N. S. 204; 10 W. R. 362; 51 E. R. 1003.

3486. Power of sale to raise money for charges if necessary—Considerably more than required raised by sale—Sale valid.]—

Testator devised his real estates to trustees, in trust, during the first fifteen years after his death, to apply the rents in discharge of the charges & incumbrances on his estates, & also of the debts which he should owe at his decease; & if, by any reason whatever, in the opinion of his trustees, a sale should become necessary of any of the estates, for the purpose of raising any sums of money charged on his estates, before the expiration of the fifteen years, then he authorised the trustees to make such sale, & to apply the produce in discharge of such incumbrances; & he declared that their receipts for any money payable to them under his will, should discharge the persons paying the same from being answerable for the application thereof, or from being bound to inquire as to the necessity or expediency of any sale which might be made by the trustees. Testator's personal estate being insufficient to pay his debts, & the rents of his real estates being insufficient to pay the interest of the incumbrances thereon, the trustees sold the whole of the estates; & thereby raised considerably more than the amount of the incumbrances. The ct. in a suit for specific performance held that the power of sale depended on the opinion of the trustees that a sale was necessary; & decreed the purchaser to complete his purchase.—RENDLESHAM (LORD) v. MEUX (1844), 14 Sim. 240; 60 E. R. 353.

3487. Power in terms discretionary—Sale necessary to raise legacies—Trustees must sell.]—

Testator gave all his property to trustees upon trust, as to the real estate, to manage & receive the rents, with power to grant leases, & with power also, if they should consider it advisable, but not otherwise, to sell in such manner, at such time, & for such price as they should think proper, & to invest the proceeds, together with his residuary personal estate, in the securities therein mentioned. The income of the realty, until sale, & of the produce, if & when sold, together with the income of the securities arising from his residuary personalty, were given to testator's widow for life, & after her death, the trustees were directed to sell so much of the securities as would pay certain legacies; & the income of the remainder of the securities, & of his real estate, if not then sold, & until sale, & of the produce thereof, if & when sold, were given to A. for life, with remainders over:—Held: the power of sale, though in terms discretionary, was conferred upon the trustees for the purposes of the will, & inasmuch as the proceeds of sale were applicable to the payment of the legacies, it was the duty of the trustees to exercise the power for the purpose of raising the legacies, the personal estate having proved insufficient.—*NICKISSON v. entitled to indefinitely postpone the sale, & an order could be made under Trustees Act, 1883, Amendment Act, 1891, s. 16, sanctioning the carrying-on indefinitely by the trustees of the business of sheep-farmers on the estate.—RE LEVIN'S WILL, MCLEAN v. LEVIN (1905), 26 N. Z. L. R. 62.—N.Z.

the law of this etc., that where there is a power of sale & exchange given to trustees to be exercised at the request, or with the consent of the tenant for life, they may sell to the tenant for life just as they may sell to any other person. The meaning and only ground of the rule is that the request or consent of the tenant for life is made necessary for his benefit, & it does not in any respect whatever create a fiduciary character as between him & the tenants in remainder.

It is utterly immaterial what the motive of the tenant for life in requesting the trustees to exercise their power of sale may be, if the trustees obtain full value for the estate, & contemplate no personal benefit to themselves.—*DICCONSON v. 3501. Sale with concurrence of person interested—Where no power of sale in instrument.—

Testator devised the lands to be purchased with the proceeds of certain estates sold in his lifetime, to the use of trustees & their heirs, upon trust, to pay the rents & profits to his daughter, whether married or unmarried, for her separate use, & not subject to the debts or control of any husband; & after her decease, upon further trust, to convey the lands to such persons & for such uses, estates, & interests as his daughter should by will, attested by three credible witnesses, & whether married or single, appoint; & for want of such, upon trust, to convey the freehold & inheritance of the lands to the right heirs of his daughter: & testator further directed, that as to so much of such proceeds as should not have been laid out in lands, the trustees should invest the same in the public funds, & pay the dividends into the proper hands of his daughter, during her life, for her sole use & benefit, whether married or unmarried, & not subject to the debts or control of any husband; & after her decease, upon further trust, to pay & transfer the same to such persons, & for such intents & purposes, & in such manner as she should, by her last will & testament, & whether sole or covert, appoint; & in default thereof, in trust, to pay, transfer, & assign the same to the exors. or administrators of his daughter. After testator's death lands were purchased, & were conveyed to the trustees of his will, upon the trusts & for the purposes expressed & declared in the will. A contract having been subsequently entered into by the trustees for the sale of those lands:—Held: the trustees, with the concurrence of testator's daughter, could make a good title to the purchaser.—WEBB v. SHAFTESBURY (EARL) (1834), 3 My. & K. 599; 40 E. R. 228.

3502. Power of sale on failure to perform covenants—Provision for three months' notice of intention to sell—Notice given on breach but right waived—Necessity for further notice before sale.—Debtor assigned his house & business, in trust for payment of his debts, retaining to himself the management of the business, under the superintendence of the trustees, who, on his failing to perform his covenants in the trust deed, were thereby empowered, after having given him three months' notice, to sell the house & business. Such notice was given, but waived by consent of the creditors & trustees, assembled at a general meeting:—Held: a sale afterwards made by the trustees, without further notice, was unauthorised & unlawful.—TOMMEY v. WHITE (1850), 3 II. L. Cas. 49; 10 E. R. 19, II. L.

Annotation.—Mentd. Wilson v. Wilson (1854), 5 II. L. Cas. 40.

3503. Sale to raise fixed sum & expenses—Sale in two lots—Sale of first lot raising sum—Sale of second lot valid.—A trustee, having power to sell land in order to raise £800, & the expenses, put it up to sale in two lots, & sold the first for £800, & the second for £510. The second lot consisted of more than three acres of land, & was described in the particulars of sale as readily convertible into building ground:—Held: the sale of the second lot was not improper, & the purchasers must pay the costs of a suit for specific performance brought against them by the trustee.—THOMAS v. TOWNSEND (1852), 16 Jur. 736.

3504. Sale to family solicitor—Necessity for caution & inquiry as to value.—The duties of trustees selling under a trust or power to sell are not properly discharged by selling to the family solr. without proper caution & previous inquiry as to the value, the sale being a contrivance to raise money to lend to one of the cestui que trusts, to whom the trustees had power to lend it.—ROBINSON v. BRIGGS (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 188; 21 L. T. O. S. 30; 1 W. R. 223; 65 E. R. 81.

g. Court will prevent sale without reserve.—Where it appeared, that, although cestui que trust representing five-sixths of the property desired a sale without reserve, the interests of the remainder would be prejudiced by so selling, an injunction was granted to restrain such trustees from selling without a reserve bid.—DOWNY v. DENNIS (1887), 14 O. R. 219.—CAN.

The purchaser objected to the title on the ground that the two properties were sold together for one lump sum, without any provision for apportioning it, & that it was to be paid into ct. in a suit unconnected with the settlement:—Held: this objection was not sustainable, for the ct., having the money in its custody, would see it properly applied.

A power of sale was given to the mtgees. in default of payment of the money at the time appointed, & it was declared that, upon any sale, the receipt or receipts in writing of A. & B., or the survivor of them, or the executors or administrators, of such survivor, their, her, or his assigns, should be sufficient discharges to the purchasers, & it was further declared that the power of sale might be exercised by any person or persons who for the time being should be entitled to receive & give discharge for the moneys for the time being due and owing on the security of the mtge. By a memorandum of even date it was declared by A. & B. that the mtge. money belonged to them in certain specified proportions. Subsequently A.

& B. respectively assigned their respective shares in the mtge. money to separate sets of trustees on different trusts, & these trustees collectively sold part of the property under the power of sale in the mtge. On a summons taken out under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), by the purchaser, who contended that he was entitled to have the purchase-money apportioned & to separate receipts from the two sets of trustees:—Held: the money paid by the purchaser did not represent mtge. money, but was the price to be paid to persons who had the power of sale, & the joint receipt of all the trustees would be a good discharge to the purchaser.—Re PARKER & BEECH'S CONTRACT (1887), 56 L. (d) Depreciatory Conditions.

See, now, Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 13.

3531. Sale not to be prejudiced by conditions.—As to root of title.—By a deed of the year 1858, lands were conveyed to trustees on the usual trusts for sale. The trustees were unable to find a deed of 1819, through which the conveying parties to the deed of 1858 derived their title; & put up the lands for sale by auction under a condition that the title should commence with the deed of 1858, & that no earlier title should be called for except at the purchaser's expense. The lands were sold at the auction, the object of the condition being explained in the auction room. A suit to restrain completion was instituted by one of the cestuis que trust against the trustees & the purchaser. Some time after the institution of the suit, the deed of 1819 was found:—Held: this condition was calculated to depreciate the property at the auction, & was inserted without any reasonable ground; the ct. would, at the suit of a cestui que trust, restrain the purchaser from completing the sale.—DANCE v. GOLDINGHAM (1873), 8 Ch. App. 902; 42 L. J. Ch. 777; 29 L. T. 166; 38 J. P. 164; 21 W. R. 761, L. J.J.

One of the conditions of sale stipulated that no objection should be made if any lease was an underlease, or that the premises were held on the same lease with other property, or that the same were liable to superior rents or covenants. A purchaser objected to this condition as depreciatory:—Held: the solr. who prepared the conditions should have ascertained whether the leases were underleases or not; there should have been a statement of fact as to each lot, & not, as this was, a statement which might apply to any of the lots; & this was a depreciatory condition, & ought not to have been inserted by trustees.—Re RAYNER'S TRUSTEES & GREENAWAY (1885), 53 L. T. 495.

3534. —————. As to existing tenancies & restrictive covenants.—Trustees for sale under a will put up for sale by auction certain lands in numerous small lots, with conditions providing (inter alia) that the title should commence with the conveyance to testator ten years before; that every recital in any abstracted document should be conclusive evidence of the fact stated; & that the lots were sold "subject to the existing tenancies, restrictive covenants, & all easements & quit rents, if any, affecting same," & that the purchasers were to indemnify the vendors against the breach of any restrictive covenants contained in the abstracted muniments of title. The sale was made also subject to certain general conditions restricting the occupation of the land. The abstracted documents contained no other restrictive covenants than those comprised in the general conditions; & the vendors stated that they knew of no other restrictive covenants, & of no existing tenancies, easements or quit rents affecting the property:—Held: the condition as to existing tenancies & restrictive covenants was depreciatory.—*DUNN v. The trustees having refused to raise the money without the sanction of the ct., suits were instituted by the creditors & trustees, respectively, for the purpose of obtaining the benefit of the trust, & obtaining the sanction of the ct. to the raising of the money:—Held: (1) the trustees had not, by their refusal to raise the money without the sanction of the ct., abandoned their power of selection among the creditors; (2) the power of selection among the creditors was not confined to debts in existence at the death of the testator; (3) debts which, at the time of the testator's death, were barred by Stat. The will also contained a direction to the trustees not to lend any of the personal estate on mtge., & prescribed certain strict modes of investment. The cotton mill being out of repair could not be let as it then stood, the trustees, therefore, entered into a provisional agreement with a firm of cotton spinners by which the latter agreed to take a lease of the mill for twenty-one years, & to spend large sums of money in machinery & repairs, provided the trustees advanced to them, on the security of the machinery, rather more than half the sum required for such machinery & repairs, & also spent a considerable sum in the erection of steam boilers, & other landlord's fixtures. Under the terms of the will the trustees could not comply with such proposals; but, upon it being clearly proved that such an arrangement would be highly beneficial to the trust estate, & was one which it was not unusual for lessors in similar cases to enter into, the ct. sanctioned the agreement, & directed the costs of all parties to the application to come out of testator's residuary personal estate.—Re LEE'S TRUSTS (1875), 32 L. £85,000 only. The property was sold in 1898 by the then trustees of the deed of Mar. 1853, for much more than £85,000, & £4,500 was set aside by them to answer the claim of the representative of J., who had died. It was alleged by the parties interested, other than the representative of J., that the persons for the time being entitled to the rents & profits of the buildings had before the sale spent large sums in lasting improvements thereof, & they claimed that certain India Stock, then representing the sum of £4,500, should contribute a proportionate part of the expenditure on these improvements. The trustees brought an action asking for a declaration of the ct. upon the validity of the reservation & of the claim for contribution:—Held: the ct. could not direct the trustees to pay any part of the expenditure on the alleged improvements out of the India Stock, as there was nothing in the deed of Aug. 1853, providing for this, & as the ct. was not exercising its jurisdiction in partition nor dealing with the entire fund.—*Re COULSON'S TRUSTS, PRICHARD v. —Testatrix, after giving certain specific chattels, bequeathed her residuary estate to R. in trust to sell all the estate, except the leasehold house in which she had carried on business. She declared it to be her will & mind that R. should employ W., then in her service, to carry on & conduct the business until the expiration of the lease, allowing him a reasonable salary. After the expiration of the lease testatrix directed R. to sell the business, goodwill, etc. Testatrix then gave certain pecuniary legacies, & bequeathed the residue to S.:—Held: S. was not entitled to have an immediate sale.—*SAUNDERS v. 3584. ——— Direction to raise specific sum—Part of sum raised—Power of trustees to raise residue.]—Under a settlement dated in May 1860 the trustees were directed "by sale of a competent part" of stock "forthwith to raise a sum not exceeding £2,000 & pay same to E. or his assigns," & also other sums as should be required for certain purposes. In July 1860 E. requested the trustees to raise for his benefit the sum of £1,391 17s. 7d. & he subsequently applied to them to raise the sum of £808 2s. 5d. The ct. held the request to the trustees to raise £1,391 17s. 7d. only did not limit their power or diminish the amount of the fund impressed with a trust for E.'s benefit, & declared the trustees were at liberty to raise the residue.—*HARROLD v. SECT. 9.—POWER TO APPROPRIATE.

3585. Validity of appropriation—Must be confined to authorised securities.]—Testator by his will, dated Oct. 13, 1886, gave his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion, & to invest the proceeds of sale in any of the Parliamentary stocks or funds of Great Britain, or on Govt. or real or long leasehold securities in England & Wales, & to hold the same upon trust, in the first place, to pay an annuity of £100 to his son during his life or until he should assign the same, & he thereby directed & authorised his trustees to set apart, & invest in any of the investments in which the proceeds of sale & conversion of his estate was thereby authorised to be invested such a sum of money as should be sufficient at the time of such investment to pay the same annuity, & to pay the same accordingly, with power to resort to the capital of the appropriated fund whenever the income of the same should be insufficient. By a codicil dated June 1, 1887 testator increased the amount of the annuity to £250. He died in 1887. The Trust Investment Act, 1889 (c. 32), s. 3, authorises trustees to invest among other securities in India 3½ per cent. Stock on summons:—Held: the trustees were not entitled to appropriate such a sum as would, when invested in India 3½ per cent. Stock, be sufficient to answer the annuity, but they were limited to the securities authorised by the will.—Re OWTHTWAITE OWTHTWAITE v. TAYLOR, [1891] 3 Ch. 494; 60 L. J. Ch. 854; 65 L. 3586. ———]—On a contract for sale of leaseholds the purchaser objected that the vendor at the time when he bought the property was himself a trustee for sale. M. by his will gave all his real & leasehold estate, including the property in question, to his son R., & C. upon trust for sale, & to stand possessed of the proceeds upon trust to appropriate investments to answer annuities for his wife, his daughter B. & his son H. Testator gave his residue to his son R., & died in 1843. H. was at this time incapable of managing his own affairs, & so continued down to the time of his death. In 1843 Lady M. was appointed an additional trustee, & the property was vested in R., C., & her, subject to the provisions of the will. In 1847, a new trustee was appointed in place of C. by deeds which recited that the property subject to the trusts included the leaseholds, & conveyed them specially to the new trustees upon the trusts of the will. R. executed a power of attorney in favour of Lady M., & she let the property on several occasions. R. died in Oct. 1849, leaving all his property equally to Lady M., B. & H.; & in 1850 Lady M. was appointed administratrix of his estate with the will annexed. In 1853 she became the sole trustee; & in 1859 & 1866 she let the leaseholds for terms of years. She died in 1873, leaving all her property to B., & appointing her sole extrix. B. died in 1877, leaving her property to D., & appointing him & another exors. All the property remaining subject to the trusts of the will of M. thus became vested in D., & he paid into court to the account of H. certain funds on an affidavit which stated that after the death of M., his trustees got in all his real & personal estate, & appropriated £40,000 Bank Annuities, & the leaseholds in question to answer the annuities, & transferred the residue to R. In 1878 H. was found of unsound mind by inquisition, & the Master reported that the leaseholds in question belonged half to H. & half to D. absolutely, subject to H.'s annuity of £500. In 1887 D. died, & his will was proved by G., one of his exors. In 1888 H., acting by his committee, & G., by a deed which recited that they were absolutely entitled in moieties to the property, & that the Master had approved of the deed, let the property for twenty-one years. H. died in 1892, & letters of administration to his estate were granted to A., one of his next of kin. By a deed of May 19, 1893, which recited that G. was surviving trustee of the will of M., G. as trustee at the request of A., & in consideration of £3,000 paid by G. to her, & being himself entitled as beneficial owner to the other half of the property, assigned the leaseholds to P. By an indenture of May 20, 1893, P. as trustee, & at the request of G., assigned the premises to him. On Sept. 10, 1901, G. agreed to sell the property to E. for £12,200 & the purchaser took the objection that in 1893 G. was a trustee for sale of the property, & could not purchase the half of it which was then conveyed to him:—Held: if any appropriation had taken place, it was an appropriation of unauthorised securities, & was not effectual to destroy the trust for sale; until H. was found a lunatic there could be no election by the beneficiaries; there had been no election to take in specie by the ct. on behalf of the lunatic; it was not proved that there had been an election by all the persons interested; the trust for sale did not come to an end when the annuities ceased, was not void for perpetuity & was operative in 1893; & the title ought not to be forced on the purchaser.

3590. ——— Appropriation of shares in business.]

—Testator by his will devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to three trustees, two of whom were his sons, upon trust to sell & convert & to stand possessed of the proceeds upon trust for all his children, except his son J., in equal shares, & he directed that all properties & investments acquired by him in the names of any of his children or advances to or for the benefit of his children should be treated as absolute gifts to such children of the properties, investments, & advances which might be taken in their names individually or given to or for their benefit, & that such children should not be liable to repay to him or his estate the consideration which he had paid for the properties or the amounts that might have been advanced or invested on such securities or otherwise. He further directed that in the division of his estate his trustees should equalise his children's shares as far as possible by treating all gifts to them as having been made in satisfaction or part satisfaction of their shares. Testator then settled the shares of his daughters, & declared that his trustees might postpone the sale & conversion of his real & personal estate so long as they should think fit, the income of the unconverted property to go to the persons to whom the income produced by the sale & conversion would for the time being be payable if the sale & conversion had been actually made. The investment clause did not authorise the investment in the shares of private cos. Testator died in Dec. 1892, leaving six children other than J., who took no interest in the residue, namely two sons & four daughters. A considerable part of testator's estate consisted of shares in a private co. called Cravens Limited, the arts. of which contained restrictive provisions with reference to the transfer of shares. There was no market for these shares, & the trustees, although they had advertised, had been unable to obtain an offer for them. During his lifetime testator had made advances to certain of his children, & subsequently to his death the trustees had made further advances to two of his sons. The trustees had, for the purpose of dividing the income, pending the distribution of the estate, added to the income of the actual estate interest at 4 per cent. per annum on the advances to the children, & had then divided the total thus ascertained into six equal shares, & had paid one of such shares to each of the children, deducting in the case of an advanced child 4 per cent. on the amount of the advances to that child:—Held: (1) having regard to the difficulty of realising the Craven shares the principal adopted by the trustees with regard to the advances made both before & after the death of testator was the correct one; (2) the power to postpone conversion applied to the Craven shares only so long as the estate was retained by the trustees as a whole, & did not extend to authorise them to appropriate those shares to the settled shares of the daughters when the estate was divided.—*Re CRAVEN, WATSON v. The mtgor. afterwards sold the property, & the purchaser objected that the payment of the mtge.-money to the one trustee alone was not a good discharge: but the ct. was of opinion that that payment was a good discharge; the true principle being, that no person could be allowed to deal with trust-money to the prejudice of the cestui que trust, & the ct. being of opinion that there had not been any such dealing by the vendor in this case.—*HANSON v. Upon his marriage the mtgee. assigned the £1,200 to H. & H., & it was declared that the receipt or receipts of them, or the survivor of them, should be a sufficient discharge; & one of them, being the solr. of the mtgee., was allowed to retain all the deeds in both transactions. The trustees, at the request of the mtgors., sold a portion of the £3,000 & paid off the £1,200 & interest, which was received by the mtgor.'s solr., & trustee of the settlement, without the authority of his co-trustee. He gave up the deeds relating to the mtge., & signed a receipt "for self & co-trustee," but he never invested the money upon the trusts of the settlement; but he survived his co-trustee & died insolvent. Upon a bill filed by the new trustees of the mtgee.'s marriage settlement against the trustees of the £3,000.—Held: the receipt of one trustee was no discharge; the being entrusted with the deeds for safe custody did not authorise one trustee to receive the trust money; & the trustees of the £3,000 must repay the £1,200 with interest & costs.—HALL v. FRANCK (1849), 11 Beav. 519; 18 L. J. Ch. 362; 13 L. T. O. S. 338; 13 Jur. 222; 50 E. R. 918.

A mere agent of trustees is answerable only to his principal & not to cestuis que trust in respect of trust moneys coming to his hands merely in his character of agent. . . . A. not having paid this sum at the time specified in the bond, without notice to the trustees, assigned his life interest therein to B., as a security for the repayment of a debt due from A. to B. A. having afterwards become bkpt., B. filed his bill against the trustees & the assignees under the bkpcy. to obtain the benefit of his security; & a decree was made in that suit, directing the life interest of A. in the £15,000 to be sold, & the produce to be paid to B. In the course of the proceedings in the bkpcy., the assignees sold the S. estates, but the proceeds of the sale did not amount to £15,000:—Held: the trustees were entitled, as against B., to retain the annual produce of the sum for which the S. estates were actually sold, until the whole of the £15,000 should be reinstated.—*SMITH v. 3618. —[—]—By marriage settlement made in 1895 a policy of assurance on the husband's life was assigned by him to pltf. trustees upon trust on the husband's death to receive the moneys thereby assured, & to pay the income thereof to the wife during her life & after her death to hold the same in trust for the issue of the marriage as the husband & wife should jointly appoint, or in default then as the survivor should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment then in trust for the children of the marriage who being sons should attain twenty-one or being daughters attain that age or marry; & the wife thereby assigned certain reversionary property, described as the wife's fund, to the trustees upon trust to receive the same when it should fall into possession & to pay the income thereof to the wife during her life & after her death to the husband during his life & after the death of the survivor to hold the same upon the same trusts as were declared concerning the policy moneys after the death of such survivor in favour of the issue of the marriage; & the husband thereby covenanted with the trustees that he would not suffer anything whereby the policy should become void or voidable, & would duly pay the premiums for keeping on foot the policy or any policy effected as thereafter provided or for restoring the same respectively if the same respectively should have become voidable; & if the policy or policies should become void would effect a new policy or policies for the amount which would have become payable under the policy so becoming void if the husband had then died; & after a declaration that it should not be obligatory on the trustees to enforce the covenants by the husband, it was expressly provided that the trustees might in their discretion apply the income of the wife's fund towards payment of the premiums or other sums necessary "for keeping on foot or restoring" the policies or any of them. In 1897 owing to the husband's default in paying the premiums the policy lapsed & became void. The wife died in 1904. There was issue of the marriage one infant son. The husband married again, & in 1905 his life interest in the wife's fund was assigned to deft. trustees upon trusts in favour of his second wife. In 1917 the wife's fund fell into possession & pltf. trustees now claimed the right to effect a policy on the husband's life for the amount of the lapsed policy out of the income of the wife's fund:—Held: (1) as a matter of construction the express power conferred on pltf. trustees to apply the income of the wife's fund in keeping on foot or restoring the policies did not extend to a lapsed policy; (2) on general principles of equity neither the husband nor his assignees could take anything out of the wife's fund without first making good to the trust estate the loss occasioned by the husband's default in allowing the original policy to lapse, & pltf. trustees were therefore entitled to retain the income of the wife's fund during the husband's life until a policy upon his life for the amount covered by his covenant had been effected in their names or until there had been retained thereout a sum equal to the surrender value for the time being of the original lapsed policy.—*Re JEWELL'S SETTLEMENT, WATTS v. 3619. — Beneficiary executor of settlor.—The personal interests of a trustee in a trust fund in ct. will be made applicable to the discharge of all claims against him as trustee.

A. was entitled to a share of funds held upon the trusts of his father's marriage settlement, & for which his father's estate was liable. He was one of his father's exors. In a suit to administer the trusts of the settlement & his father's estate, a large balance was found due from A. as exor.:—Held: the trustees of the settlement was entitled to retain such balance out of A.'s share, & purchasers from A., pending the suit, with notice of the proceedings, were bound by the same equity.—IRBY v. IRBY (No. 3) (1858), 25 Beav. 632; 32 L. T. O. S. 141; 4 Jur. N. S. 989; 6 W. R. 853; 53 E. R. 778.

3620. — In respect of over-payments—Recovery of Income tax paid on annuities.—By indenture made in 1885, after reciting a decree for judicial separation & an order of the Divorce Ct. directing the husband to pay to the wife permanent alimony at the rate of £200 per annum, the husband covenanted with the wife that he should in substitution for the permanent alimony directed by the order pay to her during her life the sum of £200 per annum subject to a provision that if he should make default in so doing the wife should be at liberty to enforce payment by process under the order as well as by action on the covenant, the intention being that the order should be a collateral & additional security for the covenant thereinbefore contained. The husband died in 1907, having by his will bequeathed his residuary estate to his exors. & trustees upon certain trusts in favour of his four sons, one of whom subsequently died, having bequeathed his one-fourth share to his wife absolutely. The husband during his lifetime, & his exors. & trustees after his death, had paid the wife's annuity in full without deducting income tax:—Held: (1) on true construction of the deed the wife's annuity was payable subject to, & not free from, income tax; (2) past overpayments in respect of income tax having been made under a mistake of law were not recoverable as a debt from the wife & could not be deducted either from future payments of the annuity or from the wife's share in the residuary estate of the husband.—*Re HATCH, HATCH v. 3622. General rule.—A share of a trust fund can be retained against a liability to the fund of the party entitled to it, though he is entitled to it by way of derivative title only.

Testator bequeathed a legacy to the wife of D., a trustee of his will, & D. subsequently became entitled to the legacy as his wife's sole exor. & legatee. D. died without having taken out probate to his wife's estate, & at his death he was found to have died insolvent. The legacy had never been paid over, but during his lifetime D. had misappropriated a sum of money belonging to testator's estate:—Held: the legacy could be retained by the surviving exor. of testator's estate to the full extent necessary to make good the misappropriation, although D. had never proved his wife's will.—*Re DACRE, WHITAKER v. Interest on the deposit was from time to time paid by the bank to the father. By his will the father gave legacies & shares of residue to the two sons. At the date of his death the sons owed £3,858 to the bank, & the sons were afterwards adjudicated bkpts. The bank proved in the bkpcy. for the whole £3,858. No dividend having yet been paid in the bkpcy., but it being admitted to be improbable that the estate would realise enough to pay the bank in full, & that the bank would ultimately appropriate the deposit of £2,400 towards the payment of the firm's debt:—Held: the trustees of the father's will were not entitled to retain the legacies & shares thereby bequeathed to the sons against the liability of the father's estate as surety to the bank, but the trustee in the bkpcy. was entitled to receive those legacies & shares.—Re BINNS, LEE v. The bank as principal creditors valued their security & proved for the whole balance of their overdraft, on which they received under 10s. in the pound, & had no chance of obtaining full payment. The exors. as sureties were then compelled to pay the sum of £313, the full amount for which they were liable under the guarantee. The bank, with the concurrence of the legatee's trustee in bkpcy., subsequently sold the reversionary share to an assignee. The trustees sold out £1,000, & advanced the funds partly according to the power, & partly to the legatee personally. With a view to indemnity the trustees insured the legatee's life. GARDINER (1853), 17 Beav. 338; 51 E. R. 1064.

3635. Power to pay annuity—Annuity increased on payment off of incumbrances—Payment of larger sum though incumbrances still subsisting.—Testator devised his real estate to trustees in trust to pay an annuity of £0,000 a year to his daughter, & subject thereto upon trust to accumulate the rents for twenty-one years, & out of the accumulated fund from time to time to pay his debts, legacies, & the incumbrances on the estates, & invest the residue in the purchase of lands to be held on the same trusts; & he directed the estates, on the expiration of the trust for accumulation, to be settled in strict settlement. He directed that as soon as the incumbrances were paid off, the annuity of £0,000 should be increased to £8,000. He gave his residuary personal estate to his trustees upon trust to pay off the incumbrances, & apply the surplus in the same way as the accumulated rents & profits. He died leaving personalty which, within a month after his death, was ascertained to be amply sufficient to pay off his debts, legacies, & incumbrances. The trustees, however, retained a considerable part of the personal estate, as it was producing a high rate of interest; & they did not for several years pay off all the incumbrances:—Held: the trustees were right in paying the annuity at the rate of £8,000 a year from testator's death, & must be allowed it in their accounts.—ASTLEY v. ESSEX (EARL) (1871), 6 Ch. App. 898; 25 L. T. 470, L. J.J.

3636. Covenant in settlement to pay sum of money—Discretion as to time of payment.—A deed, after reciting that A. was desirous of securing the payment after his decease of the several annuities & the gross sum thereafter respectively specified, to the several persons thereafter named, contained a covenant by A. with trustees that if B. should attain the age of twenty-one years, either in the lifetime or after the decease of A., then the heirs, exors. or administrators of A. should at such time after his death, or after the day on which B. should attain the age of twenty-one years, whichever should last happen, as the trustees or the survivors or survivor of them should in their or his uncontrolled discretion think fit, & either in one sum or from time to time in various sums, pay to B. or for his use or benefit, any sum not exceeding £300, without any deduction or abatement whatever. The covenant, as originally drawn, was an absolute covenant for the payment of £300, but was altered by the direction of the covenantor at the time when he executed the deed. The sum of £300 was the only gross sum mentioned. The trustees proposed to exercise their discretion by paying B. £5, & expressed their intention of not exercising it further for his benefit:—Held: the discretion of the trustees was confined to the time at which the sum or sums were to be paid to B., & he was entitled to the full sum of £300.—PALMER v. NEWELL (1872), 25 L. T. 892.

3638. Power to carry on business—On bequest of business on trust for sale—With power to postpone.—Testator devised & bequeathed his real & personal estate, which included his business, upon trusts for sale & conversion, the proceeds to be invested & to be held upon trust for his wife for life, & afterwards for his children. The will contained a power to postpone the sale, with the usual direction that the income until sale should be paid to the same persons & in the same manner as the income of the trust estate. The trustees carried on testator's business for twenty-two years, not with a view to a sale, but for the benefit of the widow, to whom the whole of the profits were paid as income:—Held: the absolute discretion given to the trustees to postpone the sale involved a power to carry on the business during the period of postponement; the trustees were justified in carrying on the business as they had done, & the whole of the profits of the business had been properly paid to the tenant for life.—Re CROWTHER, MIDGLEY v. CROWTHER, [1895] 2 Ch. 56; 64 L. J. Ch. 537; 72 L. T. 762; 43 W. R. 571; 11 T. L. R. 380; 13 R. 496.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See, now, Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), ss. 1–11.

3640. Duty to invest.—Distinction between a trustee undertaking to make good a debt due to the estate, & actually receiving payment, in the one case being bound to invest it, i.e. if the money be received; but secus where the trustee merely undertakes to make it good, the debtor not being discharged.—BIRD v. JOHNSON (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 320; 18 Jur. 976; 2 W. R. 692.

3641. —[A will appointing trustees only authorised them to invest in Parliamentary stocks or funds, or in freehold, copyhold, or leasehold hereditaments.

The will contained a provision that no trustee should be answerable for any banker, broker, or other person in whose hands any moneys might be deposited for safe custody or otherwise.

The trustees left the sum of £500 on deposit at a bank, by way of interim investment, whilst they looked for a mtge., for fourteen months, when the bank failed. Upon the question whether the trustees were liable for the loss thereby occasioned:—Held: fourteen months was too long for the trustees to leave trust money on deposit at a bank; if after six months they could not get a mtge. they ought to have invested the money in Consols; from the moment they left it too long on deposit, they became responsible for the consequences of their default, & were therefore liable for the sum lost to the trust estate.—CANN v. CANN (1884), 51 L. T. 770; 33 W. R. 40.

One trustee absconded, having converted the bonds in his hands:—Held: the investment was, on the terms of the will, authorised, but, the innocent trustee having on the construction of the trust committed a breach of trust in leaving the securities in his co-trustee’s hands, was liable at the option of the cestuis que trust to replace the bonds or to pay the amount for which they were sold, or, if that could not be ascertained, the market value at the date when they were left in the hands of the defaulter.—*LEWIS v. (2) Shares, which, by the rules of a co., could only be held in the name of a single person, were bequeathed specifically to three trustees for A. for life with remainder over:—Held: they might lawfully be held in the name of a single trustee.—*CONSTERDINE v. Propriety of investment as between tenant for life & remainderman—Neither to be benefited at expense of other.—Where the question as to the propriety of an investment by trustees for a tenant for life & remainderman arises between the two latter parties, while the ct. will not, on the one hand, sanction a collusive & fraudulent investment that would have the effect of diminishing the capital sum to which the remainderman will be entitled on the death of the tenant for life; yet, on the other hand, it is not in the power of the remainderman to require the investment to be made at the lowest rate of interest, in order that the capital sum may be increased.—*VICKERY v. 3658. "Securities"—Interpreted as "Investments."—Re RAYNER, RAYNER v. RAYNER, No. 3587, ante.

3659. ———.]—Under a marriage settlement the trustees were directed to stand possessed of certain scheduled shares, stock, & securities upon trust at any time, with the usual consents, to sell the same & invest the proceeds in various investments, including "the purchase of freehold ground rents," with power from time to time "to vary or transfer such stocks, funds, shares or securities into or for others of the same or a like nature." The trustees purchased freehold ground rents, & in 1901 the tenant for life under the settlement agreed to sell the same. The purchasers objected to the title on the ground that the trustees were not trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts:—Held: the word "securities" in this settlement meant anything to be purchased under the power, & having regard to the power to vary & transfer the "securities" the trustees had power to sell the ground rents, & were consequently trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts.—Re TAPP & LONDON & INDIA DOCKS Co.'s CONTRACT (1905), 74 L. 3660. ———.]—Testator, who died in 1895, by his will devised & bequeathed his real estate & the residue of his personal estate upon trusts for his wife & children; & testator, after giving his trustees a discretionary power of sale over his real estate, authorised them to invest any trust moneys in their hands "in the purchase or upon mtge. of freehold or leasehold properties in England . . . or in or upon the preferential stocks" of certain railway cos., "or in any other investment in or upon which trustees are authorised by law to invest trust funds, with full power to vary & transpose such securities for others of the description hereinbefore authorised." The will contained no express trust or power for reconversion of purchased real estate. In 1896 the trustees out of trust moneys in their hands purchased real estate, & in 1903 contracted to resell the same. The purchaser objected that the trustees had no power under the will to resell the purchased real estate:—Held: testator had used the word "securities" in its wider sense as a synonym for "investments"; & the power to transpose & vary "securities," so read, enabled the trustees to resell the purchased real estate & to give a good discharge for the purchase-money.—Re GENT & EASON'S CONTRACT, [1905] 1 Ch. 386; 74 L. Testator's estate included a sum of £2,900 on deposit with an industrial firm in whose employment testator had been for many years:—Held: the money could not be treated as "invested," & consequently the trustees could not allow the same to remain on such deposit.—Re SUDLOW, SMITH v. SUDLOW (1914), 59 Sol. Jo. 162.

3662. "Invest"—Application of money in purchase of property yielding income.]—Testator devised & bequeathed the remainder of his personal estate & all his real estate to his exors. upon trusts for sale & conversion, & to stand possessed of the proceeds after payment of debts, etc., upon trust for all his children equally, & testator settled the share of each daughter upon usual trusts. Clauses 5 & 6 of the will gave the trustees a discretionary power to postpone the sale & conversion of the residuary estate during such period as they should think fit, & to manage & let the real estate until sold as if they were the absolute beneficial owners thereof. Clause 8 authorised the trustees in their discretion to continue any investments testator might have at his death, notwithstanding that they might not be of the nature of trust investments, & Clause 10 authorised the trustees to invest any money forming part of his trust estate upon such stocks, funds, shares & securities or other investments of whatsoever nature & where-soever as his trustees should in their absolute & uncontrolled discretion think fit with the like power of varying such investments to the intent that his trustees should have the same full & unrestricted powers of investing & transposing investments as if they were absolutely entitled thereto beneficially. There was no express power to retain real estate unconverted during the trust & no express power of appropriation. All the debts, etc., had been paid, & the exors. held the clear residue of the estate as trustees, & desired to appropriate parts of the residuary real estate towards satisfaction of the settled shares of the married daughters:—Held: upon the true construction of Clause 10 the trustees had power to invest in the purchase of real estate, & could therefore validly appropriate parts of the unsold real estate in or towards satisfaction of the settled shares of the married daughters. Qu.: whether Clauses 5 to 8 conferred on the trustees power to retain the residuary real estate unconverted during the continuance of the trusts.—*Re WRAGG, WRAGG v. The husband died & the wife married again:—Held: the trustees were not bound on the application of the wife & her second husband to invest any of the stock on leaseholds although the security might be eligible & for a longer term than sixty years.—LACE v. YOUNG (1843), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 532; 12 L. J. Ch. 478; 7 Jur. 761; 63 E. R. 238.

3666. ———.]—Trustees were “authorised & empowered” with the “consent & direction” of the tenant for life, to lay out the trust moneys on “leasehold hereditaments” “in some convenient place”:—Held: (1) it was imperative on the trustees, on the requisition of the tenant for life, to invest in leaseholds, & they could not refuse to do so, on the ground of the liabilities to be incurred by them on the covenants, they having expressly contracted on the subject, but they had a discretion to exercise as to value, title, & locality; (2) leasehold houses were within the power.—*BEAUCLEIK v. The trustees, without any consent, invested the trust money in debentures of a railway, which were afterwards paid off, & the money then received, was in like manner, reinvested in debentures of another line. The dividends on that line were guaranteed by the contractors of it. The tenant for life & her husband, pltf., joined in signing the receipts for the dividends from the latter investment, till the contractors failed, when the line ceased to pay anything. Pltf.'s wife died; but after her death pltf. received a dividend from the subsequent investment. On a bill filed by him against the trustees of the settlement, to make them liable for a breach of trust:—Held: the previous consent in writing of pltf.'s wife was not required to an investment by the trustees; & he could not now make them liable for a breach of trust.—*STEVENS v. —After an administration decree has been made all powers of management of the estate which may be vested in trustees are subject to the control of the ct.; & the judge who exercises such control must be personally satisfied of the propriety of the course proposed to be adopted by the trustees.

Trustees having power to invest certain moneys belonging to testator's estate at their discretion, & having also power to continue or change securities from time to time as to the majority should seem meet, applied to the ct. in a suit for the administration of the trust estate for liberty to invest the moneys in & to convert securities into American funds or railway stocks. m. Exclusion of British Funds—Right to invest in English realty.]—A will contained the following investment trustees are directed to pay a certain sum to a person for life, & are empowered according to their discretion to invest the trust funds out of which that sum is to arise, but decline or neglect to act, & the assistance of a ct. of equity is sought in order to carry into effect the purposes of the will, the ct. will not, as a matter of course, exercise that discretion, but will only act on its established & known rules, unless the intention of testator plainly appears to exclude such a mode of proceeding.

If a gift be to one for life, with remainder to another, the ct. considering that there is a clear intention of giving to the remainderman that which the first taker was to have for his life, will prevent perishable & temporary interests from being wholly enjoyed by the tenant for life, & the remainderman disappointed. . . . This just purpose can only be effected by a conversion in some cases of the perishable property, & giving the party entitled for life only the enjoyment of the parts of that into which the corpus has been converted. . . . But as this proceeds wholly upon a regard for testator's manifest intention, a like regard must be paid to whatever indicates a design on his part that, notwithstanding the form of the gift, the first taker should enjoy the subject-matter in specie (LORD BROUGHAM).—*PRENDERGAST v. He then gave his thirty shares in the Leeds Banking co. to the same trustees upon the same or the like trusts as were declared concerning the sum of £2,000 & the cottages. The banking co. failed, & the trustees had paid large sums out of testator's estate on account of these thirty shares. provided that, if any differences should arise between his trustees as to making or varying any investment under his will, a named trustee should have the sole power of deciding. Testator directed his trustees to stand possessed of the residuary moneys & investments for the time being, representing same in trust to pay the income to his wife during her life, & after her decease to her infant daughter for life, & after her death to hold the corpus in trust for her children in equal shares, with trusts in default of children attaining vested interests for testator's widow & his brother F. o. Whether trustee may apply for shares in new company—Reconstruction of company.—Trustees who are empowered to hold shares in a co. had obtained an order authorising them to take up new shares in the co. when it increased its capital. The co. was subsequently reconstructed, & the trustees were entitled to paid up shares in the reconstructed co. by virtue of their holding in the present co.:—Held: on the consent of the tenant for life & remainderman being filed the trustees should be authorised to take up the shares in the reconstructed co., but must apply for leave exercise any preferential right that might be offered to them to subscribe for new or other shares in any co., in which they held shares or stock & to dispose of same, & every premium or profit arising therefrom was to be applied by them as if the same were income. One of the investments so transferred to the trustees consisted of one hundred & nine shares in an American financial co., called the Northern Securities co., which was formed to acquire & hold shares in other corps. & held a large number of shares in & controlled the policy of two American railway cos., the Great Northern Ry. Co., & the Northern Pacific Ry. co. In 1904 the capital stock of the Northern Securities co. was cancelled to the extent of 99 per cent., & in lieu of their one hundred & nine shares in that co., the trustees of the settlement received thirty-two fully paid up shares & a fractional share in the capital stock of the Great Northern Ry. co., forty-two fully paid up shares & a fractional share in the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Ry. co., & one fully paid up share & a fractional share in the Northern Securities co.

In 1905 & 1906 the trustees received three options to take up new stock in respect of the thirty-two shares in the Great Northern Ry. co., & of the forty-two shares in the Northern Pacific Ry. co., & in exercise of these options they paid certain instalments & in one instance sold the right of option. The husband having died & there being no children of the marriage the wife claimed the proceeds of the options as income under clause 11 of the settlement subject to repaying the trustees what had been paid in respect of the new shares:—Held: the shares in the two railway cos. were not the same shares which were transferred to the trustees at the date of the settlement, & the trustees were not authorised by the terms of the settlement to retain them.—*Re ANSON'S SETTLEMENT, LOVEFACE (EARL) v. 3704. Whether trustees may invest in trustee securities.—When not authorised by trust instrument.—A jointress was entitled to an annuity of £500, originally charged upon hereditaments which had been sold & were now represented by a sum of Consols., the dividends of which were insufficient to pay the annuity; & the trustees of the fund were empowered to invest the same in some or one of the Parliamentary stocks or public funds of Great Britain, or at interest upon Govt. or real securities in England or Wales, & to vary securities. One of the trustees refusing to consent to any change of security being made, with the view of obtaining a larger income. 3757.—(1) Trustees of a settlement only authorising investments in Govt. or real securities, advanced part of the trust moneys to a banking firm, in which one of the trustees was a partner, on the security of a mtge. of bonds in which some of the bankers were obligees. Afterwards another partner in the bank was appointed a new trustee of the settlement. The trust moneys were not called in. On the bankers becoming bkpt.:—Held: there was a breach of trust on the part of the new trustee, constituting a provable debt against his separate estate.

(2) Other part of the trust moneys was paid with other moneys indiscriminately into the bank of the firm, to the private account of one of the partners, & an amount equal to the interest on these trust moneys was credited regularly by his direction to one of the persons interested under the settlement, but no other circumstance was in evidence to affect the other partners with notice that the money thus paid in was subject to the trusts:—Held: the payment of interest was not sufficient for that purpose, & the money paid in did not constitute a provable debt against the separate estates of the other partners.

(3) The new trustee did not inquire whether the old trustees had received further trust moneys under a covenant in the settlement to settle future property:—Held: this was not sufficient ground for charging him for wilful default in respect of sums which ought to have been got in by the old trustees, or in respect of sums received by the covenantor after the appointment of the new trustee & not settled, there having been nothing to lead to a suspicion that any default had been made by the old trustees or the covenantor in those respects.—*Re STRAHAN, Ex p. The son paid the money to the husband, before the expiration of the three years, & the trustees took a bond for securing it:—Held: were justified in anticipating the time of payment, but not in taking the bond.—*MILLS v. The wife authorised an immediate loan of part, & of the remainder at such times as the husband might require, & the husband covenanted to pay it in six months. The money was not called in, & was lost by the insolvency of the husband:—Held: (1) the wife's consent could not be given prospectively; (2) the trustees were not bound to call in the money at the end of six months.—CHILD v. CHILD (1855), 20 Beav. 50; 52 E. R. 521.

3762. — — — Investment continued on execution of bond.]—Trustees of a marriage settlement were empowered, with consent of the husband & wife, to invest the funds on such security, "either real or personal," as they with such consent, should think proper. At the date of the marriage a sum of £2,500, part of the trust funds, was outstanding on the note of the husband, having been advanced to him by the intended wife prior to the marriage. A separation having taken place, but the wife, nevertheless, desiring that the fund should remain in the husband's hands:—Held: this investment might be continued until further order on the husband executing a bond to the trustees for the £2,500.—*PICKARD v. 3764. Loan to firm—Effect of change in constitution of firm.]—Testator who died in 1870 by his will authorised his trustees to invest his personal estate "either by placing same on deposit in the hands of the firm of B. T. & co., should they be willing to receive it at interest," but if not, then upon usual securities with liberty "to call in, vary, & transpose investments." At the time of his death testator had a sum of money on deposit with the firm, which his trustees continued after his death:—Held: it was a breach of trust to continue the loan after a change took place in the members constituting the firm.—RE TUCKER, TUCKER v. TUCKER, [1894] 1 Ch. 724; 63 L. J. Ch. 223; 70 L. T. 127; 42 W. R. 266; 38 Sol. Jo. 218; 8 R. 113; on appeal, [1894] 3 Ch. 429.

3765. — — —.]—A power to lend trust money to a firm consisting of certain individuals does not authorise a loan to a firm differently constituted, whether including more individuals or less.

Testator who had been a partner in the firm of A. & co. nominated his wife & two of the three remaining partners in the firm as his trustees, &

he specially authorised his trustees to allow his share of the capital to remain as a loan to the firm so long as his trustees should think it safe to allow it to remain. The wife died. The amount of the capital was ascertained & continued as a loan to the firm, but without any bond or other obligation being given for it. The third partner, not a trustee, was dissatisfied with the conduct of the firm's business, the result being that he agreed to retire under an agreement by which the two trustee partners paid him a sum of £9,000 for his interest in the firm & by which the trustee partners undertook to meet all the liabilities of the firm, take over all the assets, & relieve the third partner of all debts. The new firm was carried on by the two trustee partners under the old name, & it paid a half-year's interest on the debt due to the trust estate. A year after the retirement of the third partner, the trustee partners, as trustees, granted to the old firm & the third partner a discharge of the debt due to the trust, & about a month afterwards the new firm became insolvent & the two partners bkpt. The trustee partners resigned their trusteeship & new trustees were appointed, who acted as creditors on the new firm & received a dividend out of the new firm's assets. They then raised against the retired third partner this action, claiming reduction of the discharge & payment of the balance of the trust debt:—Held: the discharge was a breach of trust on the part of the trustee partners from which the third partner could not profit, the discharge being gratuitous; the actings of the new trustees in ranking as creditors on the new firm's assets did not discharge the liability of the old firm; & the third partner was liable to make good the loss to the trust estate.—*SMITH v. 3774. — Equity of redemption.]—In 1874 A. settled certain funds upon trust for himself for life, & after his death upon trust, as to one-fifth, for W. & his children. By the settlement A. reserved to himself for life the power to direct the investments of the trust funds as though he were absolute owner; & after his death, the trustees were empowered to invest the trust funds upon freehold, leasehold, or chattel real securities "including equitable mtges by a deposit," with the usual power to vary investments. The settlement also contained the usual power to invest in the purchase of freeholds or long leaseholds. In 1877 A. died, & at that time £6,400, part of the trust funds, stood invested on second mtge. of certain freeholds & leaseholds, S. being the mtgor. In 1878 S. became financially embarrassed, foreclosure or sale by the first mtgees. was imminent, which would have resulted in the total loss of the £6,400, & thereupon the trustees, acting bonâ fide & with a view to save the trust estate, purchased of S. his equity of redemption for £2,000. In 1879 L., a beneficiary, commenced an action against the trustees & W., alleging improper investments, & claiming administration & accounts on the footing of wilful default. The trustees, in their answers to interrogatories, set out clearly the circumstances attending the purchase of the equity of redemption. In 1880 the usual judgment for administration was obtained, including an inquiry as to the improper investments. In 1881, before the Chief Clerk made his certificate, a compromise of the action was sanctioned by the ct. on petition, to which all parties interested, including W.'s children, were parties, under which L.'s share of the trust estate was raised & paid out to her, & all further proceedings in the action were stayed. The petition did not refer to the alleged breaches of trust. In Apr. 1888, W.'s children commenced an action against the same trustees alleging that the purchase of the equity of redemption was a breach of trust & claiming usual relief. Defts. denied the breach of trust & asserted that under the circumstances the purchase was prudent & proper. They also pleaded the order of compromise in the first action in bar of pltf.'s claim:—Held: (1) the purchase of the equity of redemption was an unauthorised investment & a breach of trust; (2) the compromise was not a bar to pltf.'s claim, the breach of trust not having been by negligence, inadvertence, or accident, omitted to be brought before the ct. on the hearing of the petition.—WORMAN v. WORMAN (1889), 43 Ch. D. 296; 61 L. T. 637; 38 W. R. 412.

such rents & profits in such purchases as he had thereinbefore directed to be made with his personal estate, & should from time to time collect & receive, & lay out & invest, the rents & profits" of such real estate "in the manner hereinbefore directed with respect to the rents & profits of the hereditaments originally purchased." He also directed that the trustees should from time to time cut down such timber as should be upon the lands devised & directed to be purchased as should be fit to be cut down, & to sell & dispose of the same, & to lay out & invest the money arising by such sales in such purchases as thereinbefore directed to be made with regard to his personal estate, & the rents & profits of his real estate. He further empowered his trustees, "until a convenient purchase or convenient purchases could be made, to permit such part of his personal estate as was then invested in the funds, or consisted of securities, & to invest or place out the money to arise from such part of his personal estate as should not at his decease consist of money, & from the rents & profits of no hereditaments to be purchased as aforesaid, or for the sale of the timber, in the Govt. funds or real security, & from time to time to sell & call in the same, & again invest the same as his trustees should think proper, until a convenient purchase could be found, or until a sufficient sum should be accumulated to make a proper purchase"; & after the death of the survivor of the persons during whose lives the accumulations were to be made, testator directed a partition to be made by his trustees of his estates, & the whole thereof to be divided into three lots of equal value, or as near thereto as possible, & that the premises contained in one of such allotments should be conveyed to the use of "the eldest male lineal descendant then living" of each of his three sons, with remainders over.

The trust for investment in the funds until a proper purchase was made applied to the rents & profits of all lands that might thereafter be purchased, & that trust impliedly authorised the investment in land of the rents & profits of all the estates.—*THELLUSSON v. 3778. Trustees must not purchase on speculation.—No money in hand at time of purchase.—In 1873 the vicar of a parish, with the consent of the patron of the living & the approval of the Ecclesiastical Comrs., contracted under the powers of Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts, 1842 & 1858, to sell the glebe land of the vicarage for £24,963, to the trustee of a will by which estates were devised in strict settlement. The then tenant for life & the Comrs. were parties to the contract. Under the will the trustees held testator's personal estate upon trust for investment in the purchase of land to be settled to the same uses as the settled estates. The title was accepted, & the tenant for life, with the approval of the trustee, entered into possession of the glebe land & paid the vicar interest on the purchase-money, & this payment was continued by successive tenants for life to the vicar & his successor until 1896, the purchase-money not having been paid. At the date of the contract the trustee had no trust funds under his control available for the payment of the purchase-money, the whole or nearly the whole of testator's personal estate remaining after investments in land having been advanced upon the security of policies of insurance upon the life of the third tenant for life of the estates, who did not die till many years afterwards. In 1896, the purchase-money not having been paid, the Comrs. brought an action, against the then tenant for life, the personal representatives of the trustee who had entered into the contract, & the then trustees of the settled estates, for the specific performance of the contract, or for an account & a declaration that plffs. were entitled to a vendor's lien on the land sold & the enforcement of the lien. The then vicar was made a deft. & the then tenant in tail was afterwards added as a deft. The glebe land had become of much less value than the price agreed to be given for it. The estate of the trustee who had entered into the contract had been distributed after proper statutory advertisements. The estates had been disentailed & resettled & the money secured by the policies had been also disentailed, & had been distributed by the trustees of the resettlement among the persons entitled thereto:—Held: the contract for the purchase of the glebe land having been made at a time when the trustee had no funds under his control available for the payment of the price, & it being uncertain what the value of the land might be at the time when he would be in a position to pay them on favourable terms:—Held: the case was not within the Act.—Re TYRRELL'S TRUSTS (1889), 23 L. R.

for it, the contract was a speculative one not authorised by the trust for investment in land; consequently the trustee had no right to an indemnity out of the settled estates, & plffs. had therefore no right by subrogation; plffs. had no remedy against the owners of the settled estates; & their only remedy was by a lien for the unpaid purchase-money upon the land sold.—*ECCLESIASTICAL COMRS. v. SECT. 5.—VARIATION OF INVESTMENTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

3781. Onus of proof on trustee—To justify variation.—It is the duty of a trustee who executes a power to show that he has complied with the exigencies required by it. So where he varies the investment of the trust fund, the burden of proof lies on him to show that it is a fit & proper investment.—NORRIS v. WRIGHT (1851), 14 Beav. 291; 51 E. R. 298.

Annotations:—Refd. Smithwick v. Smithwick (1861), 5 L. T. 23. Mentd. Macleod v. Annesley (1853), 17 Jur. 608.

3782. Power to vary with consent of tenant for life—Refusal of consent—Duty of trustee to reinvest—Existing security inadequate.—Where trust funds are invested on inadequate security, it is the duty of the trustees to reinvest them, although the written consent of the tenant for life, rendered necessary to any change in the investment, is refused, & the security is one expressly authorised by the trust.—HARRISON v. THEXTON (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 550.

3784. Trust to invest in real estate with full power to vary—Right to invest in personal securities.—Gift of residue of testator's personal estate to trustees upon trust to call in & receive all his debts, etc., then due & owing, & invest the moneys collected at interest upon real securities in England, with full power to change the securities or funds from time to time as the trustees should seem good, & after the decease of his, testator's wife, to apply one third part of such trust moneys, stock funds, & securities, to the treasurers of certain charities therein named:—Held: the trustees had a discretion to invest the residue in other than real securities, & the bequest of part thereof to charitable purposes was good.—GRAHAM v. PATER-NOSTER (1862), 31 Beav. 30; 31 L. J. Ch. 444; 26 J. P. 196; 8 Jur. N. S. 127; 10 W. R. 209; 54 E. R. 1048.

3785. Donee of power of appointment—Cannot alter range of investment of unappointed funds.—Where the donee of a power of appointment does not appoint to objects of the power he cannot alter the range of investments authorised by the instrument creating the power.

Testator by his will gave all his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust to sell & convert & to invest the proceeds in certain investments which did not include mtges. of leaseholds & he directed them to pay the income of the trust estate to his wife for life, & after her death to hold the trust estate upon trust for such of his nine children as his wife should by will or codicil appoint, & in default of appointment upon trust to divide the same among his nine children in equal shares. Testator's widow by her will, in exercise of the power given her by testator's will, appointed certain sums to her daughters in respect of their one-ninth shares, & declared that the trustees of testator's will might invest the moneys subject to the trusts of that will in certain securities which were not within the range of investments thereby authorised including mortgages of leaseholds. By a codicil to her will the widow, in further exercise of the power, declared that the trustees of testator's will should hold two of the one-ninth shares of the trust estate upon trusts in favour of certain objects of the power & subject to a slight modification in the amounts of the sums appointed by her will, made by a second codicil she allowed the bulk of the trust estate to pass under testator's will in default of appointment. After her death the trustees of testator's will invested part of the trust estate upon mtge. of certain leasehold premises:—Held: the trustees of testator's will had no power to invest upon leasehold security funds representing shares subject to the trusts of the will passing in default of appointment.—Re FALCONER'S (WILLIAM) TRUSTS, Re FALCONER'S (ANN) TRUSTS, PROPERTY & ESTATES CO., LTD. v. FROST, [1908] 1 Ch. 410; 77 L. J. Ch. 303; 98 L. T. 536.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Sec. now, Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 8.

Breach of trust, generally.]—See Part VII., post.

3823. Failure to take due caution in making authorised investment—Distinguished from unauthorised investment.—U., a trustee, who had power to invest on real security, invested on a mtge. of freehold houses, with power of sale, a larger sum of trust money than was justifiable. He afterwards retired from the trust, & transferred the mtge. to the new trustees. The security proving unproductive, the new trustees, with the privity of pltf., who was a purchaser of a share in the trust funds, but without any notice to U., sold the mtged. property at a considerable loss, but it was not established that the sale was unfair or improvident. Pltf. then sued U. for the loss:—Held: an investment on a security of a description authorised by the trust, where the breach of trust consisted only in not exercising due caution in taking it, stood on an entirely different footing from an investment of an unauthorised description, which the cestui que trust must either accept or reject.—*Re SALMON, PRIEST v. 3829. ————.]—Two trustees of a marriage settlement sold out £1,818 Consols, which produced £1,115, & this sum was lent to the husband upon a mtge. of his life estate in certain property, his bond for the repayment of the money, & an assignment of a policy of assurance upon his life. One trustee died; & the £1,115 having been paid to the survivor, was again lent by him to the husband without sufficient security. The husband & the surviving trustee became insolvent; & upon a bill filed by the children of the marriage:—Held: the estate of the deceased trustee was liable to make good the original sum lent to the husband.—*LANDER v. By his will he directed his trustees & exors. to convert his personal estate at their sole discretion, & at such time or times as they should think fit, & to invest the proceeds in, amongst other things, shares in any public co. incorporated by Act of Parliament & paying a dividend. The shares, which were very profitable, were retained by the sole trustee who, subsequently, accepted twenty-five additional new shares allotted in respect of the old ones. The trustee then retired, & appointed two new trustees. Ultimately, the bank stopped payment:—Held: the original trustee had not committed a breach of trust in retaining the old shares, but had done so in accepting the new ones, & was liable to indemnify testator's estate for losses incurred thereby.

(2) The trust for sale here was not . . . a trust to sell "with all convenient speed" or to sell "immediately." Where the trust is in such words, there is no doubt that after the lapse of twelve months from testator's death the trustees, unless they have converted the estate, have on them the onus of proving that the assets were properly retained in their existing state. But even in such cases trustees are justified in using a reasonable discretion in the matter (HALL, V.-C.).—EDWARDS v. EDMUNDS (1876), 34 L. T. 522.

The mtgor. having made default, the trustees took possession of the property which would not realise the sum advanced, the value of the property having greatly depreciated. Evidence was adduced to show that, at the date of the mtge., the sum advanced was equal to about two-thirds of the value of the property. But there was other evidence to the effect that the property was then even less valuable; & that the trustees had not obtained any formal valuation thereof:—Held: the trustees had made a most improvident investment & had disregarded the rule as to the limit to be observed when investing trust funds upon the security of house property; they ought to have made a more careful examination of the security, &, under the circumstances, they were liable to replace the sum advanced.—Re OLIVE, OLIVE v. WESTERMAN (1886), 34 Ch. D. 70; 56 L. J. Ch. 75; 55 L. T. 83; 51 J. P. 38.

Testator left three brothers; & the trustees, of whom the annuitant was one, provided for the annuity in part by appropriating a railway debenture for £1,500, which bore interest at first at 5 per cent., & afterwards at 4 per cent., & in part by interest paid by one of the brothers upon a loan to him of moneys of testator. A child of another brother who was dead, having filed his bill, during the annuitant's life, against the surviving trustees, to have a sufficient fund properly invested:—Held: he was entitled to an inquiry as to what sum should have been invested at the end of a year from testator's death to meet the annuity, & to a declaration that the trustees were liable to make good the sum so ascertained.—*STARKEY v. 3855 i. Whether trustee liable—Fluctuation of authorised investment.—Trustees are liable for loss of trust funds if, in investing them in lands of permanent value, they lend more than two-thirds of the value, or more than one-half on buildings of a fluctuating value. Considering the fluctuating character of colonial property, the ct. is inclined rather to narrow than enlarge this rule.—YEO v. KORTON (1865), 4 N. S. W. S. C. R. (Eq.) 110.—AUS.

PART VI. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2.—D.

a. Unauthorised investments.—Testator who, by his will, expressed the fullest confidence in C. (one of his trustees), directed his trustees to be guided entirely by the judgment of C. as to the sale, disposal, & reinvestment of his American securities, & declared that his trustees should not be responsible for any loss occasioned thereby. C. having made unauthorised investments of these moneys which proved worthless, the master charged his co-trustee B. with the amount thereof:—Held: even if at the suit of creditors B. might have been chargeable, yet as against legatees he was exonerated.—BURRITT v. BURRITT (1879), 29 Gr. 321.—CAN.

3861. Whether liable for whole interest of improper investments—Improper retention—Payment of high rate of interest to tenant for life—Interest from retained investments.—Testator gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees, directing them to convert it into money, & invest the proceeds in Govt. or real securities, of which they were to stand possessed, upon trust for A. during her life, & after her death, for B. The trustees permitted a share, which testator had in an Indian loan, bearing interest at 10 per cent., to remain for several years on that security, during which time they paid to A. the interest at 10 per cent., which it yielded annually; & the loan being afterwards paid off, they invested the money in the 3 per cents. at a time when the funds were so low that the amount of stock purchased was considerably greater than if the conversion had taken place at the end of a year from testator's death:—Held: the trustees ought to be charged with the whole of the stock actually purchased, & all the sums actually received in respect of the Indian rate of interest; & that they ought to be allowed in their discharge, as payments to the tenant for life, not the sums which they had in fact paid her, but only a sum equal to what she would have received for dividends, if the money had been transferred from the Indian security & invested in the 3 per cent. stock at the end of a year from testator's death.—*DIMES v. 3864. Whether trustee relieved—Security proving insufficient—Investment must be proper in other respects.—A trustee is not entitled to the protection afforded by Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 5, unless the investment which has proved deficient was a proper investment at the time in all respects other than value.—Re WALKER, WALKER v. JACKSON (1737), 1 Atk. 513; West temp. Hard. 31; 26 E. R. 324, L. C.

3866. ———— ————]—There is no rule of law which compels the ct. to hold that an honest trustee is liable to make good loss sustained by retaining an authorised security in a falling market, if he did so honestly & prudently in the belief that it was the best course to take in the interest of all parties.

Trustees acting honestly with ordinary prudence, & within the limits of their trust are not liable for mere errors of judgment. Any loss sustained by the trust estate under such circumstances falls upon & must be borne by the owners of the property, i.e., the cestuis que trust, & cannot be thrown by them on the trustees, who have done no wrong, though the result may prove that they possibly might have done better.—*Re CHAPMAN, COCKS v. 3868. — Failure to invest—Employment of solicitor to procure proper investment.]—Testator directed his trustees & exors. to invest the residue of his estate on good freehold security; the trustee retained in his hands a balance of between £300 & £400 for a period of more than two years, part of which money was in the hands of his bankers:—Held: under the circumstances, he was not responsible for interest during that time, although he had been informed of certain persons who were desirous of borrowing money on freehold security, he having employed a solr. to procure a proper investment.—WYATT v. WALLACE (1843), 1 Coop. temp. Cott. 155; 2 L. T. O. S. 146; 8 Jur. 117; 47 E. R. 792.

3869. — Deposit at bank on solicitor's advice—Loss of small value.]—Testator, who died in 1872, had by his will bequeathed a legacy of £1,000 in trust for G., & by a codicil, which recited that he desired his widow after his death to enter into the business then carried on by him in partnership with D., & that the bulk of his property was invested as capital in the business, the testator had empowered his trustees to invest or continue invested, moneys in their hands as trustees, in the business, or any other business in which they, in their uncontrolled discretion, might think fit, without being liable for loss. D. & M. were appointed exors. & trustees. The widow entered into partnership with D. in the business for ten years from Jan. 1, 1873. The £1,000 was left in the business during & after the term of ten years. In June, 1883, the widow having then left the business, D. filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs, & a composition of 10s. in the pound was agreed to, payable by three instalments, on Jan. 2, 1884, Apr. 2, 1884, & Oct. 2, 1884. Only one instalment was received by the trustee M., & it was not invested, but placed on deposit at a bank. No pressure was made for payment of the unpaid instalments. G., having come of age, brought an action against the trustee M. & others seeking relief on the ground of breaches of trust:—Held: as regards M., (1) the not calling in the £1,000 on the widow's retirement from the partnership was not a breach of trust, but, on the true construction of the codicil, the power was not restricted to lending to any particular partners in the business; (2) the not calling in or pressing for payment of the two instalments unpaid was not a breach of trust, the trustee M., not having been guilty of negligence, but having acted honestly in the belief that pressure would not have resulted in benefit to the estate, & with a reasonable ground for acting as he did; (3) having regard to the fact that the loss of income, if any, through non-investment of the first instalment was very small, coupled with the probability, then existing, of another instalment being shortly received, when both might be invested together, it would be going too far to make an order on that head against the trustee M., who acted on his solr.'s advice in placing the money on deposit at a bank instead of investing it.—Re EARL, JOHNSON v. Her consent in writing was required to any change of the investments. Part of the fund was at her request improperly advanced upon a security which proved deficient. She concurred in the mtge. deed, & her execution of it was attested as required by the power:—Held: she could maintain a suit to have the deficiency in the fund made good, & the trustees had no claim to be indemnified out of the reversion subject to the power of appointment.

(2) In a suit to realise the deficient security, a fund was paid into ct. & invested, & then sold out at a profit:—Held: the trustees were answerable only for the deficiency, after taking into account this profit.—FLETCHER v. GREEN (1864), 33 Beav. 426; 3 New Rep. 626; 55 E. R. 433.

Right to recoupment—From interest of tenant for life.]—A lady under an order of this ct. was in receipt of £100 a year, part of the income arising from an estate which testator had ordered to be accumulated, & after the death of her mother, divided among herself & her brothers & sisters, who were numerous. By a settlement made upon her marriage, the lady assigned to trustees the whole of her share in the estate, & its accumulations for the benefit of herself for life, with remainder for her children; but she continued for eleven years to receive the £100 a year under the order. The mother was still living. Upon a bill filed by the children of the marriage:—Held: the order of the ct. did not justify the trustees in not investing the £100 a year paid to the lady; it formed a part of the principal vested in them, & they must replace the amount.

They are, however, entitled to be repaid by the new trustees of the settlement, what they have to replace, out of the income of the tenant for life in the fund (ROMILLY, M.R.).—BARRATT v. WYATT (1862), 30 Beav. 442; 31 L. J. Ch. 652; 6 L. T. 801; 8 Jur. N. S. 1045; 10 W. R. 454; 4 E. R. 960.

3877. Right to unauthorised securities—On replacing trust fund.]—What is the position of a trustee who has made an improper investment? . . . Assuming he had not made an investment at all, the estate was short of so much money, & the trustee is liable to make that good; but he is entitled to any property standing in his name, & to say, "If you make me liable, I claim the property purchased with my money." On the other hand, the ct. could say, "Yes; but you shall not put your finger on the property till you have recouped that of which the trust estate is short"—in other words, such property is subject to a lien in favour of the beneficiaries for the amount of the deficiency (KEKEWICH, J.).—*Re SALMON, PRIEST v. The mtgor. commenced an action against L., & all others claiming through or under him, to set aside the mtge. on the ground of fraud. L.'s cestuis que trust compromised their claims in the action without the concurrence of L.'s trustee in bkpy. :—Held: as L.'s cestuis que trust had adopted the improper investment, they could not under the circumstances prove in L.'s bkpy. for the whole amount of the trust fund, but their remedy was a proof for the damages the trust estate had sustained by reason of the improper investment, & the measure of damages was the difference between the total sum invested & the assessed value of the amount receivable under the compromise.

The rule is . . . that, when an exor. or trustee, instead of executing the trust, as he ought, by laying out the property either in well secured real estates or upon Govt. securities, takes upon him to dispose of it in another manner, the cestuis que trust may call him to an account either way: having an option to make him replace it, or if it is for their benefit to affirm his conduct, & take what he has sold it for, they may take that & charge him with 5 per cent. interest; or if he has made more, they may charge him with that (GRANT, M.R.).—POCOCK v. REDDINGTON (1801), 5 Ves. 794 : 31 E. 3886. — [—.]—A sum of £2,000 was bequeathed to an exor., who was also a trustee under the will, upon trust, for investment in the public funds. He retained it in his own hands, paying interest to the cestuis que trust for many years, under a representation that the legacy had been invested according to the trusts:—Held: this was such a breach of trust, as entitled the cestuis que trust to have purchased by the exor. so much stock as the sum of £2,000 would have purchased at the time he first had assets sufficient for investment.

When an exor., who happens also to be named a trustee, of a legacy to be laid out in stock, has fully administered the estate, & assented to the legacy, & retains the legacy in his hands, not as assets of testator, but as trustee of the legacy, then the principles which would apply to another trustee must apply to him. He is no longer clothed with the character of exor., but is, as to the legacy, a mere trustee (LEACH, V. C.)—BYRCHALL v. BRADFORD (1822), 6 Madd. 235; 50 E. R. 1081.

But the cestui que trust was not allowed to take the property as representing the actual portion of the trust fund laid out by the trustee, & prove for the balance.—*THORNTON v. 3890. ———.]—The trustees of a settlement had power to invest the trust funds "in their names" in Govt. or real securities, & to vary investments with the consent in writing of the tenant for life. In 1875 they sold a sum of Consols & other stock forming part of the trust fund, & with the consent of the tenant for life invested the proceeds of sale in a contributory mtge. of real estate, which was effected in the names of themselves & the persons advancing the remainder of the money. In 1879 a mtge. in the names of the trustees only was substituted for the contributory mortgage, but the consent in writing of the tenant for life was not previously obtained, although upon hearing of the change of investment he did not make any objection thereto. Upon the death of the tenant for life the money on mtge. was called in. The whole of the principal invested was forthcoming, but the remaindermen, who were entitled to the capital, claimed that the trustees ought to replace the sums of stock sold in 1875, which at that time stood at a lower price than in 1887 when the proceedings were commenced.—Held: that the sale in 1875 was improper, as having been made for the purpose of effecting another investment which was a breach of trust as not being in the names of the trustees solely, & the investment of 1879 was also a breach of trust, as the previous consent of the tenant for life after the facts were fully laid before him was not obtained, & consequently the trustees were liable either to replace the stock sold, or to pay the difference in price of the stock sold in 1875 & of the same amount of stock at the time of the commencement of the proceedings.—Re MASSINGHERD'S SETTLEMENT, CLARK v. Robinson, No. 3688, ante, liable for the difference between the amount actually spent in their purchase of Consols & the surrender value of the policy.—*Re GODWIN'S SETTLEMENT, GODWIN v. There was no distinguishing mark by which the shares could be traced, same being in the nature of capital, expressed by quantity. The trustee agreed to assign some of the shares standing in his name to the banking co., as security for repayment of advances which had been made to him, but no transfer was made. He afterwards became bkpt., without having shares sufficient to satisfy the trusts, & his agreement to assign:—Held: although the shares held in trust might have been changed by sale & repurchase, the trustee must still be considered as holding, for the purposes of the trust, the same number of shares out of a larger number that were standing in his name at the time of his bkcpny.—*MURRAY v. An administration suit was instituted, & he was ordered to pay the money into ct. He sold part of the mtgd. property under a power of sale in the mtge., & on the application of two of the cestuis que trust, the proceeds were paid into ct., subject to an order that they were not to be paid out without the consent of the purchaser. The trustee's solrs. refused to give up the mtge. deeds unless upon payment of their bill of costs:—Held: by instituting an administration suit, & obtaining an order against the trustee personally for payment of the trust moneys into ct., which order had not been obeyed, the cestuis que trust had not waived their right to pursue the trust money into the unauthorised investment.—*FRANCIS v. Part VII.—Breaches of Trust.

SECT. 1.—WHAT CONSTITUTES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

3928. Deviation from terms of trust.]—Legacy of £1,000 laid out by one who had the care of the legatee, being an infant, otherwise than appointed by the will must be answered by him who so laid it out.—CORBETT v. FRANKLYN (1676), Cas. temp. Finch, 250; 23 E. R. 137.

3929. ———.]—Whatever a trustee does to prevent the intention of his testator is a breach of trust & ought to be set aside.—A.-G. v. YOUNG (1733), 2 Com. 423; 92 E. R. 1142.

3930. ———.]—Testator devised his real estate to his nephew, & authorised the trustees of his will to give up the tenancy of a farm of which he was tenant in favour of the nephew, provided the landlord would accept him as tenant, & in that event he bequeathed to the nephew the stock upon the farm. After testator's death it appeared that if the nephew was accepted by the landlord as tenant & so took the stock on the farm, there would be scarcely anything left for the other legatees under the will, some of whom were the sisters of the nephew. One of the trustees, who was also the landlord's agent, informed the landlord of the circumstances. The landlord said that unless the nephew acted fairly & honourably he would not let him have the farm. The trustee told the nephew of what the landlord had said, & offered to let him into possession of the farm, & to pay him £200 out of testator's estate, if he would give up the real estate of testator in favour of the other legatees. The nephew thereupon executed a deed whereby he released testator's real estate to the trustees, upon trust to sell & to pay £200 to the nephew, & to divide the residue of the proceeds among the other legatees. He had no independent professional advice in the matter. He was afterwards accepted as tenant of the farm. On a bill to set aside the deed:—Held: the trustees had been guilty of a breach of trust, & the deed ought to be set aside, with costs as against them.—ELLIS v. BARKER (1871), 7 Ch. App. 104; 41 L. J. Ch. 64; 25 L. T. 688; 20 W. R. 160, L. J.J.

3931. ———.]—Unless necessary in interests of beneficiaries.]—A trustee is not in all cases, to be made liable upon the mere ground of having deviated from the strict letter of his trust; for such deviation may be necessary or beneficial to the interests of the cestuis que trust; but when a trustee ventures to deviate from the letter of his trust, he does so under the obligation & at the peril of afterwards satisfying the ct. that the deviation was necessary or beneficial.—HARRISON v. RANDALL (1851), 9 Hare, 397; 21 L. J. Ch. 294; 16 Jur. 72; 68 E. R. 502.

3932. Loss of trust fund.]—Where a portion of a trust fund has been lost, that is prima facie a breach of trust & a sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver on an interlocutory application.—EVANS v. COVENTRY (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 911;

3934. —.]—A. being impropiator of a parish, demised part of the tithes to certain parishioners as trustees for one thousand years, who redemised the same to him for nine hundred & ninety-nine years, under a yearly rent of £50 payable to the trustees as a provision for a preacher to be nominated by the trustees. The heir of A. afterwards sold the rectory to B. & the representative of the surviving trustee was prevailed upon to assign B. the right of nominating the preacher. From the date of the original demise & for forty years & upwards after the latter transaction, the preacher was constantly nominated by the parishioners; but upon a contest between them & B. it was held that the right of nomination was absolutely in the trustees, & that the assignment of that right was a breach of trust.—FOLEY v. The trustees of the mtgd. fund sold out a sum sufficient to discharge the debt, & paid it to one of the trustees of the marriage settlement without the knowledge of the other, or of the cestuis que trust, taking the receipt of the former only. The money being misapplied & lost :—Held: the money must be paid over again, & that with costs of suit.—HALL v. FRANCK (1849), 11 Beav. 519; 18 L. J. Ch. 362; 13 L. T. O. He afterwards devised & bequeathed all his property, real & personal, upon trusts in which pltf. took no interest. Upon a bill filed by her to have the general trusts of the previous voluntary settlement carried into execution :—Held: the trustee, who was himself the principal cestui que trust, having concurred in allowing the settlor to receive moneys thereunder, & having joined with him in committing a breach of trust, was liable to pltf.—PARNELL v. 3940. When amounting to breach of trust—Gross negligence amounting to fraud.]—A trustee is only answerable for fraud, or a gross neglect, which is equal to fraud; & therefore where trust money is suffered by a trustee to remain in the hands of A. with the privity & approbation of the parties beneficially interested, instead of laying it out in a purchase pursuant to marriage articles, & A. becomes insolvent; the trustee is not in this case answerable.—ALLEN v. HANCORN (1775), 7 Bro. Parl. Cas. 375; 3 E. R. 243, H. L.

3941. Particular Instances—Settlement of accounts—Allowing balance to remain against factor.]—The mere fact of trustees allowing balances to remain against their factor at the annual settlement of his accounts, where it is impossible to include his whole receipts & payments for the year, is not a breach of trust, or such culpable negligence as would make them liable for the ultimate balances due from him to the trust; secus, if they assented to his contrivances to retain larger balances than were necessary for the management of the trust.—HOME v. The deed comprised a number of other properties. The trustees made no inquiry as to whether the lessor's consent was necessary to the sub-demise:—Held: the trustees had been guilty of negligence, & the ct. was precluded from giving them, under Conveyancing Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 4, relief against the forfeiture.—MATTHEWS v. P., as the exor. & trustee of S.'s will, executed a deed which purported to be an assignment, by him to L., of number four, for the residue of the term granted to S. After that P. bequeathed the two houses to his exors., upon certain trusts.

After his death, his exors. & trustees demised the house number four to L., for the then remainder of the term granted to S.:—Held: L. could not make a good title to that house, because the legal estate was merged by the bequest made by S. to P., the immediate reversioner, & therefore, the assignment executed by P. was inoperative; & because the demise made by the exors. & trustees of his will was a breach of trust.—LAW v. 3952. Release of mortgaged property.—To enable tenant for life to lease.]—Pltf. was tenant for life in possession with power of leasing of certain premises, subject to a mtge. charge in trustees. The trusts of the mtge. were for pltf. & wife for their respective lives, with remainder to their unborn children. To enable pltf. to grant a lease of a portion of the property in mtge., the trustees & pltf. & wife, as cestuis que trust, joined in releasing that portion from the mtge.; & pltf. thereupon agreed to grant a beneficial lease under the power of such portion to deft. Upon an objection taken, in a suit for specific performance, to the title to grant the lease, on the ground that the release of the mtge. would be inoperative as against the wife & ulterior cestuis que trust:—Held: whether this was or was not a breach of trust on the part of the trustees, there being no legal title by which the position of the lessee could be affected, a ct. of equity would under no circumstances interfere with the title of the lessee, & therefore, the objection could not be supported.—DAWES v. This they did, raising the money by a mtge. upon the property, & a sale was effected at a reasonable price:—Held: although the trust for sale did not authorise the execution 3962. Sale in accordance with terms of power—But prejudicial to beneficiaries.]—Circumstances in which the exercise of a power of sale, although not inconsistent with the terms in which the power is created, would notwithstanding be a breach of trust.

The trustees cannot justify the sale which it is the object of this suit to prevent unless the sale was determined upon as the cause most for the benefit of the [cestuis que trust] (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—MARSHALL v. SLADDEN (1849), 7 Harc. 428; 19 L. J. Ch. 57; 14 Jur. 106; 68 E. R. 177.

3963. Condition for personal benefit of trustee.]—In July, 1884, P., who was entitled in fee to a beerhouse at B., as trustee, agreed to sell the same to ptfs., but he declined to complete the purchase, & ptfs. threatened him with legal proceedings. Subsequently fresh negotiations were entered into for the purchase of the property, & on Dec. 20 P. authorised his solr. to sell to ptfs. for £1,000 on condition that they relinquished any right of action they might have against him. At that time £1,000 was the best price obtainable for the property. Ptfs.' solrs. were authorised to make a contract for ptfs. On Dec. 21, P.'s solr. wrote to ptfs.' solrs., "I now send you for approval draft contract containing the terms on which P. is willing to sell this property to your clients. My client declines to produce an earlier title than that stated in the commencement of the title in the draft contract." The draft contract contained stipulations as to payment of price & commencement of title, but it contained no provision as to the relinquishment of any right of action. The contract was shortly after returned by ptfs.'

h. Contracting to sell trust estate at future date.]—It is a breach of trust for trustees with a power of sale to enter into a contract binding them or sols. approved. Upon P.'s refusal to complete, plifs. brought an action against him for specific performance.—Held: there was no concluded agreement between the parties; the draft contract was not in accordance with the authority given to P.'s solr. Qu.: whether an agreement in accordance with such authority would have been a breach of trust.—*BUSHELL v. 3969. ————Necessity for negligence.—Testator whose assets consisted of heritable & personal property used in his business by trust disposition & settlement disinherited the children of his first marriage & his daughter by his second marriage, leaving them nothing whatever, & directed his trustees to pay to his wife an annuity of £300 per annum during her life, & an annuity of £200 to his son J. & H. his wife during their lives, & to convey to his son G. the whole residue of his estate, "but always with & under the burden of the liferent to my wife of my properties in Glasgow & Girvan & also under burden of the payment of the annuities to my wife & to my son & his wife." The disinherited children, upon the death of testator, threatened to take legal proceedings to set aside his disposition on the ground of want of capacity & undue influence, & also claimed to recover their legitim share of his assets. The trustees, one of whom was applt., acting on the advice of a law agent of high standing & acknowledged character in the profession, compromised the claims, & borrowed the sum required to carry out the compromise on the security of the heritable estate. They also allowed the son G. to take possession of the business without making the annuities to the son J. & his wife primary real burdens on the heritable subjects. After a few years the business failed, & there was not sufficient to pay the annuitants:—

Held: applt. was not liable for breach of trust, for there was no proof that he & his co-trustees in agreeing to & carrying out the compromise had been guilty of negligence.—EATON v. BUCHANAN, [1911] A. C. 253.

3981. Appointment of sole trustee—Two trustees required by settlement.]—Where by the terms of a settlement it appears to be the intention of the parties that there should at all times be two trustees of the property comprised in the settlement, the appointment of a single trustee in the place of two original trustees, & the transfer by them of the trust property to such single trustee, is a breach of trust, & the original trustees are responsible accordingly.—HULME v. HULME (1833), 2 My. & K. 682; 39 E. R. 1105.

3982. Unnecessary deposit with bankers.]—Testator died in Mar. 1823, & in Jan. 1824 & Jan. 1825, the exors. & trustees deposited part of the assets in the hands of bankers, on their notes carrying interest; the bankers failed in Nov. 1825, & no necessity having been shown for such deposit, the trustees were held personally responsible for the loss.—*DARKE v. 3983. Advance of trust fund by one trustee to another.]—Advance by one trustee to another of trust fund. Bond void at law in what manner available in equity. Release of surety where conditions have not been complied with.

M. being suddenly called upon to pay a sum of money, applies to W., an aged female, by letter, to join him in a bond to secure that amount, promising to save her harmless. A few days afterwards M. with his son, C., called upon W. & prevailed upon her to execute a bond for £10,000, leaving blanks for the obligee's name & rate of interest; which was done without the knowledge of her solr. M. & S. were trustees of the marriage settlement of B. & his wife, & it was proposed by S. to B. that a sufficient quantity of stock standing in the names of M. & S. forming part of the settled property, should be sold out to meet the demand; B. consented, on condition that S. should secure the amount by obtaining a mtge. in the names of S. & M. The stock was sold out with the consent of B. & wife, & the blanks of the bond were then filled up by inserting the name of B. as obligee, & the rate of interest, but no mtge. was taken by S. B. died in 1841, having appointed S. with two others, his exors., who proved his will, & conceiving B.'s estate bound to M. & S. as trustees of the settlement, paid the debt which they supposed due, & then filed their bill against W. as surety to the bond, & M. as the principal:—Held: the trustees had committed a breach of trust in advancing the money to one of themselves without taking proper security.—SQUIRE v. WHITTON (1844), 1 H. L. Cas. 342, n.; 3 L. T. O. S. 238; 9 E. R. 789; affd. on other grounds (1848), 1 H. L. Cas. 333, H. L.

3984. Assignment of wife's property subject to restraint on anticipation.]—R., by deed, assigned property in Scotland to B., as trustee, with a direction to pay to his sister R., a married woman, during her life, the nett income of the property, or such part of it as he might deem necessary for the support of her & her family; & he thereby declared the provision for R. to be purely alimentary, & exclusive of the marital right of her then or any future husband, & that it should not be assignable, or subject to any deed which either she or such husband might grant in relation thereto,

m. Bringing property under Real Property Act.]—Where trustees under a will sell land which they have no power to sell & on discovering their disability obtain a conveyance, they cannot be charged with wilful default, although the land so improperly sold & obtained back again has in the meantime been brought under Real Property Act.—ST. GEORGE v. BUR-

n. Arrangement with lessee to enter into possession.]—Trustees of a will who lease a property to a lessee, who, while the lease is still subsisting, they think may not be able to pay his rent, cannot be said to act in breach of trust by entering into possession of the property by agreement with the lessee, if they have an honest belief that it is for the benefit of the trust, although there may be no express power under the will to make arrangements with lessees or to accept surrenders of leases.—UMPHREY v. GREY (1898), 24 V. L. R. 979.—AUS.

o. Investing trust moneys outside State.]—It is not per se a breach of trust for Victorian trustees to invest trust moneys out of Victoria, there being nothing in the instrument creating the trust to forbid their or debts which they might contract. Advances were made by A. to the husband of R. for the support of his family, & on other accounts, to secure the repayment of which B., with R.'s consent, executed to A. a deed of assignment of her interest in the trust property, reserving £60 per annum for aliment to R. & her family:—Held: the execution of the deed of assignment was ultra vires of B., & a breach of trust on his part, & the deed was wholly invalid as against R.—RENNIE v. RITCHIE (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 204; 8 E. R. 1379; sub nom. RITCHIE v. RENNIE, 9 Jur. 435, H. L.

3985. Denial of status of cestui que trust.—Where trustees, upon some doubts entertained by themselves as to the status of a person claiming a sum, part of the fund in their hands, refused to pay him, & the status was afterwards satisfactorily established, the trustees were ordered to pay the sum, with 5 per cent. thereon, the account to be taken with rests, & all the costs of the suit.

A breach of trust, of the grossest description, has been established against all the parties (Knight Bruce, V.-C.).—HUTCHINS v. HUTCHINS (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 196; 15 Jur. 809.

3986. Refusal to pay sum due to cestui que trust—No specific appropriation.—An action on the case for breach of duty is not maintainable by a cestui que trust against his trustee, where the only breach complained of is the non-payment of money which the trustee holds, as such, to be paid by him to the cestui que trust, but which he has not specifically appropriated for that purpose.—EDWARDS v. LOWNDES (1852), 1 B. & B. 81; 22 L. J. Q. B. 104; 20 L. T. O. S. 154; 17 J. P. 213; 17 Jur. 412; 118 E. R. 367.

3987. Payment of money to cestui que trust—Settlement made in anticipation of marriage—Marriage not celebrated.—A feme sole, in contemplation of a marriage with T., vested personal property in trustees, upon trust for the sole benefit of herself, her exors., etc., until her marriage, if any, with subsequent trusts for her issue. She never married T., but before her marriage with M. the trustees handed over to her a part of the fund:—Held: the trusts were to arise on any marriage; & the trustees had committed a breach of trust for which they were answerable.—M'DONNELL v. HESILGUE (1852), 16 Beav. 316; 22 L. J. Ch. 342; 20 L. T. O. S. 164; 16 Jur. 1148; 51 E. R. 812; sub nom. MACDONELL v. HESILGUE, 1 W. R. 71.

3988. Assignment of trust fund arising from irrevocable voluntary settlement.—A. by a voluntary deed assigned a mtge. debt & securities to E. upon trust for A. for life, remainder upon trusts in favour of L. & her children. She afterwards assumed to cancel & revoke this deed, & to assign the property therein comprised upon trust for the sole use & benefit of E. Previously to the marriage of E. with her present husband P. the property in question was made the subject of settlement. Upon a bill filed by L. & her children to have the trusts of the voluntary settlement carried into execution:—Held: P. was liable to make good the trust fund under the voluntary deed, in assigning which E. had been guilty of a breach of trust.—LANHAM v. PIRIE (1857), 20 L. T. O. S. 171; 3 Jur. N. S. 704; 5 W. R. 540, L. C. & L. J.J.

3989. Improper exercise of discretion—Discretionary power of advancement.—Testator by his will left all his property to trustees to stand possessed of the income thereof in trust for his two daughters in equal shares, & upon certain other trusts after their death. There were trusts for their maintenance up to the age of twenty-one, & after attaining that age they were to be paid the income for their separate use & not by way of anticipation. The trustees were further empowered "to apply in or towards the advancement in life of each daughter a sum not exceeding £500 of her presumptive share," & they were to be "the sole judges of the advisability of such payment & of what the term 'advancement in life' might signify." After the daughters had each attained the age of twenty-one, their respective shares having in consequence become vested, & the younger daughter had married, the trustees, at their request, paid to them two sums of money, under the power of advancement above set out, which they handed to the husband of the married daughter, to be used by him for the purposes of his business, & he, with their consent, paid these two sums over to one of the trustees to whom he owed money in respect of his business:—Held: even assuming the trustees to be empowered to make such a payment at a time when the shares were actually vested, notwithstanding the use of the words "presumptive share" in the advancement clause, the payment was not made bonâ fide for the advancement in life of the daughters, & the trustees in making it were guilty of a breach of trust.—MOLYNEUX v. FLETCHER, [1898] 1 Q. B. 648; 67 L. J. Q. B. 392; 78 L. T. 111; 46 W. R. 576; 14 T. L. R. 211; 42 Sol. Jo. 254.

3990. Bringing up children in immoral home—Trust to maintain, educate, & bring up.—A trustee who, in pursuance of a trust to maintain, educate, & bring up infants, brings them up in an immoral home, commits a breach of trust.—Re G., [1899] 1 Ch. 719; 68 L. J. Ch. 374; 80 L. T. 470; 47 W. R. 491.

In charging trustees for breaches of trust & the costs of suit, it is immaterial how the trust was created, & whether for valuable consideration, or by the voluntary gift of the trustees themselves.—DROSER v. BRERETON (1851), 15 Beav. 221; 51 E. R. 521.

SUB-SECT. 2.—TRUSTEES.

See Sect. 3, post.

SUB-SECT. 3.—BENEFICIARIES.

A. In General.

3998. Liability to refund—Action against defaulting cestui que trust.—Where one cestui que trust procures the trust money to be laid out improperly, & part of it is consequently lost, the other cestuis que trust are entitled, as against him, in a suit properly constituted for that purpose, to have their shares of the trust money made good out of his share of that which is ultimately recovered. But if the bill prays relief against the trustees only, the liability of the share of that cestui que trust cannot be enforced against him.—PHILLIPSON v. GATTY, GATTY v. PHILLIPSON (1850), 2 H. & Tw. 459; 47 E. R. 1763, L. C.

B. Overpayment.

4000. Whether beneficiary liable to refund.—Where trustees, under an erroneous view of the effect of a will, pay to parties money to which they are not entitled, this et., in administering the estate, will compel a restitution & repayment, & will give a lien on the other interests of such parties under the will, even as against an assignee for valuable consideration.—*DIBBS v. 4001. —.]—BAYNARD v. WOOLLEY, WEARING
v. BAYNARD, No. 4662, post.

4002. — —]. — An action brought in the Ch. Div. by one cestui que trust against another cestui que trust to recover money wrongly paid by the trustee to the latter under a common mistake of fact is in the nature of a common law action for money had & received, & the ct., acting on the analogy of Stat. Limitations, will hold the claim to be barred after the lapse of six years.

The case would be different if the claim were made in an action in which the ct. was administering the trust estate. There, if there were assets to which the overpaid cestui que trust was entitled, the ct. would adjust the accounts as between the parties entitled, & lapse of time would be no bar.

Where the ct. is administering the funds & adjusting the rights of the parties between themselves in the ordinary course, if there are funds belonging to the person who has been overpaid, the ct. may so adjust the rights as to rectify the overpayment (WARRINGTON, J.).—Re ROBINSON, McLAREN v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1911] 1 Ch. 502; 104 L. T. 331; 55 Sol. Jo. 271; sub nom. Re ROBINSON, McLAREN v. ROBINSON, 80 L. J. Ch. 381.

4003. —[J]—Where the extrix. of the last surviving exor. of deceased testator had purposed to appoint herself & others trustees of his will, which appointment was bad as to herself, but she had nevertheless acted as trustee & stipulated that she should have the sole control of the income & in effect her hand made the improper distribution whereby she benefited:—Held: one of the other trustees so appointed was not debarred, merely by being a party to the overpayment of the income which had constituted the improper distribution, from having a proper adjustment made in respect of such overpayment.—Re READING, EDMONDS v. READING (1916), 60 Sol. Jo. 655.

4004. — Overpayment retained out of future income.—The exors. of a will wrongly paid the legacy duty payable in respect of the life interest in a settled legacy, bequeathed to special trustees, out of the capital of the settled legacy which, subject to the life interest, was to fall into residue & be held in trust for testator's widow for life & after her death for his brother absolutely. The widow & brother were two of the exors., the remaining exor. being also one of the special trustees, both of whom were solrs. In accordance with the provisions of Legacy Duty Act, 1796 (c. 52), the duty payable in respect of the life interest should have been retained & paid by the special trustees in equal yearly instalments out of the income during the first four years of the life tenancy.

The amount of the settled legacy less settlement estate duty & legacy duty was paid to the special trustees, & after the lapse of seven years the special trustee who made the wrong payment of duty sought to make the tenant for life recoup out of the income of the settled legacy the legacy duty so paid out of capital:—Held: the error must be rectified, & what had been overpaid to the tenant for life must, upon all proper adjustments being made, be retained out of future payments of her income.—Re AINSWORTH, FINCH v. SMITH, [1915] 2 Ch. 96; 84 L. J. Ch. 701; 113 L. T. 368; 31 T. L. R. 392.

Annotation:—Apld. Re Musgrave, Machell v. Parry, [1916] 2 Ch. 417.

4005. — Trustee—beneficiary.—Where a trustee, who was himself one of the beneficiaries, had inadvertently overpaid the other beneficiaries their shares of income, & died before any adjustment had been made:—Held: the exors. of deceased trustee were not entitled to recover from the other beneficiaries the amounts so overpaid, or to have accrued or future income impounded till the shares were equalised, by reason of the fact that their testator himself was the person responsible for the mistake that had been made.—Re HORNE, WILSON v. COX SINCLAIR, [1905] 1 Ch. 76; 74 L. J. Ch. 25; 92 L. T. 263; 53 W. R. 317.

4006. — Bankruptcy—Liability of trustee in bankruptcy to refund.—Testator devised real estate to his nine children nominatim as tenants in common, giving a power to three of them to sell the whole to avoid the difficulties of partition. W., one of the three, conducted certain sales under the power, retained more than his share of the purchase-moneys, & went into liquidation. Further sales were effected, & out of the proceeds a further sum was paid to W.'s trustee in liquidation in respect of, & in excess of, his share:—Held: all purchase-moneys received by the trustees were impressed with a trust under the will, & W.'s equitable interest therein was liable to recoup the other beneficiaries; & this being so, the payment to his trustee in liquidation was made in mistake of law.—Re BROWN, DIXON v. BROWN (1886), 32 Ch. D. 597; 55 L. J. Ch. 556; 54 L. T. 789.

4007. — Payment to guardian as maintenance.—Trustee having, by mistake, paid to the mother of a child, interest on a legacy to the child, which was contingent, the ct. held it to have been paid to the mother as guardian of the child, for maintenance, & would not permit the trustee to recover back the moneys so expended.—WEBB v. BROOKES (1832), 1 L. J. Ch. 191.

invest the proceeds in Govt. or real securities, sold the estate, & received only part of the purchase-money, but executed a conveyance to the purchaser, on the back of which was indorsed a receipt for the whole sum, which was signed by them all. This deed & the other title deeds, they retained as a security for the unpaid purchase-money with interest, & they entered into a written agreement with the purchaser that the deeds should remain with them as such security, & that he should, if required, execute a proper mtge. This agreement was signed by the purchaser, & by the trustee in whose custody the deeds were placed. Eight years afterwards the purchaser paid the principal & interest of his debt to this trustee, & received from him the deeds, including the conveyance with the receipt indorsed:—Held: by such payment the purchaser did not discharge himself of his liability incurred by participation in the breach of trust, & the trustee who received the money having misapplied it & absconded, the purchaser was made to pay it over again.—WEBB v. 4013. Person conniving at breach of trust—Suppression of second marriage by wife—Knowledge of husband.]—A., a widow, was entitled for life to certain property, under a will which contained a condition that, should she marry again without consent of the trustees, the property should go over to her children. She did marry again, & until her death concealed her marriage from the trustees. On bill filed by the trustees after her death:—Held: her second husband, who knew of the condition in the will, was bound to refund that which the trustees had in ignorance of her marriage paid to her.—CHARLTON v. COOMBS (1863), 4 Giff. 382; 8 L. T. 653; 9 Jur. N. S. 904; 11 W. R. 1038; 66 E. R. 754.

4014. Debtor to trust estate—Payment to party other than trustees.]—A., on her marriage, assigned a debt due to her from B. to three trustees, upon trust, when requested by her to call it in & invest it, & hold it in trust for A., her husband, & children. B., with full notice but without such request, paid part of the money to the husband by order of the trustees, & other part to the trustees for the express purpose of being advanced to the husband in breach of trust. The money was lost:—Held: B., as well as the trustees, was responsible for the breach of trust.—ANDREWS v. BOUSFIELD (1847), 10 Beav. 511; 9 L. T. O. S. 350; 50 E. R. 678.

ii. Nature of Debt Created.

4033. Whether simple contract debt or specialty debt.—General rule.]—(1) As a general proposition, it is clear that a breach of trust does not constitute a specialty debt (LORD ST. LEONARDS, C.).

(2) Where there has been a deed declaring the trusts amounting to a covenant . . . & where there has been a debt by means of the trustee having money in his possession & applying it contrary to the manner in which under his hand he has covenanted to apply it, in such a case the liability has been held to be a specialty debt (LORD ST. LEONARDS, C.).—ADEY v. ARNOLD (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 432; 20 L. T. O. S. 17; 16 Jur. 1123; 42 E. R. 940, L. C.

4034. —Acknowledgment of trust money in deed.]—A. & B. are trustees under a deed, by which neither of them is to answer for the other. A. receives a sum of money under the trust, & gives a writing under hand & seal acknowledging it, & that B. had received no part of it; A. never placed out the money, & dies; this writing is a specialty & good against the exor., but not against the heir of A. he not being mentioned in it.—*GIFFORD v. A. & B. alone acted. A. paid the interest of the two sums to the daughters, but did not invest the principal. B. executed a mtge. to A. & C. for securing £1,300, part of testator's estate possessed by him, & died. His exors. paid off the £1,300, & A. & C. joined in assigning the mtge. to them & in signing a receipt for the money. 4036. — Mortgage to cestui que trust.]—

A defaulting trustee, under a will, executed a deed under seal, whereby, after reciting that he held in his hands trust moneys to a certain amount, which he proposed to secure by a mtge. on his own estate, he conveyed certain property to the cestuis que trust by way of mtge. The deed contained a proviso for redemption & a power of sale, but no covenant to pay the mtge. debt or interest. The mtged. estate was insufficient to cover the debt:—Held: the deed did not convert the debt into a specialty debt.—ISAACSON v. HARWOOD, BROOK v. HARWOOD (1868), 3 Ch. App. 225; 37 L. J. 4037. — Clause of indemnity in settlement—

Trustees only accountable for money received.]—A clause in a marriage settlement, "that the trustees should not be chargeable with or accountable for any money arising in execution of the trusts, but what the person or persons so to be accountable should actually receive," does not bind the trustees as a covenant; but is a clause of indemnity, to take away that responsibility which each would be subject to for the acts of the others, were it not for this clause; & only leaves each of them accountable for what he actually receives as for a simple contract debt.—BARTLETT v. HOBGSON (1785), 1 Term Rep. 42; 99 E. R. 962.

the terms of which would amount to the creation of a contract, is not a specialty debtor if he has not executed the deed, although he has acted under it.

(2) The words "covenant or agree" are not necessary in a trust deed to constitute a specialty contract. A declaration by the trustee that he will stand possessed on certain trusts, etc., is sufficient.—RICHARDSON v. JENKINS (1853), 1 Drew. 477; 17 Jur. 446; 61 E. R. 534; sub nom. *JENKINS v. 4040. — —.]—Trust property being vested in three trustees, a part of which is outstanding upon mtge., the mtge. is called in, the money received by one, & applied to his own use. He lives many years, & his exors., after his death, continue to pay the interest. His estate is insufficient even to pay specialty debts; & the master, in a suit in which his estate is administered, finds that the money so misapplied is a specialty debt due to the representatives of the surviving co-trustee. The trust deed, which was executed by the trustees, contained the words " & it is hereby declared & agreed between & by all the parties hereto " that the property should be held upon certain trusts. Exceptions are taken to the master's finding, for that he should have found that there was no debt, or if there was that it was not a specialty debt:—Held: the trust deed constituted a covenant, being under hand & seal, & a contract between all the parties to it; & there being a clear right to sue at law, this ct. in declaring that there was a covenant, could also allow such money so received & misapplied as a specialty debt due from the estate of the deceased trustee, who received the money, to the estate of his surviving co-trustee. The breach of trust, if any, was not in allowing the receipt of the money, but the misapplication of it.—ALEXANDER v. FOSTER (1856), 5 W. R. 33.

4041. — — Of acceptance of office.]—

Where a trustee had executed a deed containing merely an appointment of him as trustee, & a declaration by him that he accepted the office:—Held: no covenant by him would be implied, & a claim for trust money received & misapplied by him would not constitute a specialty debt against his estate.—*HOLLAND v. The person who ought to have transferred the stock became bkpt. in 1848, & died in 1851, only a fourth part dividend being got in under his bkpy.:—Held: a bill filed in 1855 by a child of the marriage, who had attained twenty-one years in 1839, was not too late; & the estates of the two trustees were declared to be jointly & severally liable.

4052. ——— Improper investment.]—Trustees advanced trust money upon mtge. of properties consisting of an hotel & stables, & cottages & houses which were principally let at weekly rents. Valuers were employed, & the particulars of the several properties as furnished by the mtgors. were submitted to them, but the trustees did not make inquiries for the purpose of verifying the statements made by the mtgors. as to the value or nature of the properties, or whether they were all let, or what was the amount of the outgoings payable. In their instructions to the valuers, they told them that the mtgees. were trustees, but they did not tell them, according to the rule laid down for trustees in lending on the security or house property, by KAY, J., in Re Olive, Olive v. Westerman, No. 3834, ante, that they did not desire to lend more than one-half the value. Neither did they call the attention of the valuers to circumstances which might affect the value. They also omitted to instruct the valuers to ascertain whether the particulars were correct, or what were the outgoings or average amount of repairs. In each case the valuers gave it as their opinion that a sum more than one-half of the value might be advanced on the security, & such a sum was in each case advanced. Shortly afterwards the mtgors. became insolvent. The several properties were put up for sale, but failed to realise the amounts advanced:—Held: the investments were improper; the trustees had been guilty of negligence in not making inquiries as to the particulars & in not giving proper instructions to the valuers, & in acting upon valuations which under the circumstances they ought not to have acted upon, & they were jointly & severally liable for the money lost.—*Re PARTINGTON, PARTINGTON v. 4057. Set-off of gain against loss.—In computation of amount to be replaced.]—In 1834 a marriage settlement was made, comprising a sum of £2,000 secured by the bond of the husband, payable within six months, & also a sum of £4,000 upon another security. It was declared by the settlement that the trustees might, with the consent of the husband & wife, allow the £2,000 to remain upon the security of the bond, or might with the like consent call the money in. No step was taken by the trustees with regard to the £2,000 until 1836, when the husband became bkpt. The trustees then proved for their debt against the husband's assets, but did not compel payment. In 1838 a written consent was obtained by the trustees from the husband & wife to the £2,000 remaining on the security of the bond. In 1847 the husband again became bkpt., & a bill was filed against the trustees to replace the £2,000. Part of the sum of £4,000 was laid out by the trustees upon copyhold property, for which there was no power under the settlement. This property was improved by the husband to the amount of £2,000:—Held: (1) the wife's consent in 1838 was not retrospective, & having been given while her husband was under difficulties did not exonerate the trustees from their obligation to obtain payment of the money; (2) the profit arising from the improvement of one portion of the trust property could not be set off against the loss upon the other property & the trustees were bound to replace the £2,000.

(3) Where the trustees of a marriage settlement have been guilty of a breach of trust, an indemnity given to them by the husband against liability for losses:—Held: not to extend to lands purchased with the trust moneys, although the original value of such lands has been much enhanced by moneys laid out by the husband.—WILES v. GRESHAM (1854), 2 Drew. 258; 2 Eq. Rep. 560; 23 L. J. Ch. 607; 2 W. R. 355; 61 E. R. 718; affd., 5 De G. M. & G. 770, L. J.J.

4058. — — — — —]—(1) A widow who was tenant for life, extrix., & trustee of the will of her husband, who died in 1882, converted part of his residuary personal estate; but, acting on the advice of a commission agent who had been the friend & adviser of her husband, postponed the sale of eight other investments left by testator, which consisted principally of shares only partly paid up in banking & other cos., & were not securities on which trust funds could properly be invested in the expectation that the price of the shares would rise. An action was commenced against her by beneficiaries under the will, for the purpose of having her liability in respect of any loss or misapplication of the trust funds determined; & the ct. directed a sale of the shares, which took place about fourteen years after testator's death. Upon a summons taken out by plffs. in the action, the ct. made a declaration that the shares ought to have been sold at the expiration of twelve calendar months from his death, & directed inquiries for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of loss or gain resulting from the postponement of the sale. From the Chief Clerk's certificate, in answer to the inquiries, it appeared that while the postponement of the sale of some of the shares had resulted in a gain, the loss from the postponement of the sale of the rest amounted to £1,593 10s. 6d., & exceeded the gain by £349 6s. Upon a summons by plffs. for the determination of the questions whether or not the extrix. was liable to make good to testator's estate the loss which had resulted from the postponement of the sale of the shares in respect of which there had been a loss; whether she was entitled to deduct from such loss, or to be allowed, the gain which had resulted from the postponement of the sale of the shares in respect of which there had been a gain:—Held: she was liable to make good to the estate the sum of £1,593 10s. 6d. being the amount of the loss without deducting or allowing for the gain which had resulted from the postponement of the sale of the shares in respect of which there had been a gain.

raised money by mtge. of the share, in order to pay A.'s apprentice premium to an apothecary. It was intended to apprentice A. to X., but it being discovered that X. was not a licenced apothecary, it was arranged by the solr. acting in the matter that A. should be nominally apprenticed to Y., a licenced apothecary, but actually serve his time with X. The receipt for the whole amount was signed by Y.; but only half was paid, & that to X., the remaining half being handed over to A.'s father, who gave Y. his promissory note for the amount, but never discharged the obligation. The purpose for which the money was raised having failed:—Held: B., although not shown to have been guilty of more than negligence, in following his solr.'s advice, was bound to bear the consequences of the mistake, & to replace the money borrowed on security of A.'s reversionary share.—*SIMPSON v. After the marriage, a legacy of £5,000 was bequeathed to the wife for her separate use, & this sum was at the request of the husband & wife invested in their joint names in stock, etc., by the exors., who were also the trustees of the settlement. Subsequently the stock was sold out by the husband, & the purchase money lost:—Held: the legacy formed part of the trust estate of the settlement, & the trustees were bound to make good the loss.

An agreement was entered into between the aunt, the husband & the wife, whereby the aunt agreed to give up her life interest in £2,000, part of the £3,000, & the husband agreed to release his right in the remaining sum of £1,000, his wife's chose in action, & it to remain for her sole & separate use after the death of her aunt; & also agreed to advance a sum of £2,000 his own money; both sums of £2,000 to be settled for the purposes of making permanent provision for themselves, the husband & wife, & the survivor of them. The money was paid to the trustees to be invested, & the dividends, etc., to be paid to them during their joint lives, & the principal sum to be at the disposal of the survivor:—Held: the trustee who took upon himself to pay part of the dividends to the wife for her support, should refund.—*DUNCAN v. 4074. Reversionary interest payable to husband on coming into possession—Other property settled on wife—Settled property obtained by husband through breach of trust—Liability for difference between settled fund & reversionary interest.]—Upon a marriage it was agreed that a reversionary interest of the intended wife should be paid to the husband when it fell into possession, & other property of the wife was settled to her separate use; the settled funds, by reason of breaches of trust, came to the hands of the husband, who afterwards became insolvent. When the reversionary interest fell into possession, it was paid into ct., & in a suit to make the trustee liable, or to have payment out of the fund in ct. of the amount of the settled property which had been lost, the ct. declared that the wife had a lien on the fund to that amount, & that the trustee was liable to make good the rest.—*THORP v. He kept the trust money in his name at a bank, but to a separate account, for some time after the costs had been taxed & the balance ascertained. The bank failed on Sept. 24, 1857:—Held: J. was personally liable to make good the loss which had accrued to the trust estate by reason of the failure of the bank.—LUNHAM v. BLUNDELL (1857), 27 L. J. Ch. 179; 4 Jur. N. S. 3; 6 W. R. 49.

4077. Payment to wrong person.]—On the death of the tenant for life of an estate in 1849, the estate, according to one view of the construction of a will disposing of it, devolved upon C. as trustee for Mrs. V., according to another view it devolved upon W., a lunatic, the committee of whose estate C. was. Mr. & Mrs. V. entered into occupation of part of the estate, & C. received the rents of the remainder & paid them over to Mrs. V. with full notice that the persons who would, according to the second view of the construction, become entitled on the death of W. intended to assert their title. W. died in 1851. A bill was afterwards filed in 1856 by W.'s personal representative to compel C. to account for the rents received by him:—Held: whether C., if he had not been committee of the lunatic, would have been liable so to account or not, his having filled that position made him clearly liable so to account.—WRIGHT v. CHARD (1860), 1 De G. F. & J. 567; 29 L. J. Ch. 415; 2 L. T. 104; 6 Jur. N. S. 476; 8 W. R. 334; 45 E. R. 481, L. J. J.

4080. Trustees with notice of assignment of interest of beneficiary—Money paid to or on behalf of beneficiary.]—By the will of testator a share of his estate was given to trustees upon trust during the life of one of his sons to pay & apply the whole or any part of the income or accumulations of income of the share for the support, maintenance, or education, or otherwise for the benefit of that son, his wife, or children, in such manner in all respects as the trustees should in their uncontrolled discretion think fit. The son assigned his interest by way of mtge. to pltf. Notice of the assignment was duly given to the trustees of the will; but, after receiving such notice, they made payments out of the income of the share to or on behalf of the sum. Pltf. took out an originating summons seeking to make the trustees liable in respect of the payments so made. Objection was waived to the decision of a question of breach of trust upon an originating summons:—Held: the trustees were liable for all sums paid to or on behalf of the son after they had received notice of assignment.—*Re NEIL, HEMMING v. The trustees invested the funds in such a manner that the income tax was always deducted before the income was paid to them. The successive trustees for over twenty years paid all the annuities in full without deducting income tax. Some of the trustees were also annuitants:—Held: the trustees were liable to make good to the trust estate the amounts of income tax so overpaid to the annuitants.—*Re SHARP, RICKETT v. 4098. —.]—Testatrix, who died in 1848, by her will, dated the day before her death, bequeathed one-fourth of her personal estate upon trust for her married daughter, A., for life, for her separate, inalienable use, with remainder to A.'s children, & the other three-fourths upon trust for her, testatrix's, three sons. In 1850 a family arrangement was entered into by two deeds, one a declaration of trust, the other a release, for the division of testatrix's property among her children. The release was executed by A. but not by her husband, & it contained a recital that the testatrix, during her lifetime, advanced to A., with her husband's privity & consent, the sum of £400, "in part of & to be deducted out of any money which testatrix might leave by will to A. or her issue." The division of the property was made on the footing of that recital being true. On the death of A., in 1870, her children filed a bill against the representatives of testatrix's trustees, to compel them to pay the whole of the share of the property bequeathed to their mother:—Held: plffs. were not bound by the deeds of 1850, & were entitled to have the £400 deducted from their mother's share, with interest from her death made good.—TAYLOR v. CARTWRIGHT (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 167; 41 L. J. Ch. 529; 26 L. T. 571; 20 W. R. 603.

4099. —. Trustee not ready with accounts.]—The first duty of an agent, receiver, trustee, or exor., is to be constantly ready with his accounts, & neglect in this, is a ground for charging him with interest.—PEARSE v. GREEN (1819), 1 Jac. & W. 135; 37 E. R. 327.

4100. —. Trustee paying money to wrong person.—Payment to father of cestui que trust.]—Lands directed by a will to be sold & the produce divided. The lands were not sold, but were divided, & the share of A. remained vested in the trustees, one of whom was her father. Subsequently, this share was sold, & the money was not given over to the cestui que trust, nor invested for her benefit, but was paid to the father. On a bill filed for recovery of the money, the ct. held, that both the trustees were liable, although one of them signed the receipt for the sake of conformity only, & refused to make any allowance to the father for maintenance: & decreed that the trustees should repay the amount of the purchase-money with interest at 5 per cent.—ENGLISH v. WILLATS (1831), 1 L. J. Ch. 84.

4103. —. Trustee wrongly refusing to pay over money.]—D. claimed a fund as next of kin to J., who had sailed from England in 1814, & had never since been heard of. The fund came into possession of a trustee in 1844, who retained it in his own hands, & refused to pay it over to D. without direct & positive proof of the death of J.:—Held: the trustee must pay over the whole fund, together with interest at 5 per cent. from the time when he ought to have invested it.—DORSON v. PATTINSON (1857), 3 Jur. N. S. 1202; 5 W. R. 771.

4104. —. Trustee failing to pay over money when requested.—Loss through failure of bank.]—G., being entitled to a share of an estate, went abroad leaving a power of attorney to receive such share. The estate was sold, but the purchaser requiring G.'s confirmation, his share was deposited in the names of E. & P. in the bank on a declaration of trust. On the confirmation arriving, E. was repeatedly applied to for more than four months but neglected to hand the fund over, alleging a difficulty in making out the account; the bank failed, & the money was lost. On bill filed:—Held: E. was liable to restore the money with interest & pay the costs, P. being always ready to hand over.—GOUGH v. ETTY (1869), 20 L. T. 358.

4110. —.]—By will, dated in 1825, testatrix gave “£500 to be laid out at interest: & if my sister B. survive her husband, she to have the interest, both what may have accumulated, & during her life. If B. die before her husband, the principal & accumulated interest to be divided equally between her daughters. My remaining property I will have made the most of till B.'s youngest daughter attain twenty-five years, when the daughters of B. are to take it: & if but one, she to take it all.” Testatrix died in 1831. B. died in 1855, in the lifetime of her husband. B. had one daughter, who attained twenty-five in 1832, & married plaintiff. On attaining twenty-five she had signed a settlement of accounts with the acting trustee, deft. P., by which only simple interest at 4 per cent. was charged on the residuary estate. P. had retained all the moneys in his own hands:—Held: (1) there was an express trust for accumulating the legacy of £500 at compound interest; (2) the memorandum of 1832, regulating the mode of calculating interest on the residuary estate, did not bind pltf., in right of his wife, to calculate the interest of the £500 legacy in the same manner. Deft. the acting trustee was therefore charged with interest after the rate of 4 per cent. on the £500 legacy, compound interest for twenty-one years from the decease of testatrix, & simple interest after the twenty-one years.—WILSON v. PEAKE (1856), 3 Jur. N. S. 155.

4111. —.]—In 1845 the directors of a railway co., now represented by pltf., made an authorised advance to another railway co., now represented by deft., the members of the finance committees of the two cos. being the same. The object of this loan was to enable deft.'s co. to purchase a canal; & to effect this the money so advanced was paid by deft.'s co. to a canal co. The greater part of the money was recovered from the canal co. by deft.'s co. under a decree made in 1855, on a bill filed on behalf of the shareholders. The two cos. were wound up in 1849.

A bill was now filed by pltf., the official manager of the co. that made the loan, against deft., the official manager of the borrowing co., to recover out of the money refunded by the canal co. the balance due to pltf.'s co. in respect of the advance:—Held: the loan having been a breach of trust, of which deft.'s co. had notice, pltf.'s claim was not barred by Stat. Limitations, & he was entitled to recover the amount claimed with interest at 4 per cent. from the time when the money was received from the canal co.—ERNEST v. CROYSBILL (1860), 2 De G. H. & his partners gave their bond to H. & his co-trustees for the amount, payable with interest at 5 per cent. No action at law could be maintained on the bond. In a suit to make the trustees liable for a breach of trust:—Held: H. was only liable to pay 4 per cent. on the loss which had occurred to the trust funds.

(2) If any one of the trustees should pay the whole he may come against the others for contribution (ROMILLY, M.R.).—FLETCHER v. GREEN (1864), 33 Beav. 426; 55 E. R. 433; subsequent proceedings, 33 Beav. 513.

Resps., K. & C., were stockbrokers, carrying on business in partnership as K. C. & co. C. was a director of applt. co., & he was also a member of a temporary board, by which the business of the co. was for a time conducted. C. agreed with contractors for a railway to place certain debentures of that railway at a commission of 5 per cent.

The firm of K. C. & co. then made a proposal to applt. co. to place these shares at $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. This proposal was submitted to a committee, of which C. was not a member, who recommended its acceptance, & subsequently the recommendation of the committee was adopted by the temporary board. C. was present at the meeting of the temporary board, & at the time stated that he was interested in the sale of the debentures, & offered to leave the room while the proposal was discussed. The chairman told him that this was unnecessary, & C. accordingly remained in the room. On a bill filed by applt. co., praying the repayment by K. & C. of the profits made by them, viz. $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the amount of the debentures placed :—Held : resps. were bound to refund, the fiduciary position of C. forbidding him to make a profit out of the funds of the assocn. ; the transaction was not protected by the clause in the arts. of assocn., since C. did not "declare his interest" within the meaning of that clause, i.e. the nature, as well as the existence, of his interest ; & K. & C. were jointly & severally liable for the whole amount claimed ; no fraud having been intended, & C. having acted on the honest belief that he had brought himself within the terms of the clause in the arts. of assocn., interest should be ordered at the rate of 4, & not of 5 per cent.—*IMPERIAL MERCANTILE CREDIT ASSOCN. 4114. —[—]—By a marriage settlement, made in 1846, a policy of assurance on the life of K., the husband, was assigned to two trustees, C. & J., the husband covenanting to keep up the policy. J. was unaware of his having been appointed a trustee, & on becoming aware of it, in 1872, disclaimed. C. gave no notice of the settlement to the assurance society, & did not indorse on the policy any memorandum of the settlement. In 1854 C. purported to appoint W. sole trustee of the settlement, & handed over the policy to him. W. allowed K. to get possession of the policy, & K., after receiving a bonus on it, mortgaged it, & the mtee. subsequently surrendered it to the assurance society. There were no funds available for keeping up the policy, & K. had been in straitened circumstances for some time previous to the mtge. He died in 1869. In the view of the ct., C. was aware when he handed over the policy to W. that a breach of trust was contemplated :—Held : C. & W. were jointly & severally liable, W. primarily as between themselves, for the sum received on the surrender of the policy, & for that received by K. on account of the bonus, with compound interest at 4 per cent. from the dates when these sums were respectively received, until the date of K.'s death, & simple interest thenceforward up to the date of the account.—*KINGDON v. During the husband's lifetime the wife frequently asked him for the money ; but no proceedings to recover it were taken until after his death, which occurred in 1891 :—Held : the husband was affected with notice of the separate use, & was a trustee of the money for his wife ; Stat. Limitations was no defence to proceedings by her against his exors. ; & the wife was entitled to be paid the amount of the legacy, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of her husband's death.—*WASELL v. If it is supposed that in A.-G. v. Alford, No. 4109, ante, I laid it down that a defaulting trustee could never be charged with more than 4 per cent. that is quite a mistaken assumption of my meaning. In that case I thought that though the trustee was chargeable with impropriety of conduct yet that the circumstances of the case showed that it was impossible to impute to him an intention to appropriate the moneys to his own use. In such a case I expressed myself as clearly of opinion that the ct. would be justified in dealing most rigorously & charging the trustee with 5 per cent. whether he had made it or not (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*BERWICK-UPON-TWEED CORPN. v. Under such circumstances, if the fund had been paid into ct., it would have realised 4 per cent. with yearly or half-yearly rests, which being equal to 5 per cent. without rests, A. was held liable to that interest, on the equitable principle of putting the creditors into the same situation as if he had paid the fund into ct. in the ordinary manner.—*COURT v. the shares were registered in the names of the purchasers from S. Four of the directors, at the request of S., took over a large number of the new shares, at £30 per share, before they had been issued to S., & sold them at a considerable profit. Bonus shares in the co. were subsequently issued to the holders of the new shares, & a considerable number of these were allotted to the same four directors. The bank, by their public officer, subsequently filed a bill against the four directors, alleging that the issue of the new shares & the arrangement with S. was carried into effect in pursuance of a scheme & secret understanding between defts. & S., devised & entered into for their own profit. The bill, which was founded on the ground of fraud in reference to this alleged scheme & also on the ground of breach of trust arising out of the purchase by defts. as persons in a fiduciary position of trust property, sought to make defts. jointly & severally accountable for the profits made by them out of the transaction. The evidence in support of the allegations of fraud was extremely voluminous:—Held: so much of the bill as rested on fraud must be dismissed with costs, but defts. were trustees for the bank of the profits which they had made from the transaction, & must respectively account for the same.—*PARKER v. The E. Tramway Co.'s Act contained a sect. that the co. should pay the expenses of obtaining the Act. They contracted with the C. co. to lay the tramway, & pay such expenses of the Act. M., the solr., & B., the engineer, of the E. co. at the same time made a separate agreement with the C. co. to relieve the C. co. of these expenses for a sum of £17,000. The actual expenses did not amount to the latter sum:—Held: M. & B. were bound to account to the E. co. for the profit they made by their agreement with the C. co., their agreement being illegal & void; & even if the E. co. had adopted the agreement of M. & B., they would have acted ultra vires.—*MANN v. Testator died in 1848, & his widow in 1851. The six children survived testator, as did also a seventh not mentioned in the will, & in 1863, inquiries respecting the estate were commenced on behalf of the children of that seventh child as to their interest in the estate, & after much correspondence a common administration suit was begun by them in June, 1864. In the course of the proceedings it appeared that the trustees had advanced to one of testator's daughters (Mrs. R.) & her husband, who had no children, her share, in order, as appeared by releases which they executed, to enlarge the capital of R. to carry on his farm, & after the institution of the suit they advanced the share of Mrs. C., another married daughter, to the son of one of the trustees, upon her entering into business as a farmer in partnership with him & two other of the testator's children, whose shares were in like manner advanced; but Mr. C. covenanted that the business should be for his wife's separate use.

The decree of the Vice-Chancellor directed debts to pay all costs of the suit except £200 taken as the amount of the costs of an ordinary administration suit, which his Honour ordered to be paid out of the estate; but the decree was varied by striking out that last direction as one improper to be given in the absence of the other parties entitled under the will; & as plffs. had succeeded in setting aside only one of the advances, debts were relieved from paying all the costs, although having regard to their improper conduct in refusing to account to plffs., in withholding information which they themselves possessed, & in other respects also, they were ordered to pay all costs as of an administration suit, & all additional costs were left to be borne by the parties themselves.—*TALBOT v. B. having become bkpt., in an action by the annuitant J. was ordered to refund the trust legacy in his hands, which was insufficient to answer the breach of trust committed by his testator:—Held: neither J. nor the trustee in bkpty. of B. was entitled to have his costs out of the fund before it was paid into ct.—*Re KNOTT, BAX v. If he violates his trust, & is guilty of fraud, no doubt the ct. will oblige him to pay the costs which by his misconduct the cestuis que trust have been put to (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—BAKER v. CARTER (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 250; 4 L. J. Ex. Eq. 12; 160 E. R. 102.

4180. Inadequate price.]—Part of the estate of a testator consisted of two-thirds shares of the money to arise from the sale of certain messuages & hereditaments in Sydney, which during the life of testator had, by deed in 1846, been vested in trustees there upon trust for sale, with power to suspend the sale & to manage & lease the property. Testator, at the time of his death in 1868, was supposed by the trustees of his will in England, & the beneficiaries, to be seised in fee simple of the two-thirds shares. As the property was expected to increase in value, all the beneficiaries agreed that the sale should be postponed, & under the mistaken impression as to the nature of testator's interest they, by deed in 1869, requested the trustees of the will to postpone the sale. In 1870 the sum of £10,000 was offered for the entire property, but was refused. In 1875 one of the beneficiaries sold his one-fifth share of testator's two-thirds for £1,000. In Mar. 1880, A., another of the beneficiaries, being ill & in pecuniary difficulties, sold his one-fifth share to S., one of the trustees of the will, for £900. Shortly afterwards both A. & S. died. In Sept. 1881, the entire property was sold for £30,000, & consequently A.'s share therein proved to be worth over £4,000, eighteen months after the sale of it to S. for £900.

In an action by A.'s wife against L., the exor. of S., to set aside the sale of A.'s share to S. she did not aver that A. had been guilty of fraud in the transaction, or that A. was not fully aware of what he was doing at the time of the sale; but she prayed relief on the ground that S. stood in the position of trustee to A., who at the time of the sale was in very embarrassed circumstances, as S. knew; that the price was considerably below the real value of the share, as S. also knew; & that A. had no independent advice in the transaction:—Held: as the purchaser & vendor stood in the positions of trustee & cestui que trust, although the trustee was not the donee of a power of sale, his duty was to see that the property realised its full value; & the vendor being in embarrassed circumstances to the knowledge of the trustee, & the price given by the trustee for the property being greatly inadequate, the relief asked for must be granted. L. must pay the costs of the action, & was not entitled to deduct them from the share sold to S.—FLOWRIGHT v. LAMBERT (1885), 52 L. T. 646.

4182. Improper investment.]—A trustee, with power to invest the trust property in leasehold or chattel personal securities, or upon the personal security of any person, advanced, at the request of his cestuis que trust, some of the trust property to two ladies on the security of mtgs., with the usual covenants, of a leasehold house in which the ladies were living, & of the furniture in it. The trustee was also the lessor of the house. The mtgors. became insolvent, paid no rent, & no part of the principal or interest on the loan. The trustee, as lessor, determined the lease by entry, & then sold all his interest in the leasehold premises & the furniture; but he thereby so mixed up the trust property with his own that it was impossible to distinguish the one from the other, or to pronounce with certainty how much of the proceeds of the sale was his, & how much belonged to the cestuis que trust. The advance had been made at 5 per cent. After some delay, the trustee replaced the principal money of the loan, but invested it against the wishes of his cestui que trust in 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, the dividends on which, however, were paid to them:—Held: the trustee was bound to make good to the trust estate the whole of the money advanced on the loan, with all interest due thereon, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, to be computed up to the date of the decree; & must pay the costs of the suit.—*COOK v. 4190. — Personal considerations.]—Matters of personal or private feeling cannot be considered in a question either of merits or of costs, as between trustee & cestui que trust.

A trustee who deems himself to be or is assailed by imputations cast upon him by his cestui que trust is not justified in refusing to do an act which his trust requires until he receives an apology from the cestui que trust, & if he refuses, from want of such apology alone, to do an act which his duty as trustee requires, he will be liable to the costs of a suit brought to enforce the performance of such duty.—*MOORE v. 4193. — Identity of beneficiary doubtful.]—Testator left all his property to trustees on trust for his wife for life & all the residue to A. H., daughter of his brother W. H. absolutely. Testator's brother W. had three daughters, E., M., & A., pltf., who had long prior to the will been Mrs. S., & on the ground of the doubt of identity the trustees refused to pay over the residue:—Held: the refusal was not warranted by the circumstances; pltf.'s second name being A., & she being a daughter of testator's brother W., was sufficient, & on bill filed for payment, decree with costs.—*SOUTHWELL v. As a rule he can only be made to pay costs for misconduct, & he is only deprived of his costs for something which might properly be termed misconduct, though it sometimes is characterised by a milder term, such as neglect, or negligence, or carelessness. 4202. Mistake—Trusts of doubtful will—Failure to invest.—[A trustee wilfully applying trust moneys to his own use is chargeable with interest at 5 per cent.; but where, under the trusts of a doubtful will, the tenant for life, who was also a trustee, neglected to make proper investments, she was held chargeable with interest at 4 per cent. only & the decree was made without costs.

If she had had no personal interest & had been a mere trustee or exor., I should have thought that she was not only not chargeable with costs, but entitled to them. That she committed a mistake is now beyond all doubt, . . . but, under these circumstances, I think that the decree must be made without costs (LANGDALE, M.R.).—*MOUSLEY v. 4241. Appeal as to costs—Trustee charged on appeal.]—A bill was filed against a trustee seeking a general trust account, & charging him with a breach of trust, in not properly investing the trust moneys; & the bill prayed payment by the trustee of the costs of the suit: the breach of trust was established against him, but the ct. below ordered all his costs of the suit to be paid him, as between solr. & client, out of the trust moneys generally :—Held : such order was wrong, the trustee must personally pay the costs of the suit relative to the breach of trust established against him; & the case was an exception to the general rule, that an appeal will not lie for costs.—*ANGELL v. 4256. — Act done in ordinary course of business.—Testator up to his death was the registered holder of a large amount of American railway bonds. These bonds were issued payable to bearer, but the holder could register them, after which they could only be transferred by entry in the books of the co., but the owner could unregister them so as to make them again payable to bearer. Exors. who desired to sell bonds of which their testator was registered holder could either sell & transfer them as registered bonds, or unregister them & then sell. It was proved that the former course was extremely unusual. Testator appointed his wife & two stockbrokers, J. & C., his exors. & trustees, & authorised J. & C. to charge for business done by them as stockbrokers for his estate. J. had been testator's stockbroker. The exors. determined to sell the bonds, & for that purpose the three unregistered them & put them in the hands of J. to sell. J. sold them & from time to time paid considerable sums into a bank to the account of testator's estate, but ultimately absconded after misappropriating a considerable part of the proceeds. The dispositions of testator's will were such that the sale could not be treated as an unauthorised act, & the absconding of J. took place within eleven months after the death of testator. Testator's children brought this action to make all three executors liable for the loss:—Held: (1) the unregistering the bonds & handing them to J. to sell were not "unnecessary" acts, & the co-exors. were not liable for J.'s misappropriation; (2) as J. was trusted by testator, & his co-exors. had no reason to suspect him, there had been no such delay in calling upon J. for an account as to make them liable.—*Re GASQUOINE, GASQUOINE v. 4257. — Trustee acting bonâ fide.—Testator gave the residue of his estate to trustees to invest in or upon such stocks, funds, & securities as they "shall think fit." The trustees invested £3,000, part of the trust estate, upon debentures at par of the New Travellers' Club, one of the trustees receiving, without the knowledge of his co-trustee, a bonus or commission of £300 on the transaction. The co-trustee assented to the investment, thinking it would benefit the trust estate. As a matter of fact the debentures were not, & never had been, of par value, & at the time the action was brought were of little or no market value:—Held: (1) "as they shall think fit" meant "as they shall honestly think fit"; (2) the commission or bonus of £300 received by one of the trustees was a bribe, & therefore that trustee did not "honestly think fit," & consequently he was liable to make good a cheque on the estate bank account payable to the order of the alleged borrower. The solicitor-trustee indorsed the cheque by forging the payee's name, obtained the money, & absconded:—Held: L. was not charge-

4280. — — — — —]—For transfer of trust fund into court.]—A., B. & C. were by order of the ct. appointed trustees of a trust fund invested in Consols. The business of the trust, such as the receipt of the dividends accruing due on the trust fund & the like, had for some time prior to their appointment been conducted by the Union Bank. The new trustees continued the Union Bank as the bank of the trust, & authorised them, by power of attorney & memorandum of instruction, to receive the dividends due on the trust fund & otherwise to transact the business of the trust. An order being made by the ct. for the transfer of the trust fund into ct., the trustees authorised D. who was a partner of C. in a banking firm, to transfer the fund into ct., & for this purpose they signed & sent to him a power of attorney & a memorandum of instruction. The power of attorney & the letter of instruction accompanying it only authorised D. to transfer the fund, not to receive any dividend becoming due upon it. In Jan. 1866, a dividend became due on the fund. D. acting under the directions of C., received this dividend & paid it into the bank of C. & D. C. & D. shortly afterwards failed, & executed a deed of inspectorship under Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (c. 134):—Held: C. alone of the trustees was liable for the loss, & must replace the dividend.—NEWTON v. The dividends on the stock being reduced, one of the trustees in whom the husband & wife principally confided, & who, with his partners, was their solr., informed his co-trustees that he had an opportunity of investing the property in a mtge. at 5 per cent., & with the consent of the husband & wife, requested his co-trustees to execute a power of attorney to enable him to sell the stock. 4287. — Trustee having never acted.]— In 1823 deft. was, with his consent, named one of three trustees of a marriage settlement: but he never executed the deed. His co-trustees, who were sons. in partnership, executed the deed, & acted in the trusts. One of them died in 1826. W., the surviving co-trustee, neglected to call in & invest a part of the trust moneys, which was thereby lost to the estate. On May 18, 1830, a portion of the trust moneys was invested in stock, & a memorandum to that effect was indorsed upon the settlement, & signed by W. In Oct. 1845, deft., who had never acted, made inquiry as to the trust property & investments, when he was told that he was a trustee, & the stock receipt for the sum above mentioned was handed to him. On March 17, 1847, on being shown the deed, deft. signed the indorsement. In Feb. 1852, W. died insolvent. After W.'s death, deft. received the dividends of the sum of stock mentioned in the memorandum, & paid same to the cestui que trust. On a bill by the parties beneficially interested, praying for an account of all sums which had been received by deft. & his co-trustees, or of what, without his wilful neglect & default, might have been received, & that he might be decreed to make good such losses :—Held : deft.'s liability must be confined to the amount mentioned in the memorandum : & so far as the bill sought to make him liable for more than that amount, it must be dismissed with costs.—MALZY v. EDGE (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 12; 2 Jur. N. S. 80; 4 W. R. 213.

4288. — [As to safety of securities.]—A box containing securities of the Spanish Govt., the property in which passed by delivery, was deposited at a bank in the names of three trustees. The Spanish Govt. having afterwards made proposals for a change in the securities, one of the three trustees, who was a stockbroker, was allowed to take the securities out of the box for the purpose of such conversion; he effected the conversion but appropriated a part of the converted securities to his own use, & placed the rest in the box, which he returned to the bank. The fraud was not discovered for several years. The trustee kept the key of the box, being allowed to have access to the box for the purpose of from time to time tearing off coupons & obtaining the dividends, & from time to time took out others of the securities, which he converted to his own use, until at last the box was empty :—Held: the co-trustees were liable for the first breach of trust, it being their duty after the conversion to see that the securities were all deposited in the box; but they were not liable in respect of the subsequent misappropriations.—MENDES v. GUEDALLA (1802), 2 John. & H. 259; 31 L. J. Ch. 561; 6 L. T. 746; 8 Jur. N. S. 878; 10 W. R. 482; 70 E. H. 1054.

A mere agent of trustees is answerable only to his principal & not to cestui que trust in respect of trust moneys coming to his hands merely in his character of agent. But . . . a person who receives into his hands trust moneys, & who deals with them in a manner inconsistent with the performance of trusts of which he is cognisant, is personally liable for the consequences which may ensue upon his so dealing (BACON, V.-C.).—LEE v. 4313.—[During the life of D., owner in fee of land which was let to tenants from year to year & week to week, the property was managed by deft. as her agent, deft. receiving the rents & paying them into a separate ear-marked account at his own bank. D. having died intestate in 1867, deft. continued to receive the rents & pay them into the bank exactly as before, not informing the tenants of D.'s death, but stating to several persons that he was acting as agent & receiver for the true heir whoever he might be. Deft. thus acted till 1880, when, more than twelve years having elapsed after D.'s death, he claimed the property on his own account. The assignee of D.'s heir having in 1881 brought an action against deft. to recover possession of the land & for an account of the rents & profits:—Held: as to the land the acts of deft. in receiving the rents as agent for the heir could not dispossess the heir so as to put him to his action under Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27), ss. 2, 3, or 8, the deft.'s acts as such agent though unauthorised might be ratified by the true owner, & were ratified by plff. bringing his action within a reasonable time after the heir was ascertained: as to the accumulated rents & profits deft. had made himself a trustee & plff. was entitled to judgment for the recovery of possession of the land & to an account of the rents & profits since D.'s death.—LYELL v. Where a cestui que trust assigned a reversionary legacy to his trustee, & the trustee mortgaged it & was subsequently declared a defaulter, the mtgee. was postponed to the claim of the beneficiaries to have the default made good.—DOERING v. 4321. — Interest in separate fund.]—An exor. & trustee, who was absolutely entitled to a specific legacy subject only to prior life interests therein, was also trustee of the residuary personal estate, which was settled upon trusts under which he took no beneficial interest whatever. He settled part of the legacy while still reversionary & mortgaged the other part. Several years afterwards he misappropriated part of the residue. The legacy having fallen into possession & been transferred into ct. in the course of an action for the execution of the trusts of the will, the residuary legatees sought to attach the legacy to make good the default in respect of the residue:—Held: the rule that a defaulting trustee cannot claim any share in the trust estate until he has made good his default, inasmuch as he must be treated as having by anticipation received or retained payment of his share, did not apply to the present case, because the trustee was not entitled to any share or interest in the residue; & as the specific legacy & residue were held upon entirely distinct trusts, one fund was not liable to indemnify the other, & the trustee's assignees were, therefore, entitled to the whole legacy free from any lien or equity in respect of the default.—Re TOWNDROW, GRATTON v. After the marriage the trustee took no steps to enforce the covenants. In 1846 the husband sold the trust property, & appropriated the money, the trustee acting in the transaction as solr. for the purchaser. In 1848 the trustee died. In 1852 the husband became bkpt., & he then applied to the widow & extrix. of the trustee to prove under the bkpcy. for the trust property, but she refused to do so. Dividends amounting to 11s. in the pound, having been declared under the bkpcy., new trustees were appointed by the Ct. of Ch., who tendered a proof, which was rejected as not having been made within the proper time. The trustee's widow died in 1865. not for involuntary acts, or for the acts or defaults of his co-trustees or co-trustee, & particularly that any trustee who should pay over to his co-trustee, or should concur in any act enabling him to receive any moneys for the general purposes of the will, or for any definite purpose authorised by the will, should not be obliged to see to the due application thereof, nor be rendered responsible by express notice of misapplication of the moneys ; but this clause should not restrict the right of any trustee to require an account from his co-trustee or to make him replace moneys misapplied. Two trustees entrusted the trust fund to a third for investment, & he immediately misapplied it :—Held : the two trustees were not liable to make good the fund.

It was clearly competent for a testator to define the duties of his trustees, & to say that they should not incur the ordinary liabilities incident to their office; &, if so, the ct. had no right to invest such trustees with a responsibility beyond that which testator had thought it right to impose on them (LORD WESTBURY, C.).—WILKINS v. & power to employ collectors of debts & accountants. The will contained an indemnity clause that each trustee should be answerable only for losses arising from his own default, & that any trustee who should pay over to his co-trustee, or should concur in any act enabling him to receive any moneys for the purposes of the will, should not be obliged to see to the application thereof, nor should such trustee be rendered responsible by an express notice of the actual misapplication of the same moneys.

The business was carried on, with the consent of the beneficiaries, by one trustee, A. testator's son, & an account was opened at the bank, & a letter signed by both exors. & trustees, authorising the bank to honour the signature of the one trustee, viz. A. the son. Under this authority, the trustee, A. drew out, nominally for the business, large sums of money, which he misappropriated to his own purposes:—Held: in the absence of proof, or gross negligence or personal misconduct on the part of the trustee D. he was fully protected by the indemnity clause from liability in respect of the loss to the estate occasioned by the defalcations of his co-trustee A.—PASS v. DUNDAS (1880), 43 L. T. 665; 20 W. R. 332.

4348. — Trustees acting without care & impartiality.—Trustees sold a tenement, the property of the trust, to one of seven beneficiaries under the trust deed, the price in terms of the contract being payable in May, 1874. In Nov. 1874, the purchaser being unable to pay £12,000 of the price, was allowed to retain it on loan. As security for the loan, he conveyed to the trustees three houses, including his purchase from the trust, upon each of which there were prior incumbrances to an amount exceeding two-thirds of the estimated value as stated by the borrower. Besides these securities the trustees held the personal obligation of the borrower & his father-in-law: both of whom were engaged in trade. Some of the other beneficiaries remonstrated in 1874, & again in 1880; but the money was allowed to remain on these securities until 1884, when the borrower & his father-in-law became bkpt., & about £10,000 was lost to the trust. The trust deed contained (a) a clause empowering the trustees to lend out the proceeds & other funds of the trust on "such securities heritable or personal" as they might think proper; & (b) an immunity clause declaring that the trustees should not be liable for "omissions, errors, or neglect of management." The same law agent acted for the trustees & the borrower:—Held: the trustees had not acted with perfect impartiality between the beneficiaries, nor had they brought to the management the same care & diligence which a man of ordinary prudence would have exercised in his own concerns, in these circumstances neither the immunity clause nor the authority to lend on personal security were sufficient to protect them, & they were personally liable to make good the deficiency in the trust funds.—KNOX v. MACKINNON (1888), 13 App. Cas. 753, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 3.—RELIEF FOR HONEST AND REASONABLE CONDUCT.

A. In General.

See Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), 61.

4350. General rule.—Suppose a trustee, having in his hands a considerable sum of money, places it out in the funds, which afterwards sink in their value; or on a security at the time apparently good, which afterwards turns out not to be so, for the benefit of the cestui que trust, was there ever an instance of the trustee's being made to answer the actual sum so placed out? I answer, no. If there is no malâ fides, nothing wilful in the conduct of the trustee, the ct. will always favour him (LORD HARDWICKE, C.)—KNIGHT v. PLYMOUTH (EARL) (1747), as reported in 1 Dick. 120; 21 E. R. 214, L. C.

4351. No general principles laid down.—Each case dealt with according to circumstances.—The conduct of trustees ought to be regarded with reference to the facts & circumstances existing at the time when they had to act & which were known, or which ought to have been known, by them at that time.

By his will testator gave his sons in succession an option to purchase his leasehold mill property at a valuation, payable by half yearly instalments with interest. In addition to giving a bond, the son purchasing was to execute a mtge. The sale moneys were to be invested upon some of the investments authorised by the will & to be disposed of as thereby directed. The investment clause gave the trustees absolute discretion to invest in the securities named therein, or in case either of the sons should elect to carry on testator's business, then upon security of the land, mill, & premises whereon the business should be carried on. Testator died in 1875. The eldest son exercised the option. The mill property was valued at £50,000. The trustees & the son agreed for payment of this sum by half yearly instalments of £2,000. In Mar. 1877, the son executed a mtge.

4351i. No general principles laid down.—Each case dealt with according to circumstances.—A trustee who has committed a breach of trust, but who acted both honestly & reasonably, is not entitled as of right to relief under Trusts Act, 1901, s. 3. The ct. must then consider whether the trustee ought fairly to be excused for the breach looking at all the circumstances.—*NATIONAL TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS & AGENCY CO. OF AUSTRALASIA, LTD. v. of the mill property to secure the £50,000. It being necessary that the son should obtain some further capital, a limited liability co. was incorporated in Mar. 1877. It agreed to buy from the son the property comprised in the mtge. at a slight advance in price, & the equity of redemption was duly assigned to it. The co. having subsequently failed, it was sought to fix the trustees with liability, & to establish against them a case of wilful default. The default alleged was that they did not get from the son the instalments of £2,000 half yearly as they became due, & also in not compelling the payment of the instalments by the co. as the owners of the equity of redemption by means of a foreclosure action or the exercise of their power of sale:—Held: the trustees had done the best they could in the embarrassing position in which testator himself had placed them; no imputation could be made upon their honesty; & they were not liable to make good the loss.—*Re HURST, ADDISON v. No honest belief will justify him in committing that which is a breach of such a rule of law (WARRINGTON, L.J.).—

4354.1. Must act honestly & reasonably.—Honestly alone insufficient.]—Held: trustees were not entitled to be relieved from personal liability for their breaches of trust under Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1921, s. 32 (1), in respect that, while they had acted honestly, they had not acted reasonably, &

4358. Breach not excused in advance.]—The point made is that, inasmuch as the ct. has authority to excuse a trustee from liability for a breach of trust committed, or, in other words, to bind the beneficiaries to accept what was done as if it were no breach of trust at all, therefore the ct. must have power to exercise that authority by anticipation, & to excuse a trustee from liability for a breach of trust contemplated. I am not convinced. The statutory provision, though not a good example of clear & careful legislation, has undoubtedly proved useful; but to extend it as proposed by implication, & to say that the ct. can sanction any dealing with trust property, however discordant from the trusts declared, provided only it be honest, whatever that may mean, & reasonable, would be a subversion of principal.—(KEKEWICH, J.).—Re TOLLEMACHE, [1903] 1 Ch. 457; *sub nom. In a suit by resps. to recover the said two-thirds:—Held: (1) the payment thereof to the children was a breach of trust, & it was no defence that it had been made upon erroneous advice of the solrs.; (2) resps. having accepted & acted upon applts.' statement as to their rights was no evidence of acquiescence; (3) although applts. had acted honestly & reasonably, they had shown no title to be excused. They had made no attempt to replace the fund in whole or in part nor explained the reason for their abstention. B. What Conduct Honest and Reasonable.

See Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 61.

4363. Reasonable—Prudent man in ordinary course of business.—In considering whether trustees who are morally innocent are liable for a breach of trust, it does not follow that, because an act is usually done among persons carrying on a certain business, it is therefore such an act as a prudent man would do in the ordinary course of business, so as to absolve a trustee from liability for a breach of trust ensuing from such act.—BULLOCK v. BULLOCK (1886), 56 L. J. Ch. 221; 55 L. T. 703; 3 T. L. R. 131.

4364. — As ordinary man of business in own affairs.—(1) A summons for administration having been taken out by beneficiaries under a will against the trustees, in answer to an inquiry the master had certified that the trust estate had suffered a loss owing to improper investments for which the trustees were liable. No application was made to vary the certificate, but, upon the case coming on for further consideration, the trustees claimed relief under Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3. The inquiry was directed & the certificate made before the passing of the Act:—Held: under the circumstances the application for relief was not too late, & the ct. would hear evidence as to whether the trustees had “acted honestly & reasonably, & ought to be excused.”

(2) The onus is on a trustee who applies under Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3, to be relieved from the consequences of a breach of trust, to prove that he acted honestly & reasonably; & where the breach of trust consists in investing the trust funds upon sufficient securities, prima facie the requirements of Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 4, & Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 8, constitute a standard by which reasonable conduct is to be judged, although non-compliance with those requirements is not necessarily a fatal obstacle to an application for relief; it is also a matter for consideration whether the trustee would have acted in the same way if he had been lending money of his own.

(3) A trustee (a) acted on a valuation which stated merely the amount for which the property was a good security without stating the value of the property, & (b) advanced more than two-thirds of the value stated in the valuation. In each case the valuer was employed by a solr. who acted for the mtgor. also, & the trustee did not allege that he reasonably believed the valuer to be employed independently of any owner of the property:—Held: he was not entitled to relief.—Re STUART, SMITH v. STUART, [1897] 2 Ch. 583; 66 L. J. Ch. 780; 77 L. T. 128; 46 W. R. 41; 41 Sol. Jo. 714.

4365. — — — — —]—I am not prepared to say that a trustee has acted honestly & reasonably & ought fairly to be excused as a trustee merely on the ground that he has acted in exactly the same way with respect to his own money. The fact that he has acted with equal foolishness in both cases will not justify relief under this statute (FARWELL, J.).—Re DE CLIFFORD'S (LORD) ESTATE, DE CLIFFORD (LORD) v. QUILTER, DE CLIFFORD (LORD) v. LANSLOWNE (MARQUIS), [1900] 2 Ch. 707; 69 L. J. Ch. 828; 83 L. T. 160; 16 T. L. R. 547; 44 Sol. Jo. 689.

Annotation:—Mentd. London Bridge Buildings Co. v. Thomson (1903), 89 L. T. 50.

4366. — — — — —]—The trustee of a will was directed to invest the trust funds “in his own name or under his legal control” in, amongst other modes of investment, freehold, copyhold, leasehold, or chattel real securities. He invested a sum of £2,000, part of the trust funds, on a contributory mtgo. of certain leasehold flats held under underleases at substantial rents. The security was introduced by a surveyor to the trustee's solr., who recommended it to the trustee & suggested the same surveyor as a suitable person to value the property on the trustee's behalf. The trustee appointed the surveyor & it was arranged that he should be paid a fee only in the event of the mtgo. going through. The surveyor made his report, from which it appeared that the property was of a speculative character, but the surveyor nevertheless advised that it formed a good security for the sum proposed to be advanced by the trustee & his co-mtgee. The trustee, relying on the advice of his solr. & on the report, advanced the £2,000. The mtgor. subsequently became insolvent, & the trustee & his co-mtgee. were compelled to sell the property under their power of sale, with the result that the greater part of the £2,000 advanced by the trustee was lost. In an action against the trustee for breach of trust:—Held: the investment was improper & a breach of trust; in making it the trustee, although he had acted honestly, had not acted “reasonably,” & he was therefore not entitled to be relieved or excused from personal liability under Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3.

He has not acted as he or any other ordinary man of business would have acted in his own affairs if he had been seeking, not a speculative investment, but a secure investment for his money (WARRINGTON, J.).—Re DIVE, DIVE v. ROEBUCK, [1909] 1 Ch. 328; 78 L. J. Ch. 248; 100 L. T. 190.

4367. — Without negligence—Failure to inquire.—Clearly it was the duty of a trustee to see that money when received by the solr. went into the proper account of the trustees. . . . The only statement of the trustee as to any step he took to ascertain what had become of the money was . . . that the money was at the bank. That is all. What bank was not specified, nor did, apparently, the trustee inquire. . . . The trustee never looked at his pass book nor made any inquiries at the bank & a whole year passed . . . & no inquiry whatever was made . . . & no step was taken by him to see what had become of this money, where it was, or whether it was safe.

The negligence, the breach of trust, was perfectly inexcusable. Under these circumstances I cannot say, within the words of sect. 3 of Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), that the trustee had acted reasonably or ought fairly to be excused for

The widow entered into partnership with D. in the business for ten years from Jan. 1, 1873. The £1,000 was left in the business during & after the term of ten years. was agreed to, payable by three instalments, on Jan. 2, 1884, Apr. 2, 1884, & Oct. 2, 1884. Only one instalment was received by the trustee J., & it was not invested, but placed on deposit at a bank. No pressure was made for payment of the unpaid instalments. G., having come of age, brought an action against the trustee J. & others seeking relief on the ground of breaches of trust:—Held: as regards J., (1) the not calling in the £1,000 on the widow's retirement from the partnership was not a breach of trust, but, on the true construction of the codicil, the power was not restricted to lending to any particular partners in the business; (2) the not calling in or pressing for payment of the two instalments unpaid was not a breach of trust, the trustee, J., not having been guilty of negligence, but having acted honestly in the belief that pressure would not have resulted in benefit to the estate, & with a reasonable ground for acting as he did; (3) having regard to the fact that the loss of income, if any, through non-investment of the first instalment was very small, coupled with the probability, then existing, of another instalment being shortly received, when both might be invested together, it would be going too far to make an order on the head against the trustee J., who acted on his solr.'s advice in placing the money on deposit at a bank instead of investing it.—*Re EARL, JOHNSON v. 4396. —[—Early in 1818 cestui que trust, with power of directing the variation of the trust securities, requested B., who was one of his trustees, to sell out trust stock then standing in the 5 per cents., & invest it in the 3 per cents. In Apr. of the same year the trustees, B. & H., sold out the stock by power of attorney, & soon afterwards H., at the request of B., joined in a cheque on the bankers who acted in the sale, requesting them to pay the amount to themselves or bearer. In the letter of B. requesting H. to sign the cheque he stated, as a reason for expedition, that the money was to be paid on Thursday to the gentleman to whom it was engaged. B. afterwards applied the money to his own use. On a bill filed in 1838 by the cestui que trust to compel H. to replace the money:—Held: H. was prima facie liable; for neither of the trustees contemplated an investment pursuant to the direction of pltf.; & even if H. had so contemplated, the course taken by him was not required by necessity or convenience. But, inasmuch as it was proved that pltf. knew before 1820 that the stock had been sold out, & that he, in several subsequent successive years, received accounts from B., who was his agent & also his debtor, in which were contained entries for interest on stock appearing clearly to be the fund in question, which entries were irregular in amount & dates; & inasmuch as, notwithstanding these circumstances, no communication on the subject appeared to have been made from pltf. to H., who was his brother-in-law, from Apr. 1818, to Nov. 1837, which was shortly previous to B.'s bkpcy., the ct. directed inquiries to be made with a view to ascertain whether & when first pltf. had notice of the breach of trust.—*BROADHURST v. The fact, however, was, that the investment was a breach of trust, there being a codicil which the exors. had kept back but afterwards proved, constituting them trustees only:—Held: on the bankers becoming bkpt. they had not so participated in the breach of trust as to entitle the cestuis que trust to prove against their separate estates.

The trust seems to me to have been, for all material circumstances, one for the benefit of three persons, of whom two are proved to have concurred in the transaction, & the other must be presumed to have concurred in it (TURNER, L.J.).—*Re BIDDULPH, Ex p. The money was allowed to remain for thirteen years in the hands of the brother, who paid the interest to the husband, & also paid him part of the principal, with the knowledge of the wife. Upon the death of the husband, the wife filed a bill against the three trustees to compel them to replace the balance of the funds. The brother had become insolvent:—Held: the trustees were guilty of a breach of trust; but the wife was debarred by acquiescence, from claiming as against the two trustees, who had neglected to call in the money.—*JONES v. In 1811 D. obtained possession of the bond from testator's exor.; but he did not register it, nor did he, as it was stated & admitted on demurrer, ever take any steps towards realising* the security. In 1821 the elder of the infants attained twenty-one; in 1832 she married; & in 1833, when, as alleged & admitted on demurrer, the bond had become irrecoverable, D., for the first time, informed the elder child & her husband, who were co-*pltf.*s, of the existence of the bond; & upon finding it was then too late to register it, he handed it to the male pltf., directing him to see to it. during life, & died without ever having had a child.

During the life of the son, & till the time of filing the bill, which was twenty-four years after his death, all the members of the family had believed, & had done many acts on the belief, not the result of legal discussion, but a mere family assumption, that the son was not entitled to a share of the residue as one of the next of kin, but that his title to the property expired with his life estate:—Held: this was not such an acquiescence in a family arrangement as prevented the son's personal representatives from enforcing their claim.

4432. Concurrence by person ignorant of interest in fund—Interest subsequently discovered.]—A trustee who distributes a trust fund among strangers at the request of one of the beneficiaries, from whom he takes a covenant of indemnity, cannot afterwards recover under the covenant for the loss of a beneficial interest, to which he has subsequently become entitled, in the fund. The effect of active concurrence by a person in a breach of trust upon a beneficial interest to which he subsequently becomes entitled in the trust fund considered. A. was sole trustee of a fund held in trust for B. for life, then for Mrs. B. for life, then if she died in B.'s lifetime, in trust as she should appoint by will, & in default for her next of kin. A., at the request of B. & wife, raised £5,000 out of the fund, paid £1,000 to each of the four adult daughters of C., & £1,000 to C. in trust for his infant daughter. B. covenanted with A. to indemnify him against "all consequences" of this distribution of the £5,000. Mrs. B. died in B.'s lifetime intestate, & her next of kin were A. & C. On the death of B., A.'s representative sued B.'s representative to compel him to replace the £5,000:—Held: C., having actively concurred in the distribution, could not have made any claim against A. or his estate in respect of it, even if he had not known, as the ct. was satisfied he did know, that he had a possible interest in the trust fund, & that the distribution of it was a breach of trust.

Now, in my opinion, if a person, knowing that a trustee is distributing a settled fund, consents to & is active in the distribution of that fund, he cannot afterwards, if he finds that he is interested under the trusts of the settlement, turn round against the trustee & say, "I am entitled to a share of all which ought to be held by you on the trusts of the settlement; that sum in the division of which I concurred ought to be still held by you; therefore I call upon you to make it good." A ct. of equity ought not to sanction any such claim, even although claimant did not at the time of the distribution know that he was interested, & although he did not at the time know that the division was a breach of trust (COTTON, L.J.).—EVANS v. The wife died, having by her will appointed the stock to her husband, & appointed him her exor. estate in trust for his daughter & her husband successively for life, with remainder to their children, & he gave to the trustee a power of sale. The trustee died in 1806, & the trust descended on his heir A. Immediately afterwards, B., acting without authority as trustee, sold the estate to a purchaser with notice, & allowed the purchase-money to be received by the daughter's husband. The husband died in 1837, & in a suit instituted by one of the children, his estate was declared liable for the purchase-money in his hands. The daughter died in 1845, & in a suit by her representative, the estate of B. was held liable for the trust-money to the extent of the daughter's interest only, & relief was refused to the children, who were defts. 4436. ———.]—By a marriage settlement a fund was settled upon trust for the wife for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, with remainder to the husband for life, with a power of appointment over the corpus to the wife. The trustees were empowered to invest the trust money (inter alia) in debentures, preference shares, or other securities issued or guaranteed by any incorporated public co. paying a dividend or guaranteed income, & with the consent in writing of the wife during her life to alter, vary, & transmute the funds & securities from time to time as occasion might require. The trustees in the wife's lifetime invested the trust moneys in a contractor's railway, guaranteed only by the contractor. This was done without previous consent, but receipts were given for the income by the husband & wife during their joint lives, & subsequently, after the wife's death, by the husband alone, who was then appointee of the corpus:—Held: the trustees were not liable to make good to the husband, after the wife's death, a loss occasioned by the investment.—*STEVENS v. T. was mtgee. of the reversion of a large sum of stock, of which he was one of the trustees, & upon which he had lent £4,000. The £4,000 belonging to H. was lent by the firm to T., upon the security of a transfer of his mtge., & applied to the purposes of the partnership business. With the consent of the tenant for life, the stock was sold upon the death of the reversioner, & the proceeds were applied in payment of the reversioner's debts, & among them the £4,000 & the balance was placed to the credit of T. in the books of the firm. No fresh security was ever given to H. for his £4,000, but for twenty years the firm & T. paid him interest as if on the original security, & representing that it was so. In 1850 J. discovered the fraud, but for four years he continued to receive his interest, when T. became bkpt. & the £4,000 was lost. The Comr. refused to grant T. any certificate, & upon appeal, that decision was affirmed, the ct.

After the rents had become insufficient to pay the interest her daughter, on her marriage, became entitled to one-fourth of the trust fund. The trustee having stated to the husband & wife the deficiency in the widow's income & its cause, they accepted a small sum of money in hand in lieu of their one-fourth, & made no objection for ten years, when the widow died. Becoming then entitled to the remaining three-fourth parts of the fund, they sought by suit to charge the trustee with the deficiency:—Held: they had so far acquiesced in the investment, & could not complain of it.

Casual suggestion—Investment to secure higher interest.—(1) Trustees made personally liable for a loss arising from placing trust moneys with bankers on a deposit account, which was not authorised by the will, & that notwithstanding a trustee indemnity clause against losses by a banker of moneys deposited for safe custody.

(2) If in a casual conversation, the cestui que trust happened to say to the trustee, "I wish you would invest the trust money so as to get a higher rate of interest," that would not be sufficient to justify the trustees in committing a breach of trust (ROMILLY, M.R.).—REHDEEN v. WESLEY (1861), 29 Beav. 213; 54 E. R. 609.

4447. Length of time—Evidence of acquiescence.]

—(1) Length of time, where it does not operate as a statutory or positive bar, operates simply as evidence of assent or acquiescence.

(2) A cestui que trust, whose interest is reversionary, is not bound to assert his title until it comes into possession, but the mere circumstance that he is not bound to assert his title does not bear upon the question of his assent to a breach of trust. A cestui que trust is not less capable of giving such assent when his interest is in reversion than when it is in possession.

Qu.: If a cestui que trust knows of a breach of trust, he is bound, although his interest may be reversionary, to take proceedings to have the matter set right, & will be held barred by acquiescence if he does not promptly do so.

(3) Acquiescence imports full knowledge, & a cestui que trust cannot be bound by acquiescence unless he has been fully informed of his rights, & of all the material facts & circumstances of the case.—LIFE ASSOCN. 4450. Combined character of trustee & beneficiary.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1821, stock belonging to the wife was assigned to B. & another, upon trust for the separate use of the wife for life, with remainder for the husband for life, with remainder in default of children of the marriage, for B. The trustees neglected to have the stock transferred to them, & it remained in the name of the wife, & in 1822 the husband sold it, & possessed himself of the proceeds. B. died in 1820, the husband in 1858, & the wife in 1864. There were no children. In 1866 B.'s exors. claimed the trust fund from the husband's estate:—Held: their claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, or by acquiescence, or by the fact that B. was one of the trustees whose negligence rendered the misapplication of the trust fund possible.

The combined character of trustee & cestui que trust does not, in my opinion, constitute such a case of acquiescence as to bar the representatives of B. from enforcing this claim (ROMILLY, M.R.).—BUTLER v. CARTER (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 276; 37 L. J. Ch. 270; 18 L. T. 11; 16 W. R. 388.

4451. Necessity for clear proof—Burden on trustees.]—Where trustees have committed a breach of trust in order to discharge themselves, they must clearly show that their cestui que trust, on becoming beneficially entitled, adopted the transaction.—COPE v. CLARK (1870), 18 W. R. 279.

4452. — — —]—At the time when the conveyance was completed, the trustee, who was a solr., took counsel's opinion as to the person to whom the purchase-money was payable, & who ought to join in the conveyance. and the opinion was given in favour of the devisee. The trustee accordingly paid the money to her, & informed pltf. of the result, but no settlement of accounts was come to between pltf. & the trustee up to the time of the institution of the action, & pltf. had not executed any release or discharge to the trustee.

This action was brought to recover the moneys out of the trustee's estate, after his death, & nearly five years after the payment had been made:—Held: no case of acquiescence was made out against pltf., & he was entitled to recover from the trustee's estate the moneys received from the railway co., the amount to be recouped to the trustee's representative by his co-defct., the devisee.—Re JACKSON, WILSON v. DONALD (1881), 44 L. T. 467.

4453. Presumption of acquiescence—Receipt of wife's property by husband.]—The trustee of a sum of stock for the separate use of a married woman having improperly transferred it into the joint names of her husband & himself, the husband for six years received the dividends. after which the trustee died, & the husband, without his wife's knowledge, sold out the stock, & applied the proceeds to his own use. Some time afterwards he left her:—Held: though the wife might have been presumed to have assented to the husband's actual receipt of the dividends while the stock remained intact, yet no such assent could be presumed after it had been sold, & she was entitled to recover, as against her husband & the estate of deceased trustee, the arrears of dividends which had accrued since that time as well as to have the trust fund replaced.

The whole foundation of the doctrine depends upon her consent, either express, which is actual consent, or implied, which is sometimes called acquiescence, very properly so, if she knew of the fact of his receiving the income & if she allowed him to retain it (JESSEL, M.R.).—DIXON v. DIXON (1878), 8 Ch. D. 587; 27 W. R. 282.

4455. Person claiming under cestui que trust—Appointees.—A. was tenant for life of a trust fund, with a general power to appoint by will, & in default, it was settled on pltf. A. ordered the trustees to pay over the fund to her on an indemnity, & she afterwards appointed the fund to pltf., & others, who filed a bill to make the trustees liable for a breach of trust.—Held: by the appointment, the fund became assets for answering A.'s liabilities, of which the indemnity was one, & the trustees were not liable.—*WILLIAMS v. The son died under the age of forty without having assigned his share, leaving a will of which B. was exor. After the death of S., L. & N. were appointed trustees of the original settlement. N. afterwards, with the consent of the son's exor., obtained possession of the son's share. Subsequently N. misappropriated the fund. The persons beneficially interested under the son's will recovered judgment against B. for wilful default in allowing the property to remain in N.'s hands; & B. being dead, his exor. brought an action against L. to make him liable for the loss of the fund.—Held: inasmuch as the son of S. had the absolute interest in the fund, & B., his exor., had consented to its being paid to N., neither B. nor his personal representative could recover against L., the trustee of the settlement, on the ground of wilful default.—*SCOTNEY v. 4471. ———. Obtaining part of trust property—Intention of obtaining rest not abandoned.]—A cestui que trust who with knowledge that his trustee has committed a breach of trust obtains from him a part only of that to which he is entitled, does not thereby waive his right to such further relief as he may be able to obtain unless an intention so to do can be clearly inferred from the surrounding circumstances. In Nov. 1860, an order was made in a suit for administering the trusts of the will of J., to which H., a former trustee, was deft., directing her to pay into ct. a sum of money in respect of breaches of trust committed in 1843 & 1845, the amount of which had been ascertained by the Chief Clerk in the suit. H. went abroad, & substituted service of the order was made upon her. By the order on further consideration in 1863, H. appearing by counsel, certain sums of money to which she was entitled, & her life interest under testator's will were ordered to be impounded & paid over to "the account of H. funds applicable for the repayment of trust funds misappropriated," & an inquiry was directed as to what steps should be taken to obtain restitution of the funds. Certain other orders were made in the suit, but no personal order was made on H. for payment of the amount of her defalcation, nor any steps taken against her, although she returned to England in 1870, where she remained till her death in 1880, & her residence was known to the then trustees of the will & some of the cestuis que trust. On her death the surviving trustee of the will of J. brought this action against her exors., claiming the administration of her real & personal estate on behalf of himself & all other the creditors, alleging himself a creditor in respect of the unpaid balance of the sum representing the breach of trust. At the date of the institution of the action several beneficiaries under J.'s will were infants:—Held: (1) the action was not an attempt to enforce a stale demand, & the cestuis que trust must not be taken to have elected to abandon their claim against her & to rest content with impounding her life interest; (2) there being a debt due from H. at her death to the estate of J. & the trusts of his will not being completed, the surviving trustee was the proper person to bring the action, & the cestuis que trust need not be parties; (3) although as between the cestui que trust & a stranger the claim of the cestui que trust is barred by lapse of time operating against his trustee, lapse of time is no bar as between cestui que trust & trustee.—*Re CROSS, HARSTON v. By a codicil testator said, "What I mean in my will by securing money in the public funds, is to purchase a capital stock" in the Consols by my exors. In the above case A. died in 1843, & his children, on receiving £2,000, executed a release, which, after reciting that, according to the trust, £2,000 had been set apart to answer the annuity, they released the representative of testator from all claims & demands. In 1854 the children instituted a suit to recover the amount of Consols which would be required to produce £100:—Held: having regard to the situation in life of pltf., the inaccuracy of the recitals, & the absence of professional assistance, they were not barred by lapse of time.—ASPLAND v. But where a cestui que trust, shortly after attaining twenty-one, pressed for payment of a sum of money to which he was entitled, & four years afterwards accepted from one of his trustees a packet of deeds, which the co-trustee, the father of the cestui que trust, had deposited by way of security on the occasion of a misappropriation by him of the trust fund before the cestui que trust came of age, & at the request of his father signed & sent a release in writing, not under seal, to such trustee, & took no further steps till after his father's death, six years later, & ten years after he came of age, when, the security turning out insufficient, he filed a bill to have the deficiency made good by the surviving trustee:—Held: all the requisites for constituting a valid release had been complied with, & the cestui que trust must be taken to have had full knowledge of the value of the security, notwithstanding he had never opened the packet of deeds. *FARRANT v. 4476. ———.—A fund was given to one for life, with a direction that upon her death the dividends should be accumulated for her children, of whom pltf. was one, during their minorities. Upon the tenant for life's death the father assumed to act as a trustee & by sufferance of his co-trustee, deft., received & applied the dividends for the support of his children, he being otherwise incapable of maintaining them. The dividends were therefore not accumulated. He died leaving his children his universal legatees. Fourteen days after pltf. came of age she gave to deft. an acknowledgment upon his transferring her share of the fund to her, from which it appeared that the share was the capital only, & in which it was clearly stated how the dividends had been applied. Deft. was also sole exor. of the father & on winding-up his estate six months later, pltf. & her sisters joined in formally releasing all claims upon or in respect of that estate. Later she filed this bill to make the trustee account for the accumulations:—Held: under these circumstances, as the acknowledgment showed that pltf. was well acquainted with the actual facts & as the trustee would be entitled to be recouped any sum for which he might be held accountable out of the estate of the father, of whom pltf. was one of the universal legatees, the bill must be dismissed for the release in effect operated as a discharge of the claim.—AVELINE v. M. died, & A. died shortly afterwards, having, as was then believed, received the £700 & applied it to his own use. Shortly afterwards D., in consideration of £500, released A.'s personal representative & B. & C. from the annuity of £100 & the securities for it. Some years afterwards it was discovered that A. had placed the £700 in a bank, in the names of B. & C. where it still remained:—Held: the release, having been executed under a mistake, was inoperative, & the £700 remained impressed with the trusts for securing the annuity of £100.—*LORE v. Testator bequeathed one-half of his residuary personal estate to his sister, & one quarter thereof to each of his two nieces: he appointed his sister trustee & extrix. of his will, & died in the year 1855. The residuary personal estate consisted principally of railway shares & stocks, & at the time of passing the residuary account it was valued at £42,000. The nieces lived with their aunt, who had brought them up from childhood. In 1850 the nieces executed a release of all suits & causes of action, in favour of their aunt in consideration of the payment of £10,500 to each. At the time of the execution of the release, the railway shares & stocks had increased in value, & the share of each of the nieces was worth much more than £10,500. The son, who was twenty-three years of age, executed to the trustees a release of all claims in respect thereof; & eighteen years afterwards, he, in conjunction with a younger brother & sister, filed a bill against the trustees, to set aside the transaction. BECKIT v. WRAGG (1859), 7 Gr. 220.—CAN.

b. — Direct trust.—In all cases possession of them, whereby same were ultimately lost:—Held: the estate of the trustee was bound to make good the loss, although the parties entitled in remainder did not file their bill for many years after the property had been lost, & not until the death of the tenant for life.—SMITH v. PUGH (1842), 6 Jur. 701.

4492. ———,]—A., a trustee, misapplied a trust fund of which he was tenant for life, & he died in 1834. C., who then became entitled to it, died in 1858, having taken no proceeding to recover it. A bill, filed in 1863 by the representatives of C. against the representatives of the representative of A., to recover the fund, was dismissed with costs, on the ground of the lapse of time.—HODGSON V. 4495. ————]—(1) A cestui que trust discovering a breach of trust, but not receiving any benefit from it, or conniving in it for any purpose, & not recognising the transaction, is not precluded from complaining of it merely on the ground that he abstained from making such complaint until long after he first knew of it.

Where stock stood invested in trust for the mother for life, with remainder to her son & daughter & their children, the daughter knew of an application by the son for a loan from the trustees of part of the trust moneys upon his personal security, & that the trustees were willing to make the loan with the consent of her mother, the tenant for life, & that the loan was in fact afterwards made. The daughter objected to the loan in her communications with her mother, but did not otherwise oppose it, & had not any communication with the trustees on the subject:—Held: (1) this was not such acquiescence on the part of the daughter to the loan as to preclude her from charging the trustees with the breach of trust in a suit instituted seven years after the transaction took place; (2) the daughter was not precluded from so charging the trustees by the fact that she knew that the mother had (untruly) stated to her son that she, the daughter, had consented to the loan, such statement of the daughter's consent never having been communicated to the trustees or constituted any part of the sanction or authority under which they acted.—*PHILLIPSON v. The answer of the personal representative of deceased tenant for life asserted the trust to have been duly & regularly performed by such tenant for life, & as evidence thereof set forth references to the accounts rendered of the settlor's personal estate by his representative, deceased tenant for life, to the Stamp Office. Pltfs. did not amend their bill to meet the prima facie case thus set up by deft. : —Held : the alleged breach of trust having taken place, if at all, at least thirty years back, pltfs. were not, under the circumstances, entitled to an account of the settlor's personal estate.—MORRIS v. In a suit instituted by the beneficiaries it was declared that T., C. & her husband, & the estate of H. were jointly liable to make this loss good, & numerous orders were made directing C. & her husband & T. to pay certain sums into ct., & eventually plffs., who were the trustees of a settlement which comprised certain portions of H.'s estate, paid the whole sum into ct. Plffs. then sued T. for his one-third contribution, & obtained judgment, but by reason of his insolvency, recovered nothing. They then sued Mr. & Mrs. C. for half contribution. There was an arrangement between the trustees that Mr. & Mrs. C., who were resident abroad, should not be troubled about the trusts, & as a fact, they did nothing therein:—Held: this was no bar to contribution.—BACON v. CAMPHAUSEN (1888), 58 L. T. 851.

4519. —[.]—By an order made on further consideration, funds were carried over to "the account of the perpetual annuity of deft. & her issue," with a direction to pay the dividends thereon to deft. for life. Deft. charged her interest in this fund, & the incumbancers obtained stop orders thereon. Subsequently it was discovered that at the time the order was made deft. was jointly & severally liable with testator for breaches of trust which had been wholly made good out of testator's estate. The order was made in the presence of plff., who was not at the time aware of deft.'s liability in respect of the breach of trust. On a motion by plff. to obtain contribution from deft. to the extent of a moiety of this liability, & to have this claim satisfied out of the funds carried over to deft.'s separate account, notwithstanding the stop orders:—Held: though deft. was liable to contribute towards making good the loss occasioned by her breach of trust, & could take nothing beneficially from testator's estate until she had done so, still, as between plff. & the incumbancers, the matter was res judicata, & the incumbancers were entitled to priority over the claim now made for contribution for breach of trust.—Re EYTON, BARTLETT v. CHARLES (1890), 45 Ch. D. 458; 59 L. J. Ch. 733; 63 L. T. 336; 39 W. R. 135.

Trustee deriving benefit from breach—Liability to indemnify co-trustees—Bond taken as indemnity—Right to sue on bond.—A. being trustee with B. of a legacy of £10,000 applied to B. to be allowed to employ it in his private business; B. gave his consent, on receiving from A. a bond of indemnity with the following condition, that if A., his heirs, exors., etc., should, at all times, save, defend, & keep harmless & indemnified B., his heirs, etc., from all manner of actions, suits, causes of action & suit, proceedings, claims, demands, loss, costs, charges, damages & expenses whatsoever, which should or might be brought, commenced, prosecuted, or made against them, or which they should bear, pay, suffer, sustain, expend, or be put unto by reason of the legacy, or the interest thereof, or on account of A.'s being permitted to hold the same, the obligation was to be void. The legacy not having been accounted for or paid by A. to the cestuis que trust, the latter filed a bill against the exors. of A. & B., & obtained a decree, which declared that A. & B. had become jointly & severally liable to make good the legacy, & ordered them to do so. A charge had been carried in against the estate of B., but no sum had been paid with the exception of £10 for costs of suit:—Held: the bond was not illegal, the representative of B. was entitled to recover from the representative of A. £10,000 with interest & costs of suit.—*WARWICK v. 4523. ——— Trustee-beneficiary.—(1) The rule as to the right of a trustee to contribution from his co-trustee for loss occasioned to the trust estate by a breach of trust for which both are equally to blame does not apply where one of the trustees is also a cestui que trust & has received, as between himself & his co-trustee, an exclusive benefit by the breach of trust: in that case the rule to be applied is that under which the share or interest of a cestui que trust who has assented to & profited by a breach of trust has to bear the whole loss; & the trustee who is a cestui que trust must therefore indemnify his co-trustee to the extent of his share or interest in the trust estate, & not merely to the extent of the benefit he has received.

Pltf. & deft., the trustees of a will, invested certain trust funds, part of the trust estate, in securities of a description authorised by the will. Pltf. while a trustee, became also entitled as a beneficiary to a share of the trust estate. The investments, some of which were made before & others after pltf. became a beneficiary, turned out insufficient, & pltf. & deft. were declared jointly & severally liable to make good the loss to the trust estate. The whole of the loss was made good out of pltf.'s share of the trust estate, which share exceeded the amount of the loss:—Held: pltf. had no right of contribution from deft. in respect of any part of the loss.

(2) Suppose a cestui que trust in remainder to induce his trustees to commit a breach of trust for the benefit of the tenant for life—perhaps his own father or mother—can such a remainderman compel the trustees to make good the loss or resist their claim to have it made good out of his interest when it falls in, if some other cestui que trust compels them to make the loss good? I apprehend not; & yet, in the case supposed, the cestui que trust in remainder might not himself have derived any benefit at all from the breach of trust (LINDLEY, L.J.).—*CHILLINGWORTH v. 4525. ———.—P., by his will, gave a legacy to Mrs. W., female deft., which legacy was on her marriage settled in the usual way, being then still unpaid, testator's estate being very deficient. Afterwards Mrs. P., the widow of testator, by her will directed her trustees to pay & make good, out of her assets, all the legacies given by her late husband, "upon condition that all parties concerned should abstain from requiring any claim against her late husband's estate, etc., & should also execute any releases which her husband's exors. might require in respect thereof." Mrs. P.'s estate being ample, female deft.'s legacy was ready to be paid, but the exors. required the discharge of three trustees of Mrs. W.'s settlement. There was at that time but one trustee. Mr. W. procured deft. A. & another person to be trustees; & the legacy having been paid to the solr. of all three trustees, he paid it over to deft. A., who immediately misapplied it, by suffering W. to convert it to his own use. On the present bill filed by the other two trustees against A. & Mr. & Mrs. W. to have the fund brought back:—Held: they had a right to have the whole fund replaced by A., & not for contribution only.—*GRAY v. Where there are two trustees & the management of the trust is left in the hands of one, & the acting trustee commits a breach of trust, the passive trustee is not entitled to an indemnity from the acting trustee, unless there are some special circumstances, as where the acting trustee is the solr. for the trust, or has derived a personal benefit from the breach of trust.—*BAIRD v. A. being a member of the firm of solrs. acting in the management of the trust. A. received the proceeds of sale of part of the trust funds as solr. & misapplied them, & the moneys were lost. After the death of A. an action was commenced against deft. as the surviving trustee claiming a declaration that he was liable to pay pltf. the sum so misapplied.

Deft. obtained an order under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 48, for leave to serve a third party notice on the surviving partners of the firm of solrs. claiming to be indemnified against liability in the action. On motion to discharge the order:—Held: this was not a claim to indemnify deft. against pltf.'s claim in the action within R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 48, the right of deft. to recover from the surviving partners a sum equal to the lost trust fund being an independent right & not one depending on the liability of deft. in the action.—WYNNE v. T., & insisting, as against L., that she was in fact the author of all the breaches of trust complained of in that suit, & had, as extrix, of testator, retained & misapplied to her own use certain parts of testator's residuary estate, which ought to have come to the trust funds, & ought therefore to come in aid for the reimbursement of the trust estate, & that his co-trustees had imposed on him; & praying (inter alia) that he might be reimbursed, as far as might be, out of the interest coming to the tenant for life, from the consequences of the breach of trust of which he had been guilty through her co-operation; & generally, that he might be indemnified by defts.:—Held: the second suit arose out of the exigency of the first suit, & embraced objects not touched by the decree in the first suit, but consistent therewith, & was not in the nature of a bill of review, & ought not to be taken off the file by reason of the leave of the ct. not having been previously obtained for the purpose of filing the bill.—*TAYLOR v. 4557. ————The trustee of a will, whereby a trust fund was settled upon trust for a married woman for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, at the verbal request of the married woman & her husband, & in ignorance of the legal effect of the restraint upon anticipation, advanced to her a sum of money out of the trust fund for the purpose of satisfying certain creditors of the married woman & her husband, who were threatening legal proceedings against them. By an arrangement made at the time of the advance the income accruing due to the married woman from time to time in respect of her life interest was applied by the trustee in replacing the amount advanced & interest thereon. The married woman commenced an action against the trustees for an account, & in taking the account the trustee claimed to be allowed as against income due to pltf. the sum advanced by him out of the trust fund:—Held: (1) the ct. had power under Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 6, to protect a trustee from loss when without moral blame or dishonesty he had committed a breach of trust for the benefit of the beneficiaries, who stood on an equality with him as regards knowledge of the circumstances, notwithstanding that the trustee knew, or must be taken to have known, that he was committing a breach of trust; (2) the words "in writing" in Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 6, must be read with the word "consent" & not with the previous words "instigation" & "request": & accordingly it was sufficient to enable the ct. to exercise the discretionary power conferred by the sect. that there should be a verbal request by the beneficiary; (3) therefore, the ct. must under the circumstances exercise its discretion in favour of the trustee, & he was entitled to set off against the amount found due from him to the married woman the sum advanced to her & her husband out of the trust fund.—GRIFFITH v. HUGHES, [1892] 3 Ch. 105; 62 L. J. Ch. 135; 66 L. T. 760; 40 W. R. 524; 36 Sol. Jo. 504.

4561. ——— —.]—(1) The equity of a trustee who commits a breach of trust at the request & for the benefit of a beneficiary is not merely statutory since the passing of Trustee Acts, 1888 (c. 59), & 1893 (c. 53), but is the same now as it was before those Acts, which in fact enlarge the judicial discretion of the ct. in such cases.

Consequently, the equities affecting an assignee of the interest of a beneficiary are the same now as they were before those Acts.

(2) A trustee, who, at the time a breach of trust is committed, merely declines an offer to take a mtg. of the beneficiary's interest, by way of security for the breach of trust, does not per se waive or abandon his equity.

(3) It is the duty of a trustee to protect a married woman, restrained from anticipation, against herself when she asks him to commit a breach of trust, & if he knowingly commits a breach of trust at her request the ct. will be slow to remove the restraint on anticipation in order that her life interest may be impounded to recoup him.

A married woman, restrained from anticipation, gave her written consent to a change of investment, but at the time was not informed by the trustees & did not know that such change was a breach of trust. The money was advanced to her husband, who to her knowledge was in difficulties, & she shared in the benefit arising from the breach of trust, which was instigated by her husband. The ct., in the exercise of its judicial discretion under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 45, refused to remove the restraint on anticipation in order that her life interest might be impounded to recoup the trustees.—BOLTON v. CURRE, [1895] 1 Ch. 524; 64 L. J. Ch. 164; 71 L. T. 752; 43 W. R. 511; 13 R. 174.

4562. ——— —.]—(1) In an action by beneficiaries of a settlement against the tenant for life & the exors. of deceased trustees of the settlement, the plffs. by their statement of claim alleged that deceased trustees had in breach of trust advanced the trust funds for the tenant for life & her husband. The exors. by their defences admitted the breach of trust, but alleged that it was committed at the instigation & request & consent in writing of the tenant for life, & claimed that her life interest ought to be impounded under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 45, by way of indemnity to the estates of deceased trustee. No notice was given by the exors. to the tenant for life under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 55, that they claimed contribution or indemnity against her. At the trial of the action leave was given to the exors., without going into evidence, to apply in chambers with reference to enforcing their rights, if any, to indemnity against the tenant for life.

(2) Under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 45, the ct. could make an order impounding the life interest of a married woman restrained from anticipation, by way of indemnity.—Re HOLT, Re ROLLASON, HOLT v. HOLT, [1897] 2 Ch. 525; 66 L. J. Ch. 734; 76 L. T. 776; 45 W. R. 650; 41 Sol. Jo. 642.

4577. Loss after trusts ended.—Payment to executor of deceased beneficiary.—Fund misapplied by executor.—The trustees of a marriage settlement sold part of the trust property, which was then mortgaged to them to secure the purchase-money. Upon the death of the husband & wife, one of their children became absolutely entitled to the property. That child died & appointed exors. The mtge. money was afterwards paid off, & thereupon the reconveyance was executed by the surviving trustee of the settlement, but the mtge. money was paid to one of the exors. of deceased child, who also acted as the solr. for the surviving trustee. This exor. misapplied the money, & it was lost:—Held: the surviving trustee was not liable for the loss, since the trusts were at an end; & the exor. of the child who was absolutely entitled was the proper person to receive the money.—*WAUGH v. The bkpts. having at the same time to pay a larger sum of money for other customers to the same co., did not receive the amount of the debentures in cash from the co., but gave their own cheque to the co. for the amount due on balance, & credited the trust account with £1,600, the full amount of the debentures paid off. Subsequently the bkpts. suspended payment, having at that time a balance exceeding £1,600 standing to the credit of their account with their own bankers, into which account they paid their daily receipts in their business:—Held: the doctrine of following trust money did not apply, as the money secured by the debentures had not been paid by the co. to the bkpts. nor by the latter to their bankers & was incapable of identification, & the balance to the credit of the bkpts. with their bankers was therefore part of their estate & was subject to administration under Bkpy. The broker sold the Consols for cash, & received in payment a cheque which he paid to the credit of his current account with his bankers, & he bought the railway stock for the next settling day. On the settling day, the railway stock not having been paid for, the broker was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, & soon afterwards he filed a liquidation petition. The principal claimed to have the balance which, at the time of the failure, was standing to the broker's credit at his banker's, appropriated to make good the proceeds of sale of the Consols:—Held: as the broker had notice of the trust, the proceeds of sale retained the character of trust money in his hands, & could be followed by the principal if they could be traced.—*Re STRACHAN, Ex p. After the death of the husband, the wife, who was entitled to a life interest in the settled property, with remainder to her children, took out administration to her husband, & filed a bill in her own name & in the names of her children by herself as their next friend, against the trustee, who had in the meantime taken the benefit of Insolvent Debtors Act, praying that the sum due upon the bond, which the widow, as administratrix, offered to deliver up, might be replaced, with interest, upon the trusts of the settlement:—Held: the widow & children had a clear equity to follow the money in the hands of the trustee, & they would have had the same equity if, instead of being a trustee, he had been a stranger.—*BUCKERIDGE v. The bank, having discovered L.'s improper abstraction of their money, required security for it, & L. assigned to them the securities on the ship. The ship was sold for a sum much less than the amount originally advanced by H. —Held: the bank could not claim a lien on the proceeds of the sale of the ship on the ground of following trust moneys of theirs improperly disposed of by L., for they had, by taking the security from him, treated the transaction as a loan from him to him; & moreover, as he was their agent, they were affected by his acts in making the advances.—*COLLINSON v. 4604. When legal estate has priority—Banker accepting security from trustee—No notice of trust.]—T. being under a will trustee of £800 for two persons, in moieties, leaves that sum outstanding on the promissory note of J. The note is payable to T. only, & not to T. or order. In 1839 T., becoming embarrassed, indorses the note to his banker M., who is also the banker of J., as a security for advances; M. having no notice of the trust. In 1840 T. becomes beneficially entitled to one moiety of the £800. In 1841 J. becomes a creditor of T. for goods sold, & claims set-off against the note. On Apr. 7, 1842, J. has notice, through his agent, of the indorsement of the note to M. In July 1842, T. becomes bkpt.:—Held: as to the moiety of the £800, which is held by T. in trust, the trust must prevail against the banker's security.—MOORE v. JERVIS (1845), 2 Coll. 60; 63 E. 4605. —Best right to call for legal estate—Trustee ordered to transfer fund into court—No notice of trusts affecting fund.]—In a suit which was instituted by T. against A., his trustee, for the purpose of securing a trust fund, an order was made directing A. to pay the trust fund into court. A. had, prior to the institution of such suit, appropriated the trust fund to his own use, & in order to enable himself to obey the order of the ct., he transferred into ct. another fund, of which he was trustee for B. B. then filed a bill against A. for securing his trust fund, & he presented a petition, intitled in both suits, praying that the fund which had been paid into ct. by A. to the credit of the first-mentioned cause might be ordered to be transferred to the credit of the second suit:—Held: by the transfer the legal estate in the fund became vested in the Accountant-General in trust for T., & as T., when the transfer was made into ct. by A., had no notice that the fund which had been so transferred by A. was subject to any trust for B.'s benefit, T. must be considered as a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice of the fraud, & such transfer by A. could not be disturbed.—THORNDIKE v. He represented that the money had been lent on mtge., & they pressed for its reinvestment. He afterwards induced his co-trustee of a second fund to join him in transferring it into his name, & take as security the transfer of a mtge., which in the result proved to be a forgery. He then made a small addition to the fund out of his own moneys, & gave notice to the cestuis que trust of the first fund that it had been replaced, & they immediately put a distingas upon the stock. He afterwards died insolvent, leaving the stock standing in his name. Upon a bill by the surviving trustee of the second fund, against the cestuis que trust of the first fund, asking that the stock might be restored to him:—Held: the notice of reinvestment to the cestuis que trust of the first fund amounted to a valid transfer, which made them as against pltf. purchasers for value without notice of the fraud; & pltf.'s bill must be dismissed, with costs.—CASE v. 4623. Stock impressed with trust.—Testator, having moneys in his hands belonging to other parties, invested a portion, by their direction, together with his own moneys, in Consols, & informed the parties of such investment, & duly accounted to them for the dividends. He afterwards sold out nearly the whole of the stock, & then replaced a portion of it, & on his death, having directed his confidential clerk to buy stock to replace the rest, he expressed his wish, that the stock to be purchased by the clerk should be appropriated to replace the trust stock. The clerk purchased a sum of stock in testator's name; but the whole stock standing in testator's name at his death was not sufficient to replace the trust moneys.—Held: under the circumstances, the stock standing in testator's name at his death was impressed with a trust, & did not form part of his general assets.—ROBERTSON v. MORRICE (1845), 4 L. T. O. S. 430; 9 Jur. 122.

4624. Trust fund entitled in priority.—Where a trustee mixes his own money with the trust fund, & takes security for the whole fund, if the security fail, the trust fund is entitled to priority of payment. But if the cestuis que trust have elected to adopt the loan, they cannot compel the trustee to make good the deficiency.—LAMBE v. ORTON (1863), 2 New Rep. 435; 33 L. J. Ch. 81; 11 W. R. 1043.

4631. — Beneficiary allowed to hold trust fund for investment—Proceeds of sale of investment impounded by trustee—Proceedings by beneficiary to get money out of court.]—A trustee allowed one of his cestuis que trust to have the trust fund, with a view to its investment in the foreign funds. The cestui que trust went to America, & invested it in his own name; he afterwards sold out a part, & remitting the money to agents in London, came home. The trustee impounded the money so remitted, in the Lord Mayor's Ct., & this ct. granted an injunction, restraining proceedings on the part of the cestui que trust to get it out.—HIPKINS v. NEWTON (1831), 9 L. J. O. S. Ch. 227.

4632. — Breach of trust for religious purposes.]—Upon a bill filed by two persons, pewholders in a chapel, & members of the congregation, & in virtue of certain offices which they held, entitled to be trustees of the chapel, on behalf of themselves, & all other persons interested as such pewholders & members except defts., against the other persons entitled to be such trustees, & against the person in whom the legal interest in the lease was vested, alleging that the lease of the chapel was held upon an exclusive trust for religious service according to the doctrines & discipline of the Church of Scotland, charging defts. with introducing preachers into the pulpit who were not ministers of the Church of Scotland, & with other acts in violation of the trusts, & praying that defts. might be compelled to perform the trust, the ct. granted the relief prayed; holding, that, upon the evidence in the cause, the alleged trust was sufficiently made out; secondly, that the acts complained of amounted to a breach of trust.—*MILLIGAN v. 4634. — Breach by mortgagee in trust—Mortgagees restrained from receiving money under decree of foreclosure.]—Mtgee. in trust had been guilty of breaches of trust in respect of which a suit by his cestuis que trust, infants, was pending against him. He was restrained, on the petition of the cestuis que trust, from receiving the mtge. money under a decree which had been made in a prior foreclosure suit, & the solr. of the cestuis que trust, plffs. in the subsequent suit, was appointed in his stead to receive the same, without giving the usual security.—SNARE v. BAKER, BEASLEY v. SNARE (1849), 13 Jur. 203.

4635. — Appropriation by director to recoup advances.]—The ct. will interfere by injunction to secure the property of an assocn. from being appropriated by the trustee, who is also sole director, for the purpose of recouping himself the sums he has advanced, although questions are raised as to the legality of the assocn., & although relief might be refused at the hearing.—*SHEPPARD v. 4636. — Division of estate contrary to will.]—Testator gave his residuary estate, after payment of debts, to trustees upon trust to divide it equally among his nine children; but if it should exceed £40,000 in value, his two sons were each to take one-twentieth more than each of his daughters, & he directed that the debt due to the trustees of a married daughter under his covenant contained in her marriage settlement should be taken as part of her share. The debt due under the covenant was £3,500 & the net residue of the estate, before this debt had been satisfied, was £43,000:—Held: the £3,500 ought to be considered as forming part of testator's residuary estate, which must, therefore, be taken to exceed £40,000.

An injunction was granted to restrain the trustees from dividing the estate except upon that footing.—Fox v. Fox (1870), L. R. 11 Eq. 142; 23 L. T. 584; 19 W. R. 151.

4637. — Against innocent purchaser.]—Trustees having power to sell under such special or other conditions or stipulations as they should think fit, sold by auction with a condition limiting the title to commence in 1858, fourteen years previously. The next convenient root of title was a deed of 1819, from which a good title could be deduced, but the trustees could not find this deed, & had only recitals of its contents. There was also a condition, that all recitals & statements in the deeds & particulars should be accepted as conclusive evidence:—Held: (1) the sale under such conditions was a breach of trust, & injunction granted at the suit of a cestui que trust to restrain completion; (2) such an injunction would be granted against an innocent purchaser.

(3) The fact that the interest of the individual pltf. is small is no sufficient reason for refusing to grant relief.—DANCE v. GOLDINGHAM (1873), 8 Ch. App. 902; 42 L. J. Ch. 777; 29 L. T. 166; 38 J. P. 164; 21 W. R. 761, L. JJ.

B. Securing Trust Property.

4640. Order to bring property into court.]—By an ante-nuptial settlement the trustees were empowered, with consent of the parties, to sell out the trust fund, & invest the proceeds upon real securities. By a memorandum executed contemporaneously with & indorsed on the settlement, the parties requested the trustees to advance the trust moneys to the owners of Vauxhall Gardens upon mtge. as first, second, or third mtgees.:—Held: "the owners" meant owners at the date of the settlement & memorandum, & an advance to the three owners originally without security, & the subsequent acceptance of a mtge. with a joint & several covenant from two of the three owners, one having then retired, was a breach of trust, & the trustees were ordered to bring the fund into ct.—FOWLER v. REYNAL (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 500; 21 L. J. Ch. 121; 18 L. T. O. S. 113; 15 Jur. 1019; 42 E. R. 353, L. C.

WIGLESWORTH* (1852), 16 Beav. 269; 51 E. R. 782.

4642. — Order against third party.]—Testatrix bequeathed a leasehold estate to trustees & exors., in trust for sale, & gave one of such exors. a beneficial interest for his life in one-fourth part of the estate. The latter exor., being at the time indebted to the estate of testatrix, made an assignment of his beneficial interest by way of mtge., to secure a private debt which he owed to a creditor, & deposited the title deeds with the creditor. On a bill by his co-exors. to recover the title deeds:—Held: the estate of testatrix was entitled to a lien on the interest of the defaulting exor. in the premises comprised in the deeds, in priority to the lien created by his assignment to the mtgee.; & the ct. decreed the title deeds to be delivered up, with a declaration that they belonged to the three trustees.—*COLE v. to him, to secure £4,000 & interest, & by the same deed he covenanted to pay the same. In 1836 the debt of £5,280 was paid off without notice of the mtgee. In 1847 the debt of £4,000 was assigned in consideration of marriage. In 1835 testator settled his estates in consideration of marriage, charging them with two sums of £3,000 & £4,000, which sums, in certain events, were to revert to his personal estate. In pursuance of an order of the ct. in an administration suit, the two sums of £3,000 & £4,000 were, in 1854, raised & paid to the trustees thereof, & were now represented by two sums of stock standing in the bank in their names respectively.

In 1857 B., a solr., having received from petitioner, a married lady, a sum of £4,700 for investment, three days afterwards purchased the above debt of £4,000 from the trustees of the settlement of 1847. The debt was assigned by deed to B., the purchase-money being, as was alleged, the money of petitioner. B. continued to pay interest to petitioner as on £5,000 until Jan. 1858, & in 1859 he became bankrupt.

Petitioner claimed to be in equity a specialty creditor of testator, on the ground that B. had become assignee of the mtge.-debt as her trustee; & prayed that she might be allowed to come in & prove her debt, & that the reversionary interests in the two sums of stock, to which testator's estate was entitled under the settlement of 1835, might be sold in payment thereof:—Held: as the statements in the petition suggested fraud, as the trustees were not before the ct., & as the money was not in ct., petitioner could not obtain relief on petition; & petition dismissed, without costs, but without prejudice to the right of petitioner to file a bill.—SEALE v. BULLER (1860), 2 Giff. 312; 2 L. T. 659; 6 Jur. N. S. 989; 66 E. R. 131.

4653. The one who undertook the sole management of the estate became bkpt., & a great loss occurred. A suit was instituted by summons in chambers, & under the common decree it was sought on summons to charge the non-acting exor. & trustee with two surcharges, on the ground of constructive receipt.

Summons dismissed, with costs, on the ground that such a surcharge could not be made in such a form of suit.—PETERSON v. PETERSON (1867), 16 L. T. 377.

4656. 4658. Substituted service of subpoena.—HAMILTON v. THOMAS, [1883] W. N. 31.

4659. Writ of sequestration—Against defaulting trustee—Effect of death of trustee.—A writ of sequestration issued by beneficiaries against a defaulting trustee is not rendered inoperative by the subsequent death of the defaulter, but can be proceeded upon after reviving the action against the defaulter's legal personal representative, such representative being a necessary party to any proceedings, if for no other reason, at least because he had the right to get rid of the sequestration by satisfying the demand.—PIRATT v. INMAN (1889), 43 Ch. D. 175; 59 L. J. Ch. 274; 61 L. T. 760; 38 W. R. 200; 6 T. L. R. 91.

B. Who May Bring Action.

4660. One of several cestuis que trust—Duty to take care of interests of others.—When one of several cestuis que trust institutes a suit for relief in respect of a breach of trust, he is bound, in the conduct of the suit, to take care of the interests of the others as well as of his own.—WILLIAMS v. POWELL (1847), 2 Ph. 329; 41 E. R. 970, L. C.

4661. Legatee of cestui que trust.—One of three trustees who was alleged to have participated in a breach of trust, clearly committed by the others, being also exor. of a cestui que trust:—Held: a legatee of the cestui que trust was entitled to maintain a bill against the three trustees to recover the funds lost by the breach of trust.—SANDFORD v. JODRELL (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 178; 65 E. R. 354.

4662. Co-trustee.—(1) There is no such general rule that a wrongdoer cannot file a bill. Thereupon, if A. & B., two trustees, have committed a breach of trust, & are equally liable, but B. received the produce, A. may sustain a bill against guilty of any wilful neglect or default in the management of his trust, but, the jury, having ascertained any disputed questions of fact involved, the ct. will determine whether they amount to a breach of trust.—BATLEY & TATE

C. Parties.

(a) In General.

4663. Whether all parties to breach necessary parties.—It is no objection to a suit brought by parties seeking relief against a breach of trust that one of defts. against whom no relief is prayed may have been a party to such a breach of trust.—WILSON v. MOORE (1833), 1 My. & K. 126; 39 E. R. 629; affd. (1834), 1 My. & K. 337, L. C.

T. 406; Blyth v. Pladgate, Morgan v. Blyth, Smith v. Blyth, [1891] 1 Ch. 337; Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390; Mara v. Browne (1895), 73 L. T. 638. Mentd. Bank of Bengal v. Fagan (1849), 5 Moo. Ind. App. 27; Collinson v. Lister (1855), 20 Beav. 356; Rolfe v. Gregory (1863), 9 L. T. 250; Piercy v. Fynney (1871), L. R. 12 Eq. 69.

4664.—(1) Where several trustees are implicated in a breach of trust, the cestui que trust is not at liberty to file a bill to recover the trust fund amongst some of them only, but must make all the trustees who are living, & the representatives of such of them as are dead, parties.

A. being absolutely entitled to a trust fund under a settlement made by her father, assigned it, on her marriage, to trustees upon certain trusts, under which B., her only child, became absolutely entitled to the fund. The fund was never transferred to the trustees of the second settlement, but remained in a house of agency in India, in which the original trustees had deposited it. The house failed. B. filed a bill against the original trustees, to make them responsible for the loss of the fund:—Held: the trustees of the second settlement were not necessary parties.

(2) A. assigned a fund which was deposited in a house of agency in India to trustees, on certain trusts, under which his two daughters, B. & C., became entitled to the fund equally. A suit was afterwards instituted in which B.'s moiety of the fund was ordered to remain in ct., but C.'s moiety was ordered to be paid to her. The trustees, however, suffered the fund to continue in the house of agency until it failed. C. then filed a bill against the trustees, to make them responsible for her moiety of the fund:—Held: notwithstanding the decree in the prior suit, B. was a necessary party to the new suit.—MUNCH v. COCKERELL (1836), 8 Sim. 219; 6 L. J. Ch. 9; 59 E. R. 88.

Annotation:—Refd. Shipton v. Howes (1845), 4 Hare, 619.

4665.—[Certain members of the governing body of the Corp'n. of Leeds, immediately after the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act, procured funds belonging to the corp'n. to be applied by the trustees in whom they were vested to purposes not warranted by the Act. An information & bill, in which the corp'n. were relators & pltf's., was filed for the purpose of making five individuals, out of the several members concerned in the transaction, & the trustees, personally liable to make good the funds:—Held: the other members concerned in the transaction were not necessary parties.—A.-G. v. WILSON (1840), Cr. & Ph. 1; 10 L. J. Ch. 53; 4 Jur. 1174; 41 E. R. 389, L. C.

4666.—[The 32nd Order of Aug. 1841, applies to a case of a breach of trust committed by several exors.; & a cestui que trust may, therefore, proceed against one in the absence of the others.—PERRY v. KNOTT (1842), 5 Beav. 203; 49 E. R. 590; previous proceedings (1841), 4 Beav. 179.

4667.—(1) Consols were settled to the separate use of the wife for life, with a power to appoint it by will, & the settlement contained a power for the trustees, with the consent in writing of the wife, to alter the securities. The trustees, without such consent, sold the Consols, & invested the produce in Long Annuities, which they afterwards sold & lent the money on bond, which was afterwards received by the husband, who invested it in leaseholds. The wife received the Long Annuities until sold, & afterwards joined her husband in executing a deed, reciting that the sale of the Long Annuities & the subsequent investments had been with her consent:—Held: the appointees of the fund under her will were entitled, as against the husband & trustees, to have the Consols replaced, & the interest over which the wife had a general power of appointment was not liable to make good the breach of trust.

(2) Since the Orders of Aug. 1841, it is not necessary to make all the persons committing a breach of trust parties to a suit for its restitution.—KELLAWAY v. JOHNSON (1842), 5 Beav. 319; 6 Jur. 751; 49 E. R. 601.

4673. —[Breach of trust in not calling in & investing money due on a note, the subject of a settlement. Suit may be sustained against the trustee to compel him to pay the money, without making the representatives of the settlor, the maker of the note, parties.—PLATEL v. CRADDOCK (1838), Coop. Pr. Cas. 481 ; 47 E. R. 607.

4674. Action by executor of trustee—Against tenant for life—Joinder of other cestuis que trust as co-plaintiffs.—[A party, who was entitled under a will to the income of a trust fund for life, with remainder to his children, who were infants, obtained possession of the trust fund, & applied the produce of it to his own use. A bill was filed by the extrix. of the surviving trustee of the fund, & the children of the tenant for life, by the extrix. as their next friend, for the purpose of compelling the tenant for life to make good the fund which he had sold :—Held : as the extrix. of the surviving trustee would be liable to the cestuis que trust, to make good the trust fund, in the event of the tenant for life failing to do so, she & the infant cestuis que trust were improperly joined as co-pltf's.—JACOB v. LUCAS (1839), 1 Beav. 436 ; 8 L. J. Ch. 271 ; 48 E. R. 1009.

4675. Most guilty trustee—Action against non-acting trustee.—[Although suits for breaches of trust are within the 32nd order of Aug. 1841, the most guilty trustee cannot be omitted from being a party to the bill.

Suppose one trustee only to act, receive the money, & only invest in his own name, that is a breach of trust in the non-acting trustee ; & if the trustee who had the money sold it out to his own use, in that case, although the non-acting trustee may be liable, yet the ct. would not allow the cestui que trust to go against the non-acting trustee without bringing the acting trustee before the ct. 4676. Person not a trustee—Party to breach.—[A person, not a trustee, who is a party to a breach of trust committed by a trustee may or may not, at the option of pltf., a cestui que trust, be made deft. to a suit against the trustee in respect of such breach.—BATEMAN v. MARGERISON (1848), 6 Hare, 496 ; 67 E. R. 1260.

Annotation :—Refd. Knight v. Cawthron (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 714.

4677. Whether all trustees necessary parties—Action against representatives of deceased trustee.—

—Testator devised his residuary real & personal estate to A. & B., on trusts in which B. was beneficially interested. B. received part of the assets, & died :—Held : a bill could not be maintained by the surviving trustees against the representatives of B. alone, to recover the trust fund received by him, but the bill ought to seek the general administration of testator's estate.—CHANCELLOR v. MORECRAFT (1848), 11 Beav. 202 ; 17 L. J. Ch. 11 ; 10 L. T. O. S. 437 ; 50 E. R. 817.

4678. —[—]—Testator bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to three trustees, R., L. & I., who were also his exors., upon trust to invest same, & to pay the income to his widow for her life, & after her death "to lay out & invest or retain invested" £850, & to pay the income of £500, part thereof, to his daughter M. for her life, with remainder to her children, & upon trust to pay the income of the remaining £350 to his daughter B. for her life, with remainder to her children ; & in the event of the death of his daughter, M. without issue, her share was to be divided among L., I. & B. Testator died in Dec. 1854, & his widow died in June, 1856. The daughter M. died in Jan. 1859, without issue. After the death of the widow, R. began to pay interest to B. on £350, & after the death of M., on £516 13s. 4d., i.e. on the £350 & one-third of the £500, & continued the payment half-yearly until his death, which took place in Sept. 1863. Part of the estate of the original testator consisted of a sum of £1,200 lent upon mtge. Before the death of R. £700, part of this sum, had been paid off by the mtgor. in instalments. For some of these instalments R. alone gave receipts, & he joined in the receipts for others. After R.'s death, J. one of his exors., continued to pay interest to B. on £516 13s. 4d. until June, 1874, when the payment ceased. He made these payments with the knowledge of his co-exors. & of the persons beneficially interested in R.'s estate, & the payments were admitted as proper deductions upon a half-yearly settlement of the accounts of the income of R.'s estate made between the exors. & the beneficiaries. The £500 remaining due on the mtge. was paid off by instalments after the death of R. the receipts for the instalments being signed by his exor. J. as "for the exors." or "for the trustees" of the original testator. J. paid one-third of the £500 to L. & another third to I. & retained the remaining one-third. In 1877 B. commenced an action against the exors. of R. alone, claiming to have the sum of £516 13s. 4d. & the arrears of income made good out of the estate of R. :—Held : B. was entitled to sue the exors. of R. alone, without making the other trustees of the original testator parties.—WILSON v. RHODES (1878), 8 Ch. D. 777, C. A.

4679. —[—]—By an ante-nuptial settlement the trustees of it were empowered to sell out the trust fund & invest the proceeds upon, among others, real securities. By a contemporaneous memorandum indorsed on the settlement the settlors requested the trustees to advance the trust moneys to the owners of a copyhold estate, called Vauxhall Gardens, upon mtge. as first, second or third mtgees. :—Held : in a suit by cestuis que trust, seeking to make one of the trustees liable in respect of the breach of trust, the 32nd Order of May, 1841, did not dispense with the necessity of making the co-trustees parties.—FOWLER v. REYNAL (1849), 2 De G. & Sm. 749 ; 13 L. T. O. S. 203 ; 13 Jur. 649 ; 64 E. R. 335 ; affd. (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 500, L. C.

4712. ——— By trustees—Title of cestui que trust.]—Testator gave real estates to trustees in trust for his son for life, with a gift over if he charged for encumbered them. One of the trustees filed a bill for the administration of the trusts of the will, & afterwards filed a supplemental bill against certain defts. who were in possession of part of the estates, alleging that they claimed under a charge made in their favour by the tenant for life which operated as a forfeiture. Defts. were interrogated as to the particulars of all charges in their favour, if any, of the property of testator. Defts. stated in their answer that they claimed under no charge made by the tenant for life, but under a lease at a rack rent which he had granted to a lessee, who had mortgaged the lease to them. Pltf. excepted to the answer because defts. did not set forth the date of the lease:—Held: pltf., being a trustee, was entitled to know the particulars of those who claimed to be cestuis que trust; & the exceptions must therefore be allowed.—HURST v. BADLEY (1844), 7 Beav. 274; 49 E. R. 1070.

4716. ——— Action for administration of trustee's estate.]—An action was brought in 1884 for the administration of the estate of testator, who died in 1872, by an incumbrancer on three of the four shares of the residue, against the surviving trustee, & the extrix, of deceased trustee. The writ claimed only ordinary administration, but by the statement of claim various breaches of trust were alleged against the trustees, particularly deceased trustee, whose estate was then under administration by the ct. Pltf. applied under R. S. C., Ord. 15, r. 1, for an order for the ordinary administration accounts & inquiries & special inquiries pointing to the alleged breaches of trust:—Held: the application should be refused; having regard to the relief claimed by the writ., only the usual administration accounts & inquiries could be obtained under R. S. C., Ord. 15, r. 1; & as the substantial question at issue appeared to relate to the alleged breaches of trust, which would have to be determined at the hearing the usual accounts & inquiries might be unnecessary, & the ct. in the exercise of its discretion under R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 10, ought to decline to order even the usual accounts at that stage of the action.—Re GYHON, ALLEN v. TAYLOR (1885), 29 Ch. D. 834; 54 L. J. Ch. 945; 53 L. T. 539; 33 W. 4717. ——— Breach of trust admitted—Loss made good before action heard.]—In an action by some of the beneficiaries against the trustees of the will, the statement of claim alleged a specific breach of trust, consisting of an unauthorised investment, by defts. & claimed administration of the estate by the ct., & the proper accounts & inquiries. It also alleged certain conduct on the part of the trustees which was undefensible. Defts. admitted the breach of trust, but had made it good before the hearing of the action. At the hearing the common order for administration was made, but the accounts & inquiries were not to be proceeded with without the leave of the court. A summons was taken out by plffs. asking for the removal of the trustees, which had been claimed by the writ, though not by the statement of claim, & that the common accounts & inquiries, or, if necessary, additional ones, should be proceeded with. Before it came on, by the death of the widow of testator the estate became immediately divisible among the beneficiaries. The summons was opposed by certain beneficiaries on whom the judgment was served:—Held: as this was a charge of an active breach of trust, & not of wilful default, the ct. would not direct accounts or inquiries, either with a view to the discovery of further breaches of trust not alleged in the pleadings or proved at

Under the powers in the deed, B. carried on the business by means of an overdraft arranged with a bank. In 1893 A. assigned his interest under the deed to his wife, pltf., for her separate use. In 1896 B. reconveyed the trust estate to pltf., the reconveyance containing a recital that all A.'s debts had been paid. On this occasion some investigation of the trust account was made by the pltf., but a detailed account was not required. In July, 1898, B. destroyed all the books of account in the belief that they were no longer of use. In Oct. 1898, pltf. brought an action against B. charging him with fraud & misconduct, & claiming an account of all his transactions under the trust deed from 1887 to 1896 on the footing of wilful default. B. denied the charges, but admitted (a) that he had improperly allowed the trust estate to be charged for a short period with interest at 5 per cent. on sums amounting to £10,000; (b) that he had received the usual commissions, amounting to £31 10s. 8d., on fire insurance of the trust estate; (c) that he had retained £52 17s 6d. for debts of A. due in 1887, but never claimed. At the trial the charges of fraud & wilful default were not established, but pltf. claimed an order for a common account from 1887:—Held: although B. had been guilty of some misconduct, it was not a case in which the ct., in the exercise of its discretion under R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 10, would under the circumstances make an order for a common account; but there would be judgment for pltf. for the amounts admitted under the three items above mentioned.—*CAMPBELL v. 4733. From what time appointment dates—Consent of Public Trustee.—Three ladies, extrices, of a will, executed a deed on Nov. 29, 1912, appointing the Public Trustee to be sole trustee of the will in their place. The Public Trustee delayed giving his formal consent to act until the administration of the estate had been completed, & gave his consent under his hand & official seal in accordance with the rules made under Public Trustee Act, 1906 (c. 55), on Feb. 28, 1913, & executed the deed of appointment on Mar. 3, 1913. One of the ladies desired to withdraw the appointment, contending that, inasmuch as it was made before the consent of the Public Trustee had been formally given, it was invalid:—Held: the appointment of the Public Trustee dated as from Mar. 3, 1913, when the Public Trustee had executed the deed of appointment, which was after his consent had been formally given in accordance with the rules, so that the appointment so made was valid.—*Re SHAW, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. a. Appointment of Public Trustee of England—Trust declared in England—Trust property in Victoria.—The Public Trustee of England being a corpn. sole under Public Trustee Act, 1906, is empowered to accept the trusteeship of land in Victoria in the case of a trust declared in an English will, & is entitled to be registered as a joint proprietor under Transfer of Land declared that, although no case for the appointment should exist, H. might appoint any fit person or persons additional trustee or trustees. The youngest surviving child was born in Dec. 1905. The settlor died in Nov. 1905. His widow C., & the three surviving infant children by their next friend, were desirous that the Public Trustee should be appointed trustee or custodian trustee of the settlement additional to resp., but made no suggestion against his integrity:—Held: notwithstanding the refusal of the trustee to consent to the appointment, the beneficiaries had no absolute right to the appointment of a second trustee, but, as resp. now placed himself in the hands of the ct. & did not oppose the wishes of the beneficiaries, the Public Trustee would be appointed co-trustee with him of the settlement.—*Re BADGER, BADGER v. 4743. Appointment as sole trustee—Instrument providing for not less than three trustees—Jurisdiction of court.]—(1) The ct. has express jurisdiction under Public Trustee Act, 1906 (c. 55), s. 5, to appoint the Public Trustee sole trustee of a settlement, although it contained a provision that the trustees should not at any time be less than three. Seemle: under the combined effect of s. 10 of Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 10, & Public Trustee Act, 1906 (c. 55), s. 5, the donee of the power in a settlement containing such a provision could himself appoint the Public Trustee to be sole trustee.

(2) In cases where such an appointment has been made under the ct.'s statutory power of appointing new trustees, the settlement must be read as authorising the payment to a sole trustee of capital moneys under the Settled Land Acts.

(3) Notwithstanding the absence of any express statutory enactment enabling the Public Trustee to hold land or take possession of personal property except as provided in s. 3 of the Act of 1906, it must be implied that he has full power, when appointed, to possess himself of the trust property, whatever its nature.

Seemle: under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 25, the ct. has jurisdiction to appoint two trustees,

(2) Qu.: whether it is open to a beneficiary applying for an order under the sub-sect. to base his application solely on the ground of the expense which the appointment would involve.

But assuming that it is, the fact of that expense, provided that it is not exceptional or disproportionate, cannot in ordinary cases be treated as a material element in determining whether it is "expedient" or not to make the order.—*Re FIRTH, FIRTH v. The tenant for life sought an injunction to restrain them from so doing in view of the fact that the duties of the trustees were light & that the appointment of the Public Trustee was undesirable on the ground of expense. It was, however, subsequently ascertained that the charges of the Public Trustee would be small, & the tenant for life, therefore, no longer relied on expense as a ground for objecting to the appointment:—Held: the application failed, there being no evidence that it was expedient in the interests of all the beneficiaries to restrain the trustees from appointing the Public Trustee.—Re DRAKE'S SETTLEMENT (1926), 42 T. In the administration of a small estate by the Public Trustee, under Public Trustee Act, 1906 (c. 55), s. 3, the date for ascertaining the gross capital value of such an estate, which must be proved to be less than £1000, is the date of the application to the Public Trustee to assume the administration, and not the date of the death of deceased:—Held: an estate which, at the death of deceased, was of the gross capital value of £128 10s. 2d., but at the date of the application to the Public Trustee had been reduced by partial distribution to £571 11s. 10d. 4763. Costs—Appearance under Trading with the Enemy Rules, 1915—Failure of summons.]—S. & W., a firm of stockbrokers in London, creditors of W. of Berlin for the sum of £1,400, received from W. in payment of his debt a cheque drawn to his order drawn by a German bank upon the London & Liverpool Bank of Commerce, Ltd. of London, & indorsed by him to S. & W. On presentation the cheque was dishonoured & subsequently protested. On application for payment the Liverpool bank first pleaded the Moratorium Proclamation, then the state of war & the provisions of Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914 (c. 87); & lastly, that they had no funds available to meet the draft in question. The German bank had a current account with the Liverpool bank, & the position of this account was such that the Liverpool bank considered that they were entitled to assert their bankers' lien upon the assets coming to their hands in order to meet the liabilities arising on that account from drafts to a large amount for the debit of the German bank & also from unmatured acceptances. (3) Before making an order for payment of the costs of an audit under sect. 13 of the Act otherwise than out of the trust estate the Public Trustee should hear the parties if they desire to be heard.

These shares were represented by £3,000 Consols. Appct. was entitled for life to one-third share, & applied in 1908 for an audit and investigation of the accounts from testator's death. The Public Trustee directed an audit of the account. The result was that it was shown some former trustee sold Consols & bought ground rents; these ground rents were sold, & the proceeds reinvested in Consols, a larger sum being obtained than if the Consols had never been sold owing to the depreciation of Consols. Appct. consulted a solr. in 1906, independent accountants furnished accounts from 1899 to 1906, & her solrs. stated they were satisfied. With all this information appct. applied to the Public Trustee for an investigation & audit of the trust account under Public Trustee Act 1906 (c. 55), s. 13. Having regard to all the circumstances, the Public Trustee came to the conclusion that appct. acted unreasonably, & he directed that she should bear the costs of the audit and investigation:—Held: the Public Trustee was right.—*Re UTLEY, RUSSELL v. Valuation & arbitration distinguished.—See ARBITRATION, Vol. II., pp. 319-322, Nos. 51-71.

1. Position inter se of parties concerned with valuation—Valuer to be appointed by both parties—Duty to nominate.—The parties to an agreement for the sale of the cropping of a garden agreed to nominate & appoint on a day certain each his own valuer, that the valuation should take place on another day fixed, & that on some day between the day of nomination & the day for valuation, the valuers should appoint an umpire:—Held: each was bound, on the day fixed for the nomination, to communicate to the other the name of the valuer nominated by him, as well as to nominate him.—TEW v. HARRIS (1847), 11 Q. B. 7; 17 L. J. Q. B. 1; 11 Jur. 947; 116 E. R. 376; sub nom. DEW v. HARRIS, 10 L. T. O. S. 87.

2. — — — Duty to communicate name of nominee to other party.—TEW v. HARRIS, No. 1, ante.

3. — — — Valuer to be appointed by one party—Whether amounting to undertaking—That valuer shall act.—An agreement to settle disputes between two parties as to the amount to be paid by one of them, in respect of the value of goods belonging to, or work done by the other of them, by a reference to two valuers, one to be appointed by each party, does not import any undertaking

a. Appraiser to be appointed by both parties—Umpire chosen after disagreement.—A statute directed that each party should choose an appraiser, & that the two appraisers so chosen should select a third, & that the three so selected should determine the matter in controversy, the decision agreed on by two of them to be binding.

The two appraisers attempted, without appointing a third, to make the appraisal; but, disagreeing, finally, appointed a third. An appraisement agreed upon by this third & one of the others was sustained.—Re KENNY (1856), 3 N. S. R. (2 Thom.) 14.—CAN.
b. Whether valuation or arbitration intended.—Re LAIDLAW & CAMPBELL, LAKE ONTARIO & WESTERN

c. Abortive reference.—Two leases of adjoining lots were by assignment vested in C. Each lease provided that if, on its expiration, the lessor refused to renew, he should give notice thereof to the lessee & that valuers should be appointed by the former that the valuer whom he may appoint shall act in the valuation, nor any liability for his not acting. The party is only bound to appoint a valuer on his part, & if the person appointed does not act, the other party is remitted to his original cause of action, & may revoke his submission; or may possibly, if the valuer has undertaken to act & failed in his duty, have a right of action against him; but has no right of action against the party who appointed him.—COOPER v. SHUTTLEWORTH (1856), 25 L. J. Ex. 114.

Failure of valuer to act—

Liability for failure.—COOPER v. SHUTTLEWORTH, No. 3, ante.

5. — Mistaken valuation—Clerical error—Party not entitled to advantage therefrom.—In the sale of a grocery & malt business the valuers, by a slip, valued 542 sacks of malt as 542 grs. The purchaser, having accepted bills for the amount of the purchase-money, refused to pay so much thereof as represented the excess caused by the over valuation of the malt. In an action by the vendor to recover this amount:—Held: this was a mere clerical error, & not an erroneous exercise of judgment, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—GORDEN v. FUNNELL (1899), 15 T. L. R. 547.

6. Option to purchase at valuation—Option to be declared before valuation.—EDWARDS v. EDWARDS (1837), 1 Jur. 654.

Annotation:—Mentd. West London Syndicate v. I. R. Comrs., [1898] 2 Q. B. 507.

7 Work done by unlicensed valuer—Whether remuneration recoverable.—To a declaration for work & labour deft. pleaded that the work, etc., consisted of an appraisal of personal property, which pltf. appraised in expectation of reward to be therefore paid by deft. to him, without being duly licensed according to 46 Geo. 3, c. 43:—Held: the plea was sufficient, without stating that pltf. did the work as an appraiser, as it followed the words of the Act.—PALK v. PORCE (1848), 12 Q. B. 666; 17 L. J. Q. B. 299; 12 L. T. O. S. 104; 12 Jur. 797; 116 E. R. 1020.

8. Evidence of valuation—Sufficiency.—By agreement between A. & B. it was agreed that B. should buy of A. certain plant, materials & tools "at a valuation to be made by A. & a person to be appointed by B." & that B. should pay for same by a bill for £150 at two months from the valuation & by another bill for the balance of the valuation at three months after date. Under this agreement B. was let into possession & A., & J., who represented B., met & proceeded to value having a list of the articles to be valued, as to all of which except certain timber the prices were finally agreed upon; but, as to the timber the price per foot & the superficial measurement only were agreed upon, the calculation of the cubical contents & the carrying out the amount being left to be filled in by B.'s foreman. A. & J. never met again, & did not agree upon the sum total; but B., after action brought for it, paid the £150:—Held: sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding that a valuation had been made by A. & J.—GORDON v. WHITEHOUSE (1856), 18 C. B. 747; 25 L. J. C. P. 300; 139 E. R. 1564.

Annotation:—Mentd. Collins v. Collins (1858), 26 Beav. 306.

9. Property affected by nuisance—Action to restrain nuisance—Consent order for purchase by defendant of property affected—Declaration by court as to basis of valuation.—Pltf. filed a bill to restrain deft. from injuring his farms by copper smoke, & also brought an action for damages. Before trial of the action an order was made by consent in the suit that deft. should purchase pltf.'s interest in the farms at a price to be ascertained & certified by a surveyor, & that pltf. should be at liberty to claim damages in the action down to the date of the surveyor's certificate. A dispute took place before the surveyor whether the valuation ought to be according to the existing state of the farms or according to their state before they were injured by the copper smoke. The parties being unable to agree, the surveyor stated that he would hear arguments & decide the question of principle. The Vice-Chancellor then made an order, declaring that the valuation ought to be according to the existing state of the farms:—Held: such declaration ought not to have been made, & it was discharged without prejudice to any question.—HOUGHTON v. BANKART (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 16; 30 L. J. Ch. 182; 3 L. T. 606; 7 Jur. N. S. 57; 9 W. R. 215; 45 E. R. 783, L. J. J.

10. Acceptance of valuation "under protest"—Delay in disputing valuation—Right to dispute barred.—Pltf. disputed an award of valuers for the price of growing crops, on the ground that it was made upon a wrong principle. On settlement he took the sum awarded, & signed a receipt for it, writing the words "under protest" at the top. He afterwards waited nine months, & then filed his bill:—Held: he was precluded by delay & what amounted to acquiescence from disputing the valuation.—PARROTT v. SHELLARD (1868), 16 W. R. 928.

11. Applications by valuer appointed by Tithe Commissioners—Jurisdiction of county court to entertain.—A county ct. judge has jurisdiction under Tithe Act, 1891 (c. 8), s. 10 (4), to hear applications by a valuer duly appointed by the comrs. under Tithe Acts for the recovery of sums due in respect of redemption money.—R. v. PATERSON, [1895] 1 Q. B. 31; 64 L. J. Q. B. 20; 71 L. T. 671; 43 W. R. 127; 11 T. L. R. 11; 39 Sol. Jo. 28; sub nom. R. v. ESSEX COUNTY COURT JUDGE, 15 R. 79, D. C.

to value the buildings on the land. Notice was given under each lease & valuers were appointed who without objection valued the buildings on the two lots as a whole. In an action by the lessee to recover the amount so awarded:—Held: the valuation of the buildings on the lots should have been ascertained separately & the action should not be dismissed but the same or other valuers should be appointed to ascertain the value in a proper manner.—IRWIN v. CAMPBELL (1915), 51 S. C. R. 358; 23 D. L. R. 279.—CAN.

d. Method of appraisal.—On an appraisal the umpire & appraisers are within their jurisdiction, having applied their minds to the "right thing" to form their own opinions, from their own knowledge, inspection or examination or from such other source as they may deem proper, as to the fair value & proper charge or allowance to be made in respect of the matter submitted to them. It is not incumbent on them to state how they acted, & it is impossible for the ct. to ascertain what considerations have affected their judgment.—SEARLE v. ALLIANCE INSURANCE CO. (No. 3), [1926] 4 D. L. R. 1173; [1926] 3 W. W. R. 563; 36 Man. L. R. 110.—CAN.

Part II.—Duties, Rights and Liabilities.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

12. Valuer must act in person—Valuation by valuer's clerk—Parties not bound.]—In an action on an agreement for the sale of goods, at a valuation to be made by A., the issue was, whether a valuation was made by A. It appeared that the goods were in fact valued by B., A.'s clerk:—Held: debt. was not bound by it, unless it were shown that it was agreed between the parties that B.'s valuation should be taken as A.'s; & the fact of debt.'s seeing B. valuing, & making no objection until B. told him the amount, was not evidence of such agreement.—ESS v. TRUSCOTT (1837), 2 M. & W. 385; MURP. & H. 75; 6 L. J. Ex. 144; 1 Jur. 358; 150 E. R. 800.

13. Knowledge of law of valuation—Necessity for precise & accurate knowledge.]—(1) One who holds himself out as a valuer of ecclesiastical property, though he is not bound to possess a precise & accurate knowledge of the law respecting the valuation of dilapidations as between outgoing & incoming incumbent, is bound to bring to the performance of the duty he undertakes a knowledge of the general rules applicable to the subject, & of the broad distinction which exists between the cases of a valuation as between incoming & outgoing tenant, & a valuation as between incoming & outgoing incumbent.

(2) If debts., in consideration of pltf.'s retainer, had entered into a written engagement that they were gratified to all & understood the subject, there is no rule of law which would have protected them from liability for a loss caused by a breach of that engagement (per CUR.).—JENKINS v. BETHAM (1855), 15 C. B. 168; 3 C. L. R. 373; 24 L. J. C. P. 94; 24 L. T. O. S. 272; 1 Jur. N. S. 237; 3 W. R. 283; 139 E. R. 384.

16. Entry on land for purpose of valuation—Allotment under Inclosure Acts.]—A valuer appointed under Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), is entitled to enter upon the land of the owner of the land which is subject to the right of common for the purpose of making a survey & map as directed by the Act.—*GRUBB v. 17. Right to set out private roads—Land allotted under Inclosure Acts by Inclosure Commissioners.]—It is competent to the Inclosure Comrs., under Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), to order the valuer to set a private or occupation road over land directed by the provisional order to be allotted to an individual in lieu of his rights in the lands to be inclosed, unless the provisional order expressly declares that his allotment shall be exempt from such a burden.—*GRUBB v. 18. ——J.—A valuer who makes an award under Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), has a discretion in each case as to the amount of formation & completion of private or occupation roads & ways set out by him in his award. The liability under sect. 68 of the Act to maintain & keep repaired the private or occupation roads & ways arises after they have been formed & completed, & is confined to the extent to which they have been formed & made up.

The valuer may, where it is necessary, set out footways to accommodate inclosed lands or adjoining owners.—REYNOLDS v. BARNES, [1900] 2 Ch. 361; 78 L. J. Ch. 641; 101 L. T. 71; 73 J. P. 330.

SECT. 2.—CARELESS OR UNSKILFUL VALUATION.

22. Liability for negligence.]—JENKINS v. BETHAM, No. 13, ante.

23. — Whether valuer acting as quasi-arbitrator.]—Pltf. purchased the goodwill, stock & effects of a business at a valuation, the amount of which was to be fixed by valuers, one to be appointed on each side for that purpose, & in case of difference by an umpire to be chosen by the valuers. Pltf. employed deft. as his valuer, & deft. & the valuer appointed by the vendor fixed between them the amount of valuation. In an action for negligence in making such valuation, by which the value of the goodwill was fixed too high, pltf. applied to administer interrogatories to deft. to ascertain the basis on which he had agreed with the valuer of the vendor to calculate the valuation:—Held: deft. had not acted in the matter as an arbitrator, but as a valuer only, & was therefore liable to his employer for negligence, & pltf. accordingly was allowed to administer the interrogatories.—TURNER v. GOULDEN (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 57; 43 L. J. C. P. 60.

24. ——J.—A firm of surveyors was appointed jointly by the parties to a contract for the sale of certain growing timber, to value the timber. The vendor subsequently commenced proceedings against the surveyors for damages for negligence in respect of their valuation of the timber:—Held: the surveyors were in the position of quasi-arbitrators, & the action failed.—*BOYNTON v. Pltf., who was a client of the solrs., became the mtgee., on the faith of the valuation being made by the valuers. The valuation was not conducted with due skill & care, & the security turned out greatly insufficient:—Held: the true inference to be drawn from the evidence, apart from an admission contained in the pleadings, was that the valuers were actually employed by pltf., & as they had been negligent in the performance of the work undertaken, they were liable to pltf. for the damage caused by such negligence.—*SCHOLES v. 28. — — — — — ]—An intending mtgor., at the request of the solrs. of an intending mtgee., applied to a firm of valuers for a valuation of the property proposed to be mortgaged. A valuation at the sum of £3,000 was sent in by the valuers direct to the mtgee.'s solrs., & the mtge. was subsequently carried out. Default having been made in payment by the mtgor., & a loss having resulted to the mtgee., he commenced an action against the valuers for damages for the loss sustained through their negligence, misrepresentation, & breach of duty. The ct. being satisfied on the evidence that defts. knew at the time the valuation was made that it was for the purpose of an advance, & that the valuation as made was in fact no valuation at all:—Held: under the circumstances, defts. were liable on two grounds: (a) they, independently of contract, owed a duty to pltf. which they had failed to discharge; (b) they had made reckless statements on which pltf. had acted.—CANN v. WILLSON (1888), 39 Ch. D. 39; 57 L. J. Ch. 1034; 59 L. T. 723; 37 W. L. R. 23; 4 T. L. R. 588; 32 Sol. Jo. 542.

The surveyor was not appointed by the mtgees., & there was no contractual relation between him & them. In consequence of the negligence of the surveyor the certificates contained untrue statements as to the progress of the buildings, but there was no fraud on his part:—Held: the surveyor owed no duty to the mtgees. to exercise care in giving his certificates, & they could not maintain an action against him by reason of negligence.—*LE LIEVRE v. 32. — — — — — ]—C., a solr., was applied to by V., who was not his client, but who owned certain properties, to find someone who would advance money on the security of same. C. knew that R., another solr., who represented pltf. under a power of attorney, had money to advance, & at an interview between C. & R., it was arranged that an advance, to be guaranteed by an insurance society, should be made to V., but no stipulation for an independent valuation of the properties was then made. C., with authority to conduct the mtge. on these lines, requested an insurance society to insure the mtge., knowing that the society usually employed deft., a local valuer of repute. C. applied to the society for a copy of deft.'s valuation, & this application was ultimately acceded to by them, they saying that on future occasions when C. was acting for the mtgee. he should have a copy. The society repudiated responsibility for deft.'s fee, which was afterwards paid by V. through C. The society instructed deft. to value the properties, & he reported to them by a valuation written on their printed form. C. relied, to the knowledge of deft., on his valuation in making the advance on mtge. to V.:—Held: no contractual relation of principal & agent between pltf. & deft. was established; deft. never agreed to value for the use of pltf., & pltf. had not established any duty on the part of deft. towards him to exercise reasonable care & skill in & about the valuation.—*LOVE v. reinvestment in land of moneys paid into ct. under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), the taxing master allowed a lump sum for surveyor's charges, being a commission on the amount of the purchase-money according to Ryde's scale, which is a scale prepared by an eminent surveyor of that name on the principle that a commission varying from five to one-half per cent. should be paid to the surveyor according to the amount of the purchase-money. An application was made to the ct. to direct the taxing master to review his taxation in respect of this item:—Held: the question was in reality one not of principle but of amount, & the ct. would not interfere; but if it were a question of principle a prevailing practice of paying surveyors by commission ought not to be disturbed.—A.-G. v. DRAPERS' Co. (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 69; 21 L. T. 651.

35. —[.]—In 1914 a correspondence took place between pltf., who was a surveyor, & the clerk of the guardians of deft. union, with a view to pltf. acting as valuer for the guardians at an arbn. between them & the B. union, arising out of the dissolution of the A. union, the transfer of its property & liabilities to the B. union, & the inclusion in the deft. union of S., a parish hitherto in the A. union. In the opinion of the ct. pltf. throughout the correspondence believed & intended that he was to be remunerated on Ryde's scale on the basis of the value of the whole of the properties of the A. union, while the guardians believed & intended that the scale was to be applied only to the interest of their union in those properties. The contract for employment of pltf. as valuer was originally drawn in the sense understood & intended by him; but the draft was altered to the sense understood & intended by the guardians, & in that form it was executed by pltf. & sealed with the seal of the guardians:—Held: (1) on the evidence, pltf.'s mistake had been induced innocently by the guardians, & he was entitled to rescission of the agreement; (2) he was entitled to remuneration on a quantum meruit; the ct., however, declining to assess the remuneration with any direct reference to Ryde's scale, & expressing its disapproval of the principle of basing remuneration on the amount of the valuation.—FARADAY v. TAMWORTH UNION (1916), 86 L. J. Ch. 436; 81 J. P. 81; 15 L. G. R. 258.

Annotation:—As to (1) Consd. Higgins v. Northampton Corpn., [1927] 1 Ch. 128.

36. — Evidence of custom.—There is no custom between surveyors & their clients by which the former could base their account on Ryde's scale of fees for surveyors charges; & a surveyor, in the absence of a special agreement, is only entitled to charge a fair & reasonable sum for his services.—DEBENHAM v. KING'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE (1884), 1 T. L. R. 170; Cab. & El. 438.

37. —[.]—BUCKLAND & GARRARD v. PAWSON & Co. (1890), 6 T. L. R. 421.

38. Valuation by direction of company promoter—Promoter not company liable for fees.—By an agreement made between the vendor of certain ironworks & W. & H., it was agreed that, if W. & H. succeeded within three months in getting up a co. for the purchase of the ironworks at a valuation, they should out of the purchase-money, receive £1,500. By an agreement, dated a few weeks later, the vendor agreed with W., as trustee for the co., that the co. should buy the ironworks at a valuation. W. & H. did not get up a co. within the three months, but after some time they formed a co. with seven shareholders, who were also the directors. These shareholders were not informed of the agreement to pay W. & H. the £1,500. The co. was registered, & by the arts. of assocn. the agreement for the purchase of the property at a valuation was adopted, & it was provided that the directors should pay all expenses incurred in getting up & registering the co. Very few other shares were applied for: none were allotted, & the co. was wound up. W. & H. claimed in the winding-up remuneration for their services both before & after the co. was formed, & the valuer claimed his charges for valuing:—Held: any claim which the valuer might have was against W. & H. only.—Re HEREFORD & SOUTH WALES WAGGON & ENGINEERING CO. (1876), 2 Ch. D. 621; sub nom. Re HEREFORD & SOUTH WALES WAGGON & ENGINEERING CO., HEAD & WALTER'S CLAIMS, 45 L. J. Ch. 461; 35 L. T. 40; *sub nom. 39. Reduction by court of fees allowed by taxing master—Without laying down standard.—The ct. reduced the valuers' fees allowed by the taxing master upon an appeal, but refrained from setting up any definite standard for such fees.—COURAGE v. ST. OLAVE'S UNION (1896), Ryde & K. Rat. App. 13.

40. Recovery on quantum meruit—Employment of valuer by local authority—Contract not under seal.—An urban council, exercising the powers of the R. Improvement Comrs., applied to the Local Govt. Board to sanction a loan in order that they might, under powers conferred by Local Improvement Acts, purchase & extend the pier at R. The Board directed that a valuation & estimates should be prepared by an independent expert for the purposes of an inquiry. The council passed & confirmed a resolution appointing pltf. to value, estimate, & report, upon agreed terms. His report was used for the inquiry, but the Board refused to sanction the loan & the scheme was not proceeded with. Pltf. claimed the amount of his fees under a contract of employment or, alternatively, on a quantum meruit. The council refused payment on the ground that, as there was no contract under seal, Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 174, had not been complied with:—Held: the contract was not made under the powers or for the purposes of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), but under the powers & for the purposes of the Improvement Acts; Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 174, had no application; & under the circumstances pltf. was entitled to his fees on a quantum meruit.—*DOUGLASS v. any event it was unreasonable, & the amount paid into ct. was sufficient remuneration.—YOUNG v. DWYER, [1926] N. Z. L. R. 882.—N.Z.

PART III. SECT. 2.

451. Specific performance of agreement to sell at valuation—No valuation made.]—Specific performance cannot be decreed of an agreement to sell at a price to be settled by arbitrators named by the parties, if no award has been made; but if the parties are agreed as to a valuation, but have not appointed any persons to make the valuation, the ct. will itself interfere so as to ascertain the value, & direct a specific performance of the agreement.—DAILY v. DUGGAN (1839), 1 I. Eq. R. 312.—IR.

Part IV.—Stamps.

See Inclosure, etc. Expenses Act, 1868 (c. 89), s. 2; Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 24, sched. 1; & generally, REVENUE, Vol. XXXIX., pp. 219 et seq.

47. Necessity for stamp—Award stamp.—An appraisement does not require an award stamp, though in fact it is in the nature of an award.—PERKINS v. POTTS (1814), 2 Chit. 399.

48. — Appraisement stamp.—PERKINS v. POTTS, No. 47, ante.

49. — Appraisement for information of parties only.—A valuation made of the parish lands by two resident parishioners, appointed for that purpose at a parish meeting by the parish officers, with a view of equalising the rate to the relief of the poor:—Held: not to require an appraisement stamp, it being merely for the information of the parties employing the valuers.—ATKINSON v. FELL (1816), 5 M. & S. 240; 105 E. R. 1039.

Annotation:—Refd. Palk v. Force (1848), 12 Q. B. 666.

50. — Subsequently made basis of agreement.—A valuation made for the information of parties, & not binding on them, is not made liable to an appraisement stamp by 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. Part I, Title Appraisement, though an agreement is afterwards founded on its data.—JACKSON v. STOPHERD (1834), 2 Cr. & M. 361; 4 Tyr. 330; 3 L. J. Ex. 95; 149 E. R. 800.

51. — Memorandum stating amount of first valuation—Subject to second valuation.—On the trial, the following memorandum, signed by pltf. on Aug. 20, was tendered in evidence for the purpose of showing that pltf. had acquiesced in a valuation made on Aug. 2, but was rejected for want of a stamp. "This note is to be subject to the revised valuation of Messrs. T. & K., & will be more or less than £41 0s. 8d., according as they value the corn.—N.B. The note was given up to me by Mr. W. this Aug. 20, 1844." The original & subsequent agreements had been given in evidence, properly stamped:—Held: the memorandum was admissible without a stamp, not being an "agreement, or any minute or memorandum of an agreement," or "evidence of a contract," within Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched. Part I, Title Agreement.—MARSHALL v. POWELL (1846), 9 Q. B. 779; 1 New. Pract. Cas. 590; 16 L. J. Q. B. 5; 8 L. T. O. S. 159; 11 Jur. 61; 115 E. R. 1475.

52. — Authority to survey & negotiate mortgage on commission.—A. being desirous of raising £5,000 on the security of lands, employed a person to survey the estate. The instrument, after authorising the survey of the property, went on to say " & upon such survey & valuation I authorise & request you to obtain for me £5,000, by way of mtge.," & then bound A. to certain remuneration:—Held: this instrument was an agreement merely, & did not require a letter of attorney stamp.—TURNER v. JUDD (1848), 11 L. T. O. S. 536; 12 J. P. 555.

53. Appraisement delivered unstamped—Right of valuer to recover remuneration.—To a declaration in debt by an appraiser, for work & materials, etc., it was pleaded, that pltf. did not, within fourteen days after the making of the appraisement, deliver it to pltf., written on vellum, parchment, or paper, duly stamped: plea:—Held: bad on demurrer.—SAUNDERS v. MORGAN (1839), 8 L. J. Q. B. 200.

Part I.—Supply by Local Authorities.

SECT. 1.—DUTIES OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Duty to provide water supply.—See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 299–302; Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 16.

1. Duty to require supply to be obtained—Meaning of house—Partly question of fact.—Whether a lock-up shop is a “house” within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 62, under which the local authority may require a supply of water to be provided for a house which is without such a supply, is to some extent one of fact.

When, therefore, justices had held that such a shop, in which no one was engaged, but the owner, except that his daughter, used the attend during the dinner hour, was not a “house” within the sect.:—Held: on a case stated by the justices, they must be taken to have decided the question as one of fact, & their decision could not therefore be reviewed by the ct.—WOOTTON v. BISHOP (1907), 96 L. T. 705; 71 J. P. 334; 5 L. G. R. 760, D. C.

2. — Lock-up shop.—WOOTTON v. BISHOP, No. 1, ante.

3. — Notice—Sufficiency of service.—In proceeding to recover expenses of supplying water to a house at the owner's expense under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 76, it is not necessary to prove any special resolution of the local board as a condition precedent; & if the notice to do the work was addressed to the owner & given to her rent collector, or agent, who gave it to the owner, who admitted receiving it, this is sufficient evidence of due service of the notice.—CABALLERO v. LEWIS (1874), 38 J. P. 614.

4. — Recovery of expenses—Special resolution not condition precedent.—CABALLERO v. LEWIS, No. 3, ante.

5. — What expenses recoverable—Works executed under Public Health (Water) Act, 1878 (c. 25), s. 3.—(1) By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 62, a local authority may, under certain conditions, require the owner of a house within their district to obtain a supply of water to his house, & in default of his compliance may themselves do the necessary work & recover the expenses from him. By the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878 (c. 25), s. 3, a rural sanitary authority may, where a house within their district has not within a reasonable distance from it a supply of water, & they think that such supply can be brought within a reasonable distance at a cost not exceeding certain specified limits of amount, require the owner to provide such supply within a reasonable distance of his house, & in default of his compliance may themselves execute the necessary works, & recover the costs from him:—Held: sect. 3 of the later Act did not apply to limit the amount of the expenses which the local authority might recover against the owner in proceedings under s. 62 of the earlier Act.

(2) Where, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 62, an owner is required by the local authority to obtain a water supply from an unreasonable distance, the remedy of the owner is by way of appeal to the Local Government Board under sect. 268 of that Act.—WEST LANCASHIRE RURAL COUNCIL v. OGILVY, [1899] 1 Q. B. 377; 68 L. J. Q. B. 215; 80 L. T. 162; 63 J. P. 166; 47 W. R. 363, D. C.

6. — Failure of tenant to execute works—Right to charge rates.—SOUTHEAST WATERWORKS CO. v. HOWARD, No. 49, post.

7. — Effect of Public Health (Water) Act, 1878 (c. 25), s. 3.—Public Health (Water) Act, 1878 (c. 25), s. 3, enables authorities [rural sanitary] to cause houses within their districts to be provided with a supply of water where there is not an available supply within a reasonable distance, & does not apply to cases which come within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 75), s. 62.

Resp. was the owner of nine cottages within the district of the Watford Rural Sanitary Authority, which were supplied with water from a well on the premises. This well was reported by the district medical officer to the sanitary authority to be polluted, & quite unfit for use. The authority thereupon served resp. with a notice, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 62, requiring him to provide a proper supply of water for the cottages. Nothing having been done by resp. to supply the water, the sanitary authority laid on a supply of water to the cottages from the mains of appts. Resp. never in any way acknowledged the right of the sanitary authority to lay on the water, & refused to pay the water rate. Resp. was also the owner of another cottage for which he refused to pay the water rate, which purported to be assessed on the gross rental, & the amount of which was 10s., that being the minimum charge which, by the terms of their special Act, appts. could make:—Held: it was immaterial how the premises had been assessed, as appts. had charged the minimum charge which, by their special Act, they could charge; & also, this being so, there was no dispute as to the annual value of the premises which was required by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 68, to be determined by two justices.—COLNE VALLEY WATER CO. v. TREHARNE (1884), 50 L. T. 617; 48 J. P. 279, D. C.

9. Maintenance of fire plugs—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 66—Liability of local authority—Plugs must be fixed at request of local authority.—Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), impose no obligation on an urban local authority to bear the expense of maintaining in repair the fire plugs in their district unless such fire plugs have been fixed by them or by some water co. or person at their request.—GRAND JUNCTION WATERWORKS CO. v. BRENTFORD LOCAL BOARD, [1894] 2 Q. B. 735; 63 L. J. Q. B. 717; 71 L. T. 240; 59 J. P. 51; 10 T. L. R. 572; 9 R. 788, C. A.

b. Powers of public utilities commission—Whether municipality can be compelled to provide money for scheme of waterworks.—A public utilities commission, elected pursuant to a bye-law of a town council passed under Public Utilities Act, R. S. O. 1914 (c. 204), s. 34, has, by sect. 35 only the powers, authorities, rights & privileges of the council as the same are given to the council by the Act itself, & are authorised to exercise those powers & privileges only if the municipal council

10. — Erection of misleading indication plate—Misfeasance.—By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 66, every urban authority is required to cause fire plugs to be provided & maintained, & to "paint or mark on the buildings & walls within the streets, words or marks near to such fire plugs to denote the situation thereof."

Defts., a local authority, affixed to a wall in a street which was not repairable by the inhabitants at large a plate intended to indicate the position of a fire plug in the water main & marked "F. P. 22 ft. 3 in.," in fact, a line drawn straight from the plate across the street for the required distance crossed the water main at the spot 6 feet 10 inches away from the place where the fire plug was inserted in the main. A fire broke out on pltf.'s premises, which were a short distance from the plug; the fire brigade were quickly in attendance, but there was considerable delay owing to their inability to find the exact position of the fire-plug, as a result of which delay the fire assumed greater dimensions & caused more damage than it would otherwise have done:—Held: in putting up an indication plate which was in fact misleading, defts. were guilty of an act of misfeasance, & not of non-feasance only, & they were therefore liable to pltf.s. for the extra loss caused by the fire as damages for breach of their statutory duty.—DAWSON & Co. v. The provision in sect. 52, requiring notice to be given by the local authority before commencing to "construct waterworks" within the limits of supply of any water co., applies only to "new waterworks" & does not apply to additions or improvements in existing waterworks.

(2) [Sect. 52] must be read together with sect. 51, & its object is to afford protection to waterwork cos. such as pltf. & it may be to benefit the ratepayers (CHITTY, J.).—CLEVELAND WATER CO. v. the comrs. to take the water supply for the township from the corpn., & the comrs. might be restrained by injunction from obtaining the supply elsewhere, & also that the corpn. supplied water for their own profit, & were a "water co." within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 52.—*WOLVERHAMPTON CORPN. v. 17. Meaning of "able & willing"—Necessity for requisite powers & supply of water.]—A waterworks co. is not within the meaning of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 52, able & willing "to supply water within the district of a local authority," unless it has both the necessary powers & the requisite supply of water. Where co. R. had the necessary powers but no water, & co. S. had the requisite supply of water but no powers within the district, & co. R. sold its plant to co. S., & certain members of co. S. bought all the shares in co. R. with the intention of allowing co. S. to exercise the powers of co. R.:—Held: the powers could not be so delegated, & that neither co. was "able & willing" within the meaning of the Act, & neither was entitled to notice under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 75, or Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 52.—*RICHMOND WATERWORKS CO. & SOUTHWARK & VAUXHALL WATERWORKS CO. v. 19. —Company taking steps to supply.]—Under pltf. co.'s special Act of 1891, modifying Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 52, it was, as the ct. construed the provision, unlawful for deft. local board to construct waterworks within pltf.'s limits of supply during four years from the passing of the special Act, so long as pltf. were able & willing to supply water proper & sufficient. Pltf. made some unsuccessful attempts to find water, & before they succeeded in doing so deft. board served them, on May 20, 1893, with notice of the board's desire to supply water within their own district, & their intention of constructing waterworks under the provisions of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55). The notice further stated that, if not informed within a month of pltf.'s ability & willingness the board would construct works. The matter was referred to arbn., but co. becoming aware that the board were still forwarding a scheme of water supply, moved in an action to restrain the board from commencing or threatening to construct works & from proceeding to arbn. The motion stood over on terms to await the award. The arbitrators found that the co. were "able & willing," & that the water was proper & sufficient:—Held: defts. must pay the costs of the action, setting off any costs incurred by defts. by reason of pltf. seeking an injunction to restrain the arbn.—*BOGNOR WATER CO. v. 21. —Enlargement of district by order of county council.]—A local authority with an existing system of waterworks having had an area added to their district by order of a county council, proceeded to lay pipes for the supply of the added area:—Held: this was a "constructing" of waterworks within the meaning of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 52, so that previous notice thereof should have been given to an established water co. whose limits of supply included the added area; & such water co. was entitled to an injunction.—*HUDDESFIELD CORPN. v. 24. Restraint of construction—Arbitration—Questions for arbitrator.]—A local board served a waterworks co. with a notice, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 52, requiring the company to supply each house in their district with water suitable & proper for drinking & ordinary domestic purposes at the rate of not less than 20 gallons per head per day. This not being complied with, the board served the co. with notice of the appointment of an arbitrator under sects. 179 & 180 of the same Act. On the hearing before an umpire the co. attempted to limit the scope of the inquiry to the liability of the co. to supply 20 gallons per head per day, but this was negatived by the umpire. A motion was then made to the ct. to set aside the umpire's award:—Held: the extent to which the board required the water was not one of the matters to be settled by arbn., nor was the reasonableness of the extent one of the matters to be submitted; but the question which was to be submitted was the ability & willingness of the co. to supply water which was proper & sufficient for all reasonable purposes.—Re YEADON LOCAL BOARD & YEADON WATERWORKS CO. (1888), 59 L. C. Purchase of Waterworks.

See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 51.

26. Agreement for purchase—Price—Basis of calculation.]—A water board was constituted by a special Act with the right of supplying water within the boundaries of two boroughs & also certain districts beyond those boundaries; provided that when so required by the sanitary authority of any such outlying district the board should sell to such sanitary authority the mains, pipes, & fittings belonging to the board within that district "at a price to be fixed, in default of agreement, by an arbitrator"; & after such sale the board should cease to supply water within such district.

In an arbn. under this provision between the board & an outlying district:—Held: upon the true construction of the special Act the word "price" meant price, & not compensation; & in fixing the price the basis of calculation should be merely the value of the mains, pipes & fittings regarded as plant in situ capable of earning a profit, & the arbitrator must not include in the price compensation to the board for the loss of the right to supply water within the outlying district.—STOCKTON & MIDDLESBROUGH WATER BOARD v. 27. — Loss of right to exercise option.—An agreement, sanctioned by Act of Parliament, was entered into between two water cos., by which it was agreed that co. A. should take over the works, provide for a mtge. debt, & pay interest upon the shares of co. B. This agreement was sanctioned by Act of Parliament, & the transaction was carried into effect by an indenture of Jan. 1857, which provided that if co. A., or their intended assignees, the corp., or local board of health, being desirous of becoming the absolute & unrestricted owners of the works of co. B., subject only to the mtge. debt, should, "on or before any 25th of Dec., after having given to co. B. six months previous notice of their desire to avail themselves of the option thereby given, pay unto co. B." £46,246, the amount of their share capital, the party so paying should become absolutely entitled to the works. In June, 1870, the corp., who had acquired the interest of co. A., gave notice to co. B. of their intention to pay the £46,246, on Dec. 25, following, but they were unable, from want of funds, to carry out the purchase. In June, 1871, they again gave notice that they would pay the money on Dec. 25, 1871:—Held: the corp. by giving the first notice, & failing to act upon it, had not lost the right given to them by the deed of Jan. 1857, of purchasing, after six months' notice, on or before any 25th day of Dec.—WARD v. WOLVERHAMPTON WATERWORKS CO. (1871), L. R. 13 Eq. 243; 41 L. J. Ch. 308; 25 L. T. 487; 20 W. R. 85.

28. Meaning of "supplying water"—Power to supply coupled with taking steps to supply.—

(1) A local authority that has power, & is taking steps, to supply water, does "supply water" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 54.

(2) Where a local authority has the consent of the local authority of an adjoining district to make sewers, or lay down water mains on land in such adjoining district, they can only do so subject to the provisions of sects. 32, 33, & 34 of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), applicable to such work.—

30. — If on the report of the surveyor it appears necessary—Meaning of necessary.—By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 16, 54, urban local authorities are empowered to carry water mains through, across, or under certain roads, streets, cellars, & vaults, & after giving "notice to the owner or occupier, if, on the report of the surveyor, it appears necessary, into, through or under any lands situate within their district." In Dec. 1887, the surveyor of defts., an urban local authority, died. On Jan. 11, 1888, defts. by resolution appointed P., a civil engineer in their employment, "surveyor to the board until a further permanent surveyor be appointed." On Mar. 21, 1888, P. reported to defts. that it was "desirable & advisable" that their water main should be carried in a particular direction from one point to another, & that it would be "necessary" to lay it through land belonging to pltf., which was within the district. This report was signed, "Your surveyor, P." Four days after its date X. was duly appointed surveyor to defts., & P., who was a candidate for the office, was retained in their service as waterworks engineer. The report of Mar. 21, was considered & adopted by the board Apr. 11, 1888, & in the following month a notice in pursuance thereof was served on pltf. that defts. intended to carry their main through a part of his lands. Upon motion made in an action by pltf. for an injunction to restrain defts. from so doing:—Held: (1) the word "necessary" must be construed as meaning "necessary for the efficient discharge of the duty in the way most for the benefit of the public" (2) upon the words of sect. 16 of the Act the person to determine the necessity was the surveyor; & if the ct. found that he had exercised his judgment & come to a conclusion in good faith, the ct. ought not to interfere, even although other courses were shown to be practicable by which the entry on private lands might be avoided; (3) "the surveyor" mentioned in sect. 16 must, in the case of an urban authority, be the fit & proper person duly appointed to be surveyor under sect. 189 of the Act, & no other; & P. was not "the surveyor" of defts. within the meaning of sects. 16 & 189; & as the report on which the proceedings of defts. was founded was not the report of "the surveyor," pltf. was entitled to an interlocutory injunction.—LEWIS v. 34. Laying pipes in private road—Necessity for consent of owner—Where local authority have not control of streets—Must be absence of general control.—(1) Pltf. was the owner of a private road in the W. district. Defts. were the urban sanitary authority of the district, & had the control of the streets generally in that district, & also the power of supplying the inhabitants with water. Defts. commenced, without pltf.'s consent, to break up his private road for the purpose of laying down water-mains. Pltf. brought an action for an injunction:—Held: the words "where the local authority have not the control of the streets," in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 57, which forbids the laying down of pipes in any private road without the consent of the owner, were descriptive of a local authority who had not the control generally of the streets in their district, & had no application to defts., & defts. had power under sects. 16 & 54 of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), to lay down pipes in pltf.'s private road without his consent, making him proper compensation under sect. 308 of the same Act.

35. ——— Meaning of street.—HILL v. WALLASEY LOCAL BOARD, No. 34, ante.

36. ————By Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15), s. 6, a local authority may in effect lay down gas pipes in streets, but by sect. 7, if in any land not dedicated to public use, only subject to the consent of the owners or occupiers thereof. This in effect is not confined to that which is a street, but extends to all lands not dedicated to the public, provided the required consent is obtained. A country road with bungalow residences abutting thereon, but over which there existed no public right of way, might fairly be said to come within the description of "street" within the definition of "street" in Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15).

Therefore, where a local authority with the consent of the owners laid gas pipes along such a road, formerly purely agricultural, it was held that they were within their statutory rights, & the same will apply to the laying of water pipes by virtue of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 28, 29, which are in almost identical language as Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15), ss. 6, 7.

Further, also, where the local authority in question had under their special Act power, upon the application of the owner or occupier of premises within their water area abutting on any street laid out but not dedicated to public use, to supply such premises with water & to lay down pipes for furnishing such supply, the physical conditions of the land must govern, & it is not necessary whenever an application is made to such local authority for a supply of water, on the footing that appt. has premises abutting on the street laid out but not dedicated to public use, for the local authority to go into the title of each appt. to see whether in law he had adequate rights of way over the "street laid out but not dedicated to public use" as a means of access to his house.

Therefore such a road as mentioned above may be a street laid out though not dedicated to the public within the sect.; & the corp. having complied with the terms thereof, the sect. applies.—DAVIES v. RIFON CORPN., [1928] Ch. 884; 97 L. J. Ch. 479; 139 L. T. 636; 92 J. P. 153; 26 L. G. R. 530.

In 1911 def. having become the owner, altered & enlarged the farmhouse into a residential mansion with a garage for motor cars at the farm buildings, & claimed under the covenant to have a free supply of water to the house & the farm buildings, & to use the water from the standpipe to wash his motor cars. It was conceded that the covenant ran with the land:—Held: (1) the covenant was to supply a farmhouse, & the C. Farm having ceased to be a farmhouse, the covenant as to the farmhouse was discharged; (2) the covenant was severable, & was not discharged as to the farm buildings which were substantially unaltered; (3) the owner was not entitled to use the water free of charge for his building operations at the farmhouse, nor for washing his motor cars at the farm buildings.—*HADHAM RURAL COUNCIL v. The co. also promoted a bill in parliament to obtain further time for the constant supply, which the corp. opposed; & it was ultimately withdrawn. The town council made two orders for the payment out of the borough fund of the expenses of the opposition before the justices & in parliament respectively, which were paid, notwithstanding objection that the orders were ultra vires. There was no surplus from property of the corporation, & borough rates were made. On a rule for a certiorari, under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44, to bring up these orders for the purpose of quashing them:—Held: assuming the objects for which the expenses were incurred to be for the public benefit of the inhabitants of the borough, yet they were not within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 78, s. 92, as “expenses necessarily incurred in carrying into effect the provisions of the Act”; & they could not come within the clause which enabled the town council to apply the funds “for the public benefit of the inhabitants of the borough,” as there was no surplus.

I cannot help thinking that the corp. acted with perfect bona fides in the opposition to the bill, & in the proposal to bring in a bill of their own to meet that, & also in opposing the rules & regulations proposed by the water co., in the genuine belief that they were acting for the benefit of the inhabitants; & as, I understand, the result shows that they were so acting. Therefore, if they had any funds applicable, to such a purpose, I should have thought this was a very proper application of them. But I have no doubt at all, in a case like this, where the corp. had no property & no surplus, where they had to make a borough rate in order to levy the funds necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act, that they could not charge these expenses to the corp. fund (LUSH, J.).—*R. v. m. What water rate may include.]—A water rate imposed, under Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878 (c. 52), s. 66, on voluntary consumers of water, being in fact the price of the water supplied, necessarily has relation to the cost of production as well as of maintenance of the water supply. 47. Amount of charge—Sufficient to maintain waterworks.]—Where land is used for a public purpose, & the occupiers thereof are prevented by statute from deriving the full pecuniary benefit which it is capable of producing, the land is to be rated to the poor with reference to the amount of profit actually made, & not with reference to the amount which might be earned by the occupiers if they were not subject to restrictions. The Local Board of Health for W. erected & occupied works for the purpose of supplying the inhabitants thereof with water. The works were situate within the parish of C. In order to benefit the inhabitants of W. the local board made the scale of charges so low, as to leave a profit far less than would have accrued to a co. carrying on the works as a commercial undertaking. In adopting the scale of charges above mentioned, the local board intended to carry out those provisions of Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), the object of which was to insure a supply of water at a low price for sanitary purposes. The assessment committee of the D. union, within which the parish of C. was situate, by a valuation list assessed the local board at a rateable value of £1,400, based upon the amount which might have been earned by a trading co. carrying on the waterworks for their own benefit; the local board claimed to be assessed at a rateable value of £540, based upon the profit actually earned by them.—Held: the assessment of £1,400 was wrong, & the local board were liable to be assessed at £540 only; for, under the provisions of Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), they could not make rates of an amount more than sufficient to enable them to maintain the waterworks, & they could be lawfully assessed only with reference to profit actually earned.—*WORCESTER CORPN. v. 48. — Supply to contributory area—Discretion of council.—A rural district council provided a water supply to part of a contributory place. On the petition of certain ratepayers under Public Health (Water) Act, 1878 (c. 25), s. 10, the council imposed water rates & water rents upon those liable to such rates & rents under sect. 9 of that Act. These rates & rents, however, were limited to the extent of providing for the cost of maintaining the supply, not of providing for the repayment of the capital expenditure upon the construction of the works.—Held: the council had a discretion to fix the water rates & water rents as they pleased. The whole cost of providing & maintaining the water supply, whether the supply extended to the whole or only part of the contributory place, was a special expense within sect. 229 of Public Health Act 1875 (c. 55), & as such charged on the whole contributory district, & the actual consumers were liable only for such part of such expense as the council thought just.—HORN v. SLEAFORD RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1898] 2 Q. B. 358; 67 L. J. Q. B. 724; 78 L. T. 722; 62 J. P. 502; 46 W. R. 555, D. C.

49. Enforcement of payment—Notice requiring supply to be obtained—Whether execution of works condition precedent to recovery.—A local authority caused a supply of water to be brought in main water pipes along the street in which a house was situate, & gave notice to the owner of the house, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 62, to obtain a proper supply & do all such works as might be necessary for that purpose. That notice was not complied with, & the local authority did not exercise the power given to them by that sect. of executing the works necessary to connect the house with the main. In an action by the water co. for water rates:—Held: deft. was liable, & it was not a condition precedent to such liability that the works necessary to bring the water into the house should have been executed.—*SOUTHERN WATERWORKS CO. v. exceeding £20, made by an urban authority for water supplied to premises within their district, may be enforced by summary proceedings before justices; & by s. 11 of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), where no time for making a complaint or laying an information is specially limited in the Act or Acts relating to each particular case, "such complaint shall be made & such information shall be laid within six calendar months from the time when the matter of such complaint or information respectively arose." By s. 256 of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), "if any person assessed to any rate made under this Act by any urban authority fails to pay the same when due & for the space of fourteen days after the same has been lawfully demanded in writing," he may be summoned to appear before a ct. of summary jurisdiction, who may make an order for payment against him.

Appls. having failed to pay within fourteen days after demand in writing a sum claimed by an urban authority as the amount due for a water rate, the urban authority, within six calendar months after the expiration of the fourteen days, made a complaint & took out a summons under sect. 256 to enforce payment:—Held: (1) the water rate was a "rate made under this Act" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 256; (2) the matter of the complaint arose when appls. failed to pay the amount claimed within fourteen days from the demand, & therefore the complaint was made within the time limited by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11.—*ELLIOTT v. SECT. 1.—CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE OF WATERWORKS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF UNDERTAKERS.

A. In General.

See Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 6–34.

61. Application of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17)—Depends on incorporation in special Act.—(1) Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 12, enacts that subject to the provisions & restrictions of the principal & special Acts, the undertakers may sink wells or shafts, & make, maintain, etc., such reservoirs, waterworks, etc., & other works, & erect such buildings upon the lands & streams authorised to be taken by them as they shall deem necessary for the purposes of their undertaking, & that they may take such waters as they may find in & under or on the lands to be taken for constructing the works.

A special Act authorised a co. to make the works thereafter described in the line & situation, & on the levels & upon the lands defined by the plans & sections & book of reference, & to enter upon, take, purchase & use such of the lands, streams & waters mentioned in the plans & book of reference as they might deem necessary for all or any of those purposes, & by a subsequent sect. they were empowered to make an aqueduct, constructed in tunnel or otherwise, as shown on the plans commencing, etc. On the plans & sections a field was exhibited as passed through by a tunnel, & in the Parliamentary notice served upon the landowner the mode in which the field would be affected was said to be by a tunnel:—Held: the co. were not entitled to sink wells or erect pumps on the land, or to deal with it otherwise than by driving a tunnel through it.

(2) Semble: Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 12, applies only where the undertakers are by the special Act authorised to construct waterworks, eo nomine.—SIMPSON v. SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE WATERWORKS CO. (1865), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 679; 6 New Rep. 184, 279; 34 L. J. Ch. 380; 12 L. T. 360; 11 Jur. N. S. 453; 13 W. R. 729; 46 E. R. 1082, L. C.

62. — — — — —. — (1) The owners & occupiers of certain workhouses within the limits defined by sect. 68 of the co.'s special Act claimed the right to a supply of water to their workhouses for domestic purposes at the rents prescribed in that sect.:—Held: upon the construction of sect. 68 of the special Act, in conjunction with Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 53, the right to demand a supply of water for domestic purposes was limited to private dwelling-houses, & the claim failed.

(2) The object of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), sometimes referred to as the general Act, was, as appears from the preamble, to avoid the necessity of repeating in Acts of Parliament which authorise the construction of waterworks for supplying towns with water, sometimes referred to as special Acts, certain provisions usually inserted in such Acts & to insure greater uniformity in the provisions themselves. The general Act has no application unless & until it be incorporated in some special Act. If so incorporated, all its clauses save so far as they are expressly varied or excepted by the special Act are to be & form part of such last-mentioned Act & to be construed therewith as forming one Act. It follows that the meaning & effect to be given in each case to the clauses of the general Act, even though there be no express variation or exception, must depend, to some extent at any rate, on the provisions of the special Act, & cannot be determined without reference to such provisions (LORD PARKER OF WADDINGTON).—BRISTOL GUARDIANS v. BRISTOL WATERWORKS CO., [1914] A. C. 379; 83 L. J. Ch. 393; 110 L. T. 846; 78 J. P. 217; 30 T. L. R. 296; 58 Sol. Jo. 318; 12 L. G. R. 261, II. L.

63. Power to erect works—Duty to comply with bye-laws.—A water co. by their special Act, passed in 1897, & incorporating Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), were empowered to erect & maintain a water tower in a specified place. Shortly after the special Act came into force the local sanitary authority of the district under the powers given by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 157, made bye-laws providing that any person intending to erect a building should give the local authority notice of his intention & of the date on which the building was to be commenced, & deliver to them plans & sections of it, & a description of the materials with which it was to be constructed. The special Act did not incorporate Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), but contained no provisions inconsistent with sect. 157 of that Act or with the bye-laws:—Held: with respect to the erection of the water tower authorised by the special Act, Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 93, had not the effect of exempting the water co. from the provisions of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & they were bound to comply with the bye-laws made by the local sanitary authority under that Act.—UCKFIELD RURAL COUNCIL v. CROWBOROUGH DISTRICT WATER CO., [1899] 2 Q. B. 664; 68 L. J. Q. B. 1009; 81 L. T. 539; 48 W. R. 63; 16 T. L. R. 3; 44 Sol. Jo. 12, D. C.

64. — On additional lands acquired.—A water co. incorporated by a special Act for the purposes of making & maintaining the waterworks thereby limited & defined, & for supplying water within the limits of the Act & for carrying on the business usually carried on by water cos., was empowered, in addition to the lands authorised to be taken compulsorily, to acquire by agreement & hold for the general purposes of its undertaking any lands within its limits of supply not exceeding a certain acreage, provided that no buildings should be erected thereon except such as were required for the purposes of the co.'s waterworks. Under this power the co. purchased land some distance away from its waterworks & proposed to sink a well & erect a pumping station thereon for the purpose of tapping a new water supply & pumping the water into an existing reservoir constructed under the powers of the Act:—Held: that the power to purchase additional land was only for purposes ancillary to the main purpose of the co., which was to supply water within its limits of supply by its statutory waterworks, & the proposed works were ultra vires.—A.-G. v. FRIMLEY & FARNBOROUGH DISTRICT WATER CO., [1908] 1 Ch. 727; 77 L. J. Ch. 442; 98 L. T. 905; 72 J. P. 204; 24 T. L. R. 473; 6 L. G. R. 689, C. A.

67. — — — — — Where power given by special Act.—A water co. had power under their special Act to buy additional land anywhere within their limits of supply & on such land "execute for the purposes of or in connection with the waterworks any of the works, & exercise any of the powers mentioned in or conferred by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 12." The co., under the powers of their special Act, bought land & proceeded to sink a well at a distance of some miles from their reservoir for the purpose of supplying water to it:—Held: they were not exceeding their powers in so doing.—A.-G. v. BARNET DISTRICT GAS & WATER CO. (1910), 102 L. T. 546; 74 J. P. 193; 54 Sol. Jo. 457; 8 L. G. R. 499, H. L.

— Duty to observe building line.—See HIGHWAYS, Vol. XXVI., p. 560, No. 2548.

68. Power to extend works—Application to Parliament—Validity of contract for supply of plans—Employment of engineer.—A co. was incorporated by Act of Parliament for the supply of a certain district with water from certain sources within that district; & empowered to break up highways & place pipes within the district, & to do all other acts which the co. should deem necessary for supplying water to the inhabitants according to the true intent of the Act, & penalties were imposed on the co. not supplying water to the inhabitants of dwelling-houses within the district. The members of the co. were entitled to the net profits to be divided amongst them, except the surplus above 7 per cent., which was to go in the reduction of the water rents. In consequence of the increase of population the supply of water within the district became insufficient both in quantity & quality. The co. employed an engineer, who reported that a sufficient supply could not be obtained from existing sources, & recommended that a supply should be obtained from a brook beyond the district, which would be sufficient not only for the district but also for some adjoining populous villages. The co. then determined to apply to Parliament for powers to enlarge their works so as to make the brook available for the entire district which it was capable of supplying, & to increase their capital from £15,000 to £90,000:—Held: the co. might lawfully take steps to apply to Parliament for such extension of the undertaking, it being for the benefit of the corporate body; & that the contracts made by the co. for the supply of plans, etc., essential to the application to Parliament, were not necessarily illegal or void, or otherwise incapable of being enforced against the co. in a ct. of law.—*BATEMAN v. 72. Rights under agreement with railway company—Main constructed under railway.]—A proviso in an agreement between a water co. & a railway co. with regard to the rights of each as to a main constructed by the water co. underneath & across the railway of the railway co., that "nothing in these presents contained shall be deemed to preclude the railway co. in any way from altering adding to or widening their railway & works from time to time under their existing powers or from otherwise using or enjoying their lands for the purposes of their railway & undertaking without being liable to compensate the board, water co., for any damage or injury which may be occasioned thereby to the works of the board unless such damage or injury shall be occasioned by any wilful act or default of the railway co." is a proviso which deals with the result of acts & defaults not primæ facie disturbances of pliffs' rights, & on its true construction operates only to relieve defendants from liability for damages in respect of physical injury to the works resulting from such "acts or defaults" where such "acts or defaults" have not been wilful. Defendants held not entitled to substantially diminish the reasonable access of pliffs. to their main for the purposes of inspection & repair.—*METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. LONDON & NORTH-EASTERN RY. B. Acquisition of Land and Streams.

(a) In General.

See Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 6, 12; & generally, COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND, Vol. XI., pp. 93 et seq.

73. "Taking & using"—Distinguished from "injuriously affected."]—The clauses of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), are applicable to "lands & streams," in the same manner as those of Lands Clauses Consolidation Act are applicable to "lands"; & in the mode of compensation, the same distinction is taken between "lands & streams taken & used" & "lands & streams injuriously affected."

The diversion of a stream is a "taking & using it" within Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 85, which is incorporated in Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), & before such diversion can be made, the value of the stream must be ascertained & secured to the owners of the land through which it passes.

75. Effect of subsequent Act—On powers exercised under previous Act.]—By their special Act the Bristol Waterworks co. had power to take water from the river Chew on paying compensation for it; but sect. 30 enacted that it should not be lawful for the co. to divert, or take, or in any manner interfere with the water flowing, or passing, or which, but for the powers of this Act, might flow or pass into the river Chew, unless & until water, after the rate of 12 cubic feet per second, for twelve hours of each & every day should be passing down the river from & out of certain reservoirs for the use of mills. By a subsequent Act it was provided that nothing in that Act or in the former Act, should extend to authorise the co. to purchase, take, use or interfere with any land, soil, or water, or any rights in respect thereof, belonging to the Duke of Cornwall without his consent testified in writing under his privy seal:—Held: the co. did not, by the exercise of the powers conferred by the first Act, acquire any right as against the Duke of Cornwall to the water of the

77. Duty to make compensation—Whole value of interest.]—Under a local Waterworks Act, which incorporated Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 18), & Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), defts. were empowered to take, use, divert & appropriate certain streams, & amongst others a stream necessary for the working of a mill of which pltf. was tenant for life. Defts. gave pltf. notice of their intention to take the whole of the stream, but actually diverted only a portion of it; & afterwards, by an agreement purporting to be made under the special Act, pltf. & defts. nominated two practical surveyors to determine the amount of compensation to be then paid by defts. for the damage which the owner or owners for the time being of the mill might sustain by the abstraction of the whole of the stream which defts. were authorised to take. The two surveyors did not agree on a valuation, & accordingly a third surveyor was nominated by two justices under Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 9, on the application of defts., & with the consent of pltf., to determine the amount of compensation for the damage to the mill, & he awarded the sum of £939 for compensation for the permanent damage to the owners of the mill from the abstraction of the whole of the stream. To a statement of claim alleging the above facts, defts. demurred, on the ground that they had no power to agree to make compensation for the abstraction of the whole stream, but only for such damage as was done to the owner of the mill from time to time:—Held: defts. had power under their Act to purchase & divert the whole stream, & having given notice to pltf. of their intention to do so, they were bound & empowered to make compensation at once for the whole value of the interest of the owners of the mill in the stream, & not merely to compensate them from time to time for injuriously affecting the property.—*STONE v. A. then brought an action for the £2,500 & the co. filed a bill for specific performance of his agreement & for an injunction to restrain the action:—Held: the co. were entitled to the injunction on bringing the money into ct. to abide the decision of the conflicting claims for compensation.—*STOCKPORT DISTRICT WATERWORKS CO. v. The Act provided that defts. should not divert any of the waters of the river E. until the reservoir should be completed & filled, & water discharged therefrom in the quantity provided, & that, except as provided for, the rights of mill owners should not be prejudiced. Defts. diverted a part of the waters of the river E., but from engineering difficulties the reservoir was not completed so as to be capable of being filled with water:—Held: the mill owners on the river E. could not maintain an action for the non-supply of the statutable amount of water from the reservoir, but were confined to an action for damages occasioned by the wrongful diversion of the natural supply before the completion of the reservoir.—*WALLER v. into a certain brook as compensation water a regular supply of water not less than a specified minimum quantity during every twenty-four hours, & the Act provided that if the co. omitted or failed to deliver into the brook the minimum quantity of compensation water, they should be liable to "a penalty of £5 a day" for every day during which such failure occurred, "such penalty to be recoverable summarily," by the party or parties interested in the delivery of such water, before two justices "in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts," & to be payable to the party or parties interested.

Upon an information against the co. for failing to deliver the minimum quantity of compensation water into the brook, the justices convicted, but reduced the penalty of £5 to 1s. a day:—Held: (1) the £5 a day was not compensation for the failure to send down the proper compensation water, but was a penalty for the breach of the statutory obligation imposed on the co., & the justices had power to reduce the same under sect. 4 or sect. 16 of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49); (2) the fact that the whole of the works as shown on the deposited plans had not been completed did not prevent the co. from being liable for their failure to deliver into the brook the compensation water, as the words "from & after the completion of the works" were satisfied by the completion of the works in reference to the brook in question & the taking of the water from that brook.—*COOKE v. 83. — Duty to use all reasonable care.]—Defts. were empowered by a local Act of Parliament to construct & maintain certain waterworks & to appropriate certain streams & waters. The Act provided that as compensation for the taking of the water from a certain dike defts. should cause to flow from a reservoir into such dike a specified quantity of water per minute during every lawful working day; & further provided that in case of neglect on the part of defts. by, or in consequence of, which the specified quantity of water should not so flow, defts. should for every day on which such neglect should occur forfeit & pay to the occupiers of each of the mills & works affected thereby the sum of £5, & should, in addition make compensation for loss, damage or injury sustained by such occupiers in respect of which such penalties should be insufficient compensation. Pltfs., who were eight mill occupiers, alleged that by reason of the neglect of defts., the specified quantity of water did not flow into such dike for a period including forty-three working days, & each pltf. claimed £215, the amount of the penalties of £5 per day for forty-three days. At the trial of the action pltfs. proved that there was sufficient water in the reservoir to enable defts. to send down the statutory quantity, & that the pipes if not defective were sufficient in size to send down that quantity. It was further proved that such pipes require care & attention from time to time, but that defts. pipes had not been inspected for a period of thirty years:—Held: (1) defts. were under an obligation to use all reasonable care to send down the statutory quantity of water, & the evidence given by pltfs. established a prima facie case of neglect & case upon defts. the burden of proving that they had used reasonable care; (2) in case of neglect defts. were liable to pay a sum of £5 per day to each of the occupiers of the mills or works affected by such neglect, & therefore each of pltfs. was entitled to recover the amount claimed.—BEAUMONT v. HUDDERSFIELD CORPN. (1902), 67 J. P. 57; 19 T. L. R. 97; 47 Sol. Jo. 127; 1 L. G. R. 118, C. A.

84. — To owners & occupiers of specified works—Effect of abandonment of works.]—By section of a local Act, "the owners, lessees, & occupiers" of certain furnaces were permitted to take along an existing watercourse from a stream which was being acquired by the local authority, compensation water not exceeding a specified quantity in "any working day." At the time of the passing of the Act, a co. held the furnaces on lease from pltf., as tenant for life of certain settled lands, & carried on business there. The watercourse was some two miles long, & part of its course lay over lands, other than the settled lands, & the co. paid rent for wayleaves over these lands. In 1890, the co. ceased to use the furnaces, & in 1895 they gave up the wayleaves. In 1898 pltf. assented to the dismantling of the co.'s works. In the meanwhile, the watercourse had been allowed to get into disrepair, & as from 1895 or 1896 water entering it from the stream escaped by breaches in it, & was lost before reaching the site of the furnaces. In 1900, defts. diverted the stream so as to prevent any water entering the watercourse, & thereupon pltf. brought this action for a declaration as to his right to the water, & for an injunction against defts. accordingly:—Held: (1) the construction of the sect. that the right to water under it did not depend on the continuance of works at the furnaces, & pltf., as tenant for life of the site of the furnaces, was entitled to a supply of water to that site, as provided by the sect.; (2) an abandonment of the right conferred by the sect. was not proved by showing that no use had been made of the water during a period when it happened not to be wanted; (3) no injunction could be granted at the present time, because pltf. had so far suffered no damage from the act of defts. in diverting the stream.

(4) The words "working day," which are words used in that sect., mean the days upon which you may work, & not the days on which you do work, & mean, therefore, the six working days of the week, that is, the days of the week other than Sunday (NEVILLE, J.).—*HANBURY v. 90. ——— Jurisdiction of High Court.]—Under a local water Act a corp'n. were bound to supply certain compensation water as compensation for the waters taken by them for the purposes of the Act, & in case of neglect to supply such compensation water they were for every day on which such neglect occurred to "forfeit & pay to the occupiers of each of the mills & works affected thereby, who may sue for & recover the same, the sum of five pounds" & were also to make compensation for any loss sustained by such occupiers in respect of which the penalties were not a sufficient compensation, & such compensation might be sued for in any ct. of competent jurisdiction.

Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 145, which was incorporated in the local Act, provides that every penalty or forfeiture, the recovery of which is not otherwise provided for may be recovered by summary proceeding before two justices:—Held: the £5 penalties imposed by the local Act were intended in the main to be a mode of compensation to the injured occupiers of the mills, & therefore the mode of recovering penalties which was prescribed in Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 145, did not apply & an action to recover the penalties was rightly brought in the High Ct.—*MELTHAM SPINNING CO., LTD. v. Pollution of compensation water.—Liability of undertakers.]—Riparian proprietors are entitled except so far as their rights are varied by statute or special circumstances, to require that nothing shall be done to affect to their prejudice either the quantity or the quality of the stream as it flows in a natural state; & when an Act of Parliament authorises interference with the natural flow, the original rights of the riparian proprietors are impaired only so far as the reasonable exercise of the statutory rights impairs them.

But where a water co. was empowered by Act of Parliament to construct a reservoir on a stream in order to supply a town with water, & the Act provided that a fixed amount of compensation water should be allowed to flow from the reservoir for the benefit of the riparian proprietors lower down the stream:—Held: in the absence of negligence, the water co. was not liable for damage caused by the pollution of the compensation water from accidental causes.—EDINBURGH WATER TRUSTEES v. SOMMERVILLE & SON (1906), 95 L. T. 217, H. L.

93. Right to break up street.]—An Act passed in 1740, enabling S., lord of the manor of F., his heirs & assigns, at their costs, to convey water in pipes from his estate there to Portsmouth, & through the streets, & for that purpose to break up the pavement, making good same again, is not repealed by the Act of 1792, passed above 50 years afterwards, vesting the property & control of the pavement in comrs., without exception of the former right; the two Acts not being inconsistent, but giving the several powers to be exercised for different purposes; & the waterworks, etc., together with the powers under the first Act, may be afterwards executed by the assigns of S., to whom same, apart from the manor, were conveyed by mesne assignments; though such powers had lain dormant since 7 years after the passing of the Act till 1809. But if S.'s assigns break up the pavement for the purpose of executing the powers reserved to them, without restoring it again, they are amenable either by indictment, or by action, for the injury done to the property of the comrs.—*GOLDSON v. 94. ——— What works included.—Stop valves & guard boxes.]—The power given by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 28, includes any works which the undertakers may deem necessary for the purpose of regulating the supply of water, & is not confined to the laying down of apparatus underground, but enables the undertakers to place such works on the surface of the street, as may not be inconsistent with the substantial reinstatement of the road or pavement in its previous condition or create a nuisance; & a water co. is authorised by the sect. to place in the pavement of a street covers or guard boxes to protect stop valves placed for the purpose of regulating the supply of water in the communication pipes, by which water was supplied to premises in the street, such covers or guard boxes not creating a nuisance or being inconsistent with the substantial reinstatement of the pavement.—*EAST LONDON WATERWORKS CO. v. 106. ——— In lieu of injunction—Encroachment beyond lands acquired—Measure of damages.—Deft. corp., in course of constructing a reservoir at a depth of 123 feet below the surface inadvertently carried a heading 18 feet by 6 feet for a distance of 42 feet beyond their own boundary into pltf.'s land. The excavation was made for the purpose of stopping a fissure in the soil, which might have caused a leak in the reservoir, & it was filled up with concrete & brickwork, the surface of pltf.'s land being in no way interfered with. Pltfs. claimed a mandatory order against defts. to restore the land to its former condition. The cost of doing this would have amounted to £1,000. Before action defts. offered to pay £100 by way of damages, & before delivery of the defence paid £10 into ct.—Held: having regard to the authority of Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, the ct. had a discretion to give damages in lieu of an injunction; this was a case for damages, & the proper amount to be awarded was £100. It is not laid down as a rule in Mayfair Property Co. v. Johnston, [1894] 1 Ch. 508, that the measure of damages in such a case is the amount which it would cost to restore the land to its former condition.—RILEY v. HALIFAX CORPN. (1907), 97 L. 107. Right to compensation—Value of water enhanced—Validity of arbitrator's award.—Applt. granted to D. certain mills on a stream forming the outlet to two lochs nearly surrounded by his property, with his "whole rights of water & water power connected with the mills"; "reserving" all his "rights in the lochs" & stream "except the rights therein connected with the mills." The storage capacity of the lochs had been increased by embankments made within applt.'s ground. Resps., who were waterworks comrs. under a special Act, acquired by agreements the rights of D. in the water, & under their compulsory powers took from applt. a small piece of ground & a wayleave for a pipe, which they inserted in the stream & diverted the waters of the lochs to supply a town. Sect. 9 of the special Act provided that a certain quantity of water sent down the stream daily should be held to be a sufficient compensation to the mill owners & others. Sect. 10 reserved (inter alia) any rights applt. had in Loch Humphrey. In a claim for compensation the arbitrator found applt. entitled (a) to £50 for the land & wayleave; & (b) "in the event of it being determined that applt. had retained any right or interest in the waters of the lochs & the streams or any of them, & that he is now entitled to compensation in respect of such right or interest, I find £3,000 to be the amount to be paid" in respect of the right or interest to be acquired from applt. "in the foresaid waters & the embankments" at the lochs, "including in the said sum of £3,000 the sum of £1,650 as the estimated price or value of the embankments":—Held: the award was valid, inasmuch as the arbitrator had valued only one thing, the enhanced value of the water in the lochs, & had not valued, as a separate subject, the embankments, but had properly included in the £3,000, as a factor of value, the incidental right obtained by resps. to have the embankments left standing.—BLANTYRE (LORD) v. BARTIE (1888), 13 App. Cas. 631, H. L.

By the authorised pumping operations, after the completion of the works, a bed of wet running silt which lay directly under, & formed the support of, pltf.'s land was drawn away, & its abstraction caused a subsidence of pltf.'s house. Pltf. claimed compensation for injurious affection, & in the arbn. proceedings the umpire made an award in his favour. In an action on the award:—Held: pltf. was entitled to compensation by above sects., as being a person injuriously affected by the supplying & the maintenance, if not also by the construction, of the waterworks.—*FLETCHER v. Sect. 1.—Construction and maintenance of water-works: Sub-sect. 2, A., B., C. & D.]

promoters of a public undertaking have authority from Parliament to interfere with private property on certain terms, any person whose property is interfered with by virtue of that authority has a right to require that the promoters shall comply with the letter of the enactment so far as it makes provision on his behalf. Nor can any ct. remodel arrangements sanctioned, or relax conditions imposed, by Act of Parliament.

Deviation, in its ordinary & natural sense & as used in Acts of Parliament, means shifting the work in its integrity from one site to another which may be deemed more suitable. It does not imply a right not only to alter the situation of the work but in doing so to dispense with a half or two-thirds of it.

A local & personal Act empowered comrs. to take water from a river for the supply of a township on condition of their executing certain works & (inter alia) a reservoir to supply compensation water to mill owners, & a conduit, the reservoir to be constructed by an embankment across the river. The Act & the relative plans & sections described the position of the reservoir, its contour & capacity, & the height of the embankment, & provided that in constructing the authorised works the comrs. might subject to the provisions of the Act deviate from the lines of the works to any extent not exceeding the limits of lateral deviation shown on the deposited plans, & from the levels shown on the deposited sections, in the case of the reservoir to any extent of lesser height which would enable the comrs. to give a sufficient supply of water for compensation purposes; but the comrs. should not in the exercise of the power of lateral deviation thereby given construct any embankment or wall of any reservoir of a greater height above the general surface of the ground than that shown on the plans with reference to the corresponding embankment or wall & 6 feet in addition.

In constructing the reservoir the comrs. curtailed it by more than one-third of its length & nearly two-thirds of its capacity, & placed the embankment higher up the river than the point fixed by the Act, & so that the capacity could not be enlarged in the event of the supply of compensation water proving insufficient. In constructing the conduit the comrs. disregarded in material points the directions of the Act as to the course & serviceableness of the conduit & constructed a conduit which they alleged was "a substantial equivalent" to the mill owners. The mill owners having brought an action against the comrs.:—Held: though no actual damage was proved the mill owners were entitled to a declaration that the reservoir & conduit were not in accordance with the provisions of the Act, & to an injunction restraining the comrs. from taking or using the waters of the river or from interfering with the flow of the river otherwise than as authorised by the Act.—*HERRON v. Right to damages.]—The provisional committee of a waterworks co. agreed with pltf., on his withdrawing his opposition to their bill in Parliament, to purchase lands for the works at a fixed sum per acre, including damage for severance, & in addition to pay for any damage pltf. should sustain from the water of the co. being near his house or buildings, & also to make good to pltf. or his tenants all loss or damage which the erection of the intended works might cause to any property belonging to or in the occupation of him or them which the co. might not purchase, except damage occasioned by severance, whether caused by the order or neglect of the co.; the damage in all these cases to be assessed by certain persons named as arbitrators. The local Act was obtained & it incorporated Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), & the purchase-money was paid, & the compensation money under the above heads was ascertained by the arbitrators & paid to pltf. Pltf. subsequently brought an action against the co. claiming damages for taking so little care of a reservoir that the water oozed out over pltf.'s land, causing offensive smells & vapours, & rendering his buildings damp & unwholesome, & permanently injuring their value, & for obstructing a drain & thereby penning back the sewerage of pltf.'s house so that it could not flow away by means of the drains as it ought; & further that by reason of the making of deft.'s reservoir & works authorised to be made by their Act, a drain whereby pltf.'s adjoining house & lands were drained, was interrupted & rendered useless, & defts. neglected to substitute another drain according to their duty, whereby pltf.'s house & lands were insufficiently drained; & also for cutting a channel across, & thereby, & also by means of deft.'s reservoir & works, depriving pltf. of the use of an agricultural road forming a communication between lands of pltf., & for not substituting another road in lieu of it; & also by the reservoir & works obstructing a public footpath & depriving pltf. of the use of it, & thereby causing him particular damage & inconvenience:—Held: (1) the action was maintainable, the damages claimed not being those directed by Act of Parlia-

BRISTOL WATERWORKS CO.* (1856), 1 H. & N. 369; 26 L. J. Ex. 57; 156 E. R. 1245.

Annotation:—Generally, Mend. Goldsmid v. Hampton (1858), 27 L. J. C. P. 286.

116. — Negligence of undertakers.]—A local Act of Parliament incorporated certain persons for the purpose of securing a regular & proper supply of water to millowners whose works were situated on the banks of the river B. These persons had powers given them to collect the waters of several small streams into a reservoir, & as often as necessary, to send down those waters to the B. through the channel of a stream called M. The 2nd clause of the Act directed them to "make, erect, construct, maintain, repair, & keep," by means of a reservoir, a due & adequate supply of water for the river B. at all seasons of the year, & to enter on the lands of the different streams named, to do what was necessary for the conveyance & due regulation of the supply of such waters, & "to make, erect, alter, maintain, repair, widen, deepen, scour, cleanse, & keep proper & sufficient conduits, aqueducts, channels & watercourses, drains, feeders, weirs, dams," &c. The 82nd clause gave similar directions, & ordered that the surplus water should be returned into the different streams from which it had been taken, & also made provisions for supplying with water the cattle depasturing in fields adjoining. The persons incorporated under the Act erected the reservoir, collected the waters of the different streams, & sent them through the channel of the M. to supply the B., but, after a time, neglected to cleanse the channel of the M., so that at times it overflowed its banks & did damage to the land of the adjoining proprietors.—Held: under the words of the Act there was an obligation on the persons so incorporated to take care that the due execution of the works & operations intended by the Act should not be injurious to the lands lying along the banks of the M., & the bed or channel of the M. must be cleansed & kept in a proper state for the flow & reflow of the water that had to pass through it.—*GLEDIS v. 117. — Breach of covenant by undertakers.]—The owners in fee of the G. castle estate by deed of 1868 confirmed by private Act of Parliament, granted to deft. corpn. for the purposes of the supply authorised by their Acts a perpetual easement of taking & using surface water from a specified watershed area on pltf.'s estate. The water was conducted by streams & channels, partly natural & partly artificial, to ponds or reservoirs existing on the estate, from where there were streams & channels, also partly natural & partly artificial, for taking off the overflow from the ponds, the corpn. covenanting "at all times to maintain & keep all their works now made & hereafter to be made" on the G. castle estate in good & sufficient repair & condition & not to do or occasion any avoidable damage or injury to the estate. Water having escaped & overflowed from the ponds & streams & done damage to the estate.—Held: the covenant covered works not made by the corpn. & was not confined to artificial watercourses but extended to works existing on the estate at the date of the covenant, including every natural & artificial constituent utilised for the services of the corpn.'s water system.—*EVAN-THOMAS v. 119. Right to compensation—Construction of Private Act.]—By a waterworks Act it was provided that the comrs. under the Act "should be bound to make good to C. & her heirs, etc., all damages which may be occasioned to her or them by reason of or in consequence of any bursting or flow, or escape of water from any reservoir or aqueduct or pipe or other work connected therewith" which may be constructed by the comrs. C. is proprietrix of lands situated below the site of one of the reservoirs, & during an extraordinary rainfall a great quantity of water was continuously discharged from the reservoir through a waste weir into the watercourse of a burn & did much damage to C.'s lands. She claimed compensation. There was no failure or insufficiency of the works & no negligence.—Held: on the construction of the above clause C. was entitled to compensation for damage by flood waters from the reservoir, no matter how caused.—ROTHES (COUNTESS) v. KIRKCALDY WATERWORKS COMRS. (1882), 7 App. Cas. 694, H. L.

120. Right to injunction—Application of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 6.]—A waterworks co. were authorised by their private Act to take & use the water of certain springs which supplied a river upon the banks of which certain mills were situate. The Act provided that the co. should not abstract more than a certain amount of water before they had constructed a compensation reservoir for storing the water during floods for the benefit of the millowners. The Act gave the co. compulsory powers for acquiring land, streams, & springs for their undertaking, & powers to acquire by consent lands for constructing their compensation reservoir. The Act contained a reservation of the rights of the owners & occupiers of any lands, mills, or works, to the use of the waters of the stream, except so far as provided & declared by the Act. Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), was incorporated with this Act. The co. constructed a compensation reservoir, & a subsequent Act of Parliament, which gave them further powers, including powers of emptying & cleansing the reservoir, recognised this reservoir as a sufficient compensation reservoir for the mill owners, & directed it to be maintained. The owner of some dye works situate on the river below the reservoir filed a bill against the co., complaining that the effect of the reservoir was to make the water of the river more muddy than it was before its construction, & to render it unfit for the process of dyeing, & praying for an injunction to restrain defts. from fouling the stream. These allegations being in the judgment of the ct. established.—Held: the Acts gave defts. no power to foul the water; the compensation clauses in Waterworks Act, 1847 (c. 17), did not apply, inasmuch as the injury was such as the co. were not authorised to commit; & pltf. was entitled to an injunction.—CLOWES v. STAFFORDSHIRE POTTERIES WATERWORKS CO. (1872), 8 Ch. App. 125; 42 L. J. Ch. 107; 27 L. T. 521; 30 J. P. 760; 21 W. R. 32, L. J.J.

121. Right to damages—Depreciation of property.]—Pltf. was owner of two dye works, which were situated upon the banks of the river, & which had carried on flourishing businesses, until the construction of a reservoir by defts. higher up the river. The consequence of the construction of the reservoir was that a deposit of mud was formed at the bottom of it, which escaping into the river so fouled it that the water became unfit for use in pltf.'s works, & the businesses consequently fell off until pltf. was obliged to sell the works very much below their former value. Pltf. brought an action when the judge directed the jury to find a verdict for pltf. & the jury awarded £400 for damages & £1,000 for the depreciation of the property. On motion for new trial:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover anything for the depreciation of his property, & the rule must be made absolute for a new trial, unless he would consent to reduce his damages to the £400 lawfully recoverable.—TATTON v. STAFFORDSHIRE POTTERIES WATERWORKS CO. (1879), 44 J. P. 106.

E. Injury to Mines and Minerals.

122. Right to injunction—To restrain filling of reservoir—Threatened injury to mine workings.]—The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 27, provides that: "Nothing in this or the special Act shall prevent the undertakers from being liable to any action or other legal proceeding to which they would have been liable for any damage or injury done or occasioned to any mines by means or in consequence of the waterworks in case the same had not been constructed or maintained by virtue of this Act or the special Act":—Held: the sect. left the undertakers liable to all legal proceedings which before the Act were open to mineowners for protection from damage or injury arising from the works, whether actual or threatened; so that the action in this case was sustainable, although it was a quia timet action brought by mineowners for an injunction to restrain defts. from filling a reservoir constructed & maintained by virtue of a special Act & the Act of 1847 on the ground that, if filled, the mine would be flooded.—*GRAIGOIA MERTHYR CO., LTD. v. 123. Right to interfere with undertakers' supply—Construction of local Act.]—A local Act authorised a co. to enter upon lands within a certain manor, & to dig & search for any spring of water, & to convey the water from such springs into South Shields, for the use of the inhabitants of the town & the shipping in the harbour. It provided that the co. should not take the water from any spring, stream, or ponds, so as to deprive the occupiers of the lands of water for their own necessary uses, & for the cattle depasturing therein. The co. had power to lay down pipes, etc., & the inhabitants, with the consent of the co., might obtain the water by pipes, etc., to communicate with the co.'s pipes, at certain charges, according to the bore of the pipes:—Held: the owners or occupiers of lands within the manor were not prevented by the Act from sinking wells in such lands, though the effect might be to draw off the water from the co.'s springs.—SOUTH SHIELDS WATERWORKS CO. v. COOKSON (1845), 15 L. J. Ex. 315.

o. Bond fide acquisition by trespasser.]—Deft., a waterworks co., sank a well on pltf.'s property in the bond fide belief that the well was situated on property it had leased from one S. for the purpose of augmenting the supply of water which it was under an obligation to furnish for the use of a certain town. Deft. subsequently ascertained as a result of a survey that the well had been sunk upon pltf.'s land, but it continued to draw water therefrom. Pltf. claimed an account of all water taken from the well & payment of all profits shown to have resulted from its disposal:—Held: deft. was not bound to account

—Applts., in the execution of works authorised by a local Act, which incorporated Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), intercepted water from percolating underground into a well belonging to resp.; & also abstracted from the well water which had already so percolated into & was in it. Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 12, enacts "that in the exercise of" the powers conferred by the Act "the undertakers shall do as little damage as can be," & "shall make full compensation to all parties interested for all damage sustained by them through the exercise of such powers":—Held: inasmuch as, apart from the Act, no action would have lain by resp. against applts. in respect of either the interception or the abstraction of such water, the Act gave resp. no right to compensation in respect of either.—NEW RIVER CO. v. JOHNSON (1860), 2 E. & E. 435; 29 L. J. M. C. 93; 1 L. T. 295; 24 J. P. 244; 6 Jur. N. S. 374; 8 W. R. 179; 121 E. R. 164.

126. — Withdrawal of support.—Defts. were the owners of a well & pumping station situate at a distance of about 20 yards from a natural stream. This well was for 70 feet of its depth from the top lined with steel cylinders, so that no water from the adjacent soil could obtain access to the well except at a greater depth than 70 feet. Pltf. was a riparian owner lower down the stream. The effect of defts.' pumping from the well was that the general level of the water in the soil in the neighbourhood of the well was lowered to the extent of about 12 inches, with the result that the soil became dry, & a portion of the water flowing down the stream leaked out through the bed & side of the stream, so that the volume of the water in it was substantially diminished by the time it reached ptf.'s land. None of the water, however, which so escaped from the stream in consequence of defts.' pumping found its way into defts.' well:—Held: as defts. did not appropriate any of the water of the stream by pumping it up through their pipes, but merely caused it to sink a short distance into the ground by reason of their withdrawing the support of the lower subterranean water, the damage to the stream gave no cause of action.—ENGLISH v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, [1907] 1 K. B. 588; 76 L. J. K. B. 361; 96 L. T. 573; 71 J. P. 313; 23 T. L. R. 313; 5 L. G. R. 384.

SECT. 2.—SUPPLY OF WATER BY UNDERTAKERS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

127. Duty to provide supply—For objects contemplated by special Act.—A local Act authorised the Corp. of Plymouth to construct a watercourse or conduit, for bringing a supply of fresh water from a distance to Plymouth for public objects, as for the supply of the ships & town & to scour the haven. Mills were erected on the watercourse,

& the corp. afterwards conveyed away a portion of their interest in the leat:—Held: the corp. had undertaken the performance of a public trust, & could not divest themselves of the means of fully executing it; the primary duty of the corp. was to provide for the public objects contemplated by the Act; & the surplus water only, after satisfying the public purposes, could be applied to the use of the mills.—*A.-G. v. In his absence his men, to the injury of the co., fixed the pipe at a higher level. After it was done, A. knew of it. A. was not in fact the owner of the premises:—Held: he was liable in an action on the case brought by the co.

129. — For specified purposes—Construction.—The B. co., possessing springs of water of their own, covenanted, upon selling to the A. co. a portion of those springs, to take from the A. co. the entire supply of water they might require for certain specified purposes, & that they would not supply any of the places, their own premises forming part of the district, which the A. co. was authorised to supply by their Act of Parliament. The B. co. afterwards leased a portion of their premises, through which portion their own stream of water ran, thus supplying their lessees with water from this stream:—Held: (1) the B. co. were precluded by the covenant from using their own supply of water for the purposes for which they had stipulated to take water from the A. co.; (2) it could not be decided, in the absence of the lessees of the B. co., whether the supply of water furnished to them by the B. co. could be stopped, but the ct. directed an inquiry as to what damages the A. co. had sustained, & were sustaining, by reason of the B. co. supplying their lessees with water.

(3) A delay of twelve years in making the complaint does not amount to acquiescence, or to an abandonment of ptfs.' rights.—HARTLEPOOL GAS & WATER CO. v. WEST HARTLEPOOL HARBOUR & RY. CO. (1865), 12 L. T. 366.

By bye-laws authorised by the special Act they prescribed lead or cast iron as the material to be used for service pipes. Being requested by applt. to lay down a service pipe from their main to his house, they laid down one of lead, no objection being made by him to the material used. The pipe was laid at the expense of applt. & his landlord, & became their property, but remained under respts.' control. In an action by applt. against respts. for a breach of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 35, by supplying him with impure & unwholesome water, it was proved that the water complained of was pure & wholesome until it entered applt.'s service pipe, where it absorbed lead to such an extent as to make it injurious to applt.'s health:—Held: they had discharged their duty under the sect. & applt. could not recover.—MILNES v. B. What is a " Dwelling-House."

139. Poor law school.]—(1) A poor law school is a dwelling-house within enactments requiring a water co. to supply water to dwelling-houses for "domestic purposes" within the meaning of the Waterworks Clauses Acts. Though the carrying on of such a school is a business, water used in the school for purposes of a domestic character is used for "domestic purposes" within the meaning of those Acts; for it is the character of the purpose, & not the character of the premises in which the water is used, that is the important factor in determining whether it is used for "domestic purposes" or not.

(2) The words "domestic purposes" in the Waterworks Clauses Acts refer to user not merely for washing, drinking, & flushing closets & the like in a house, but extend to user for the amenities of the house, even where the house is used for business purposes; but the limit of such amenities must be ascertained with due regard to what is reasonable & to what is the ordinary user at the present day. Thus the heating of premises by hot water pipes is, while the generating of steam for the supply of power is not, a domestic purpose.

The use of boilers to supply power for driving laundry machinery & for pumping water from wells is not a domestic purpose.

(3) Where a water co. required to supply water for domestic purposes are empowered to make regulations for preventing the misuse of the water, & to refuse a supply if such regulations are not complied with, a person otherwise entitled to a supply for his domestic purposes cannot demand such supply if the appliances for the use of water in his house do not conform with the regulations.

(4) Where, there being no other prescribed limit, the bore of a service pipe to be laid by the owner or occupier of a house for obtaining water for his domestic purposes is limited by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 50, to half an inch, unless the undertakers consent to the use of a larger pipe, & the co. by their regulations fix three-quarters of an inch as the maximum bore, a person entitled to a supply for domestic purposes cannot insist on being supplied by means of a pipe of larger bore, but he is not precluded from insisting on a supply by means of as many entered on the valuation list & were not rated, demanded a supply of water for domestic purposes, but did not strictly comply with all the regulations made by defts., & was unable to agree with defts. as to the proper amount to be paid by them for the water-supply:—

Held: the premises not being rated, defts. could not insist on prepayment of water rate by pltf. as a condition precedent to their supplying pltf. with water.—POSTMASTER-GENERAL v. NENAGH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1913] 1 I. R. 288.—IR.

140. Theatre.—By sect. 59 of its private Act a city corp'n. was required to furnish a supply of water for domestic purposes at certain rates, based upon rental values (a) at the request of the owner or occupier of any private dwelling-house, or part of a private dwelling-house, in any street within the borough in which any water main of the corp'n. from time to time is laid; & (b) on the application of any person who under the provisions of this Act is entitled to demand a supply of water within the borough for domestic purposes. By sect. 63 the corp'n. might supply any person with water for other than domestic purposes "upon such terms & conditions as may be agreed on between the corp'n. & the persons desirous of having the supply":—Held: a theatre where no one resided, & where the consumption of water was very small in comparison with the high rental value, was not a "private dwelling-house" within sect. 59, but the proprietor was in the position of a person entitled to be supplied with water at an agreed rate within the meaning of sect. 63.—NORTHERN THEATRES CO. v. SHILLITO, [1925] 2 K. B. 100; 94 L. J. K. B. 472; 133 L. T. 156; 89 J. P. 101; 69 Sol. Jo. 459; 23 L. G. R. 288, C. A.

141. Workhouse.—By a special Act, incorporating Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), a waterworks co. were bound at the request of the owner or occupier of any house to supply such person with water for domestic purposes at a minimum rate, to be increased if such house should be occupied by more than one family, & the Act further provided that a supply of water for domestic purposes should not include a supply of water for baths, washhouses, or public purposes. Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), deals with the supply of water for cleansing sewers & drains, cleansing & watering the streets, supplying any public pumps, baths, or washhouses, & imposes a penalty for neglect to supply water "for the public purposes aforesaid":—Held: a workhouse was a house of which the guardians were owners, & the co. were bound to supply them with water for domestic purposes, such supply not being a supply "for public purposes" within the meaning of the special Act or of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), & for the purposes of the special Act the inmates of the workhouse were to be treated as one family & the rate assessed accordingly.—LISKEARD UNION v. 142.—]—A water co. were bound by their special Acts to furnish water to dwelling-houses within their district for domestic purposes at certain rates based on the annual value of such dwelling-houses, & for other than domestic purposes at such rates & upon such terms & conditions as might be agreed upon, or, failing agreement, upon such terms as might be determined by two justices, provided that the supply for domestic purposes should not be in any way interfered with or endangered. By sect. 22 of one of their Acts it was provided that they should not "be bound to supply any dwelling-house with water, otherwise than by meter or special agreement, where any part of such dwelling-house is used for any trade or business for which water is required."

Defts., as the owners & occupiers of a workhouse, had entered into an agreement with the water co. for the supply by meter of water to the workhouse at a rate varying with the quantity consumed, according to the co.'s scale of charges, & water was so supplied to the workhouse for several years, when defts. requested the co. to remove the meter & furnish a supply for domestic purposes at rates based on annual value. The co. refused to do so, & the water was supplied by meter to & used by defts. as before, but for several years no payment had been made for it, defts. refusing to pay except on the basis of a domestic supply. The guardians used the water for boilers used for purposes of power to engines for a ventilating fan in the kitchen; for a drying fan in the laundry; for wringer & washing machines, & for rain water pumping, for watering pigs & washing piggeries, for engines used to heat a shed where wood was chopped, for watering vegetable & flower gardens & heating greenhouses, for heating infirmary & surgery, mortuary, & chapel; for flushing water closets & for ordinary drinking, washing, & sanitary purposes:—Held: the guardians did not use any part of the workhouse for any trade or business purposes for which water was required, & sect. 22 did not apply, they were entitled to a supply of water for domestic purposes at the domestic rate, & a separate supply for non-domestic purposes to be paid for as provided by the Act, but they were not entitled to require the co. to supply the workhouse with water for purposes other than domestic purposes unless & until they had agreed with the co. as to the terms & conditions of such supply, or, failing such agreement, the terms & conditions had been determined by two justices, & they had made such alterations as were necessary for the segregation of the two supplies.—CHESTER WATERWORKS CO. v. But by sect. 61 of the Act the co. could not be compelled to furnish & supply "otherwise than by agreement, where any part of such dwelling-house is used for any trade, manufacture, or business for which water is required":—Held: the keeping of a boarding-school for boys in which water was used for the domestic purposes of all the inmates was not carrying on a "business for which water is required" within the meaning of sect. 61, of the special Act, & the occupier of the house was therefore entitled to be supplied by the water co. with water to his house & premises at a rate not exceeding that specified in sect. 60.—*FREDERICK v. C. What are "Domestic Purposes."

147. General rule.—The governors of a school, carried on as a charity & not for purposes of profit, constructed a swimming bath for the use of the boys. The bath was in a building outside the main building of the school, but was connected with it by a corridor, & was separately rated for poor rate. A swimming master was kept to teach the boys swimming, & a fee was charged for the use of the bath. This fee was compulsory for the boarders, but was charged to such only of the day boys as used the bath:—Held: under the circumstances the water supplied to the bath was not supplied for "domestic purposes" within Waterworks (Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 93), s. 12, but was supplied for the business of the school, & consequently the water authority were entitled to make a special charge for the supply. Semble: a supply of water to a swimming bath for the use of the occupier of the dwelling-house & his family may be a supply for domestic purposes.

A supply of water for domestic purposes is not limited to a supply inside the dwelling-house of the occupier, nor must it be a supply which is essential to the occupation, or even to the healthy occupation, of the house.

Water supplied for the purpose of making the occupation of a house more convenient, or for increasing its amenities is prima facie supplied for "domestic purposes."

The true test whether water is supplied for domestic purposes is not whether it is used by the occupier for the private purposes of himself & his household.

Regard must be had to the ordinary habits of domestic life & to what can reasonably be considered a "domestic purpose."

The test of reasonableness ought also to be applied to the quantity of water required, & regard should be had, not only to the consumer, but also to the obligation of the water authority to afford a supply to their district for ordinary domestic purposes.

In each case the ct. must see whether the supply required is reasonably a supply for domestic purposes.—BARNARD CASTLE URBAN COUNCIL v. WILSON, [1902] 2 Ch. 746; 71 L. J. Ch. 825; 87 L. T. 279; 51 W. R. 102; 18 T. L. R. 748; 40 Sol. Jo. 665, C. A.

A gas co., whose works were within the limits of supply of the Board, provided at their works in pursuance of their statutory obligations under Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), all necessary sanitary conveniences for their workmen. No one resided at the works, which were exempt from inhabited house duty. The co. claimed to be entitled under sect. 16 of the Act of 1907 to a supply of water by meter for the sanitary conveniences on the ground that such supply was "for purposes other than domestic," i.e. for trade purposes, & that their works were within the exception of "any trade manufacture or business" in sect. 25 of the Act:—Held: the question was not the character of the premises, but the character of the purposes for which the water was used; the supply in question was for domestic purposes; & therefore, the co. were not entitled to a supply under sect. 16, but were entitled to a supply under sects. 8, 9, & 13 of the Act.—*SOUTH SUBURBAN GAS CO. v. 164. ———. —Railway station.—The Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907 (c. clxxi), provides by sect. 8 for a supply of water for "domestic purposes" at the request of the owner or occupier of any house or building occupied as a separate tenement within the limits of supply of the Metropolitan Water Board at a rate based on the rateable value of the house or building. The same Act by sect. 16 provides for a supply of water by measure for "purposes other than domestic" at the request of any owner or occupier of any premises situate as therein described at rates varying with the quantity supplied. By sect. 25 "domestic purposes" are deemed to include water closets & baths of a certain capacity, but are not to include a supply of water for "railway purposes."

A railway co. owned a station situate as described in sect. 16 & within the limits of supply of the Board. The station was separately rated; it contained no stationmaster's house, but contained waiting rooms, a porter's room, & a booking office; on the up & down platforms were urinals & two water closets, one for passengers & one for the staff; there was also on each platform a tap from which water was drawn for drinking & for cleansing the platform:—Held: the water supplied by the Board for these purposes was supplied for "railway purposes" within sect. 25, & was therefore supplied for "purposes other than domestic" within sect. 16.—*METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. 168. Power to limit purposes of supply—Supply of water to public fountain—Fountain a nuisance.

—A local board of health Act empowered the board to supply the town with water at certain rates for domestic purposes, & for other than domestic purposes for such remuneration & upon such terms and conditions as should be agreed upon between them & the persons desirous of having such supply. An inhabitant of the town having presented to the town an ornamental fountain with a trough or basin, which was set up on one of the public streets, the board supplied it with water on market-days, for the use of cattle in the market, & for horses, if yoked, when passing to & fro. Resp., who kept horses, with a view to evade payment of the rate for the supply of water to his stable, took his horses to the fountain to drink. Upon an information against him under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 59—which enacts that "every person who, not having agreed to be supplied with water by the undertakers, shall take any water from any reservoir, watercourse, or conduit belonging to the undertakers, etc., or from any cistern or other like place containing water belonging to the undertakers, other than such as may have been provided for the gratuitous use of the public, shall forfeit to the undertakers for every such offence a sum not exceeding £10," the magistrates, being of opinion that the board had no right to erect a fountain on the public highway otherwise than for the gratuitous use of the public under the provisions in Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 13), s. 78, declined to convict:—Held: the decision of the magistrates was wrong; for, notwithstanding the fountain might be a public nuisance, it was competent to the board to limit the supply of water thereto in the manner they had done.—HILDRETH v. ADAMSON (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 587; 30 L. J. M. C. 204; 2 L. T. 359; 25 J. P. 645; 8 W. R. 470; 141 E. R. 1296.

169. Power to make charge for supply—Whether bound to supply water gratuitously—Building supported by rates—Rates not wholly raised within limits of local Act.—The Oldham poor law union comprises eight townships, & the union workhouse is maintained out of the common fund of the union, consisting of the aggregate of the poor rates within those townships. The Oldham Corporation Gas & Water Act, 1853, extends only to four of those townships, & to two townships not within the union. 170. — Whether bound to supply water at charges fixed by special Act—Water for watering roads during dry months.—By the New River Company's Act 1852 (c. cix), s. 35, the co. must supply houses within their limits with sufficient water for domestic purposes at certain fixed rates. By sect. 38, domestic purposes are not to include engines or railways purposes, or baths, cattle, or fountains, or flushing sewers or drains, or any trade or business requiring an extra supply of water. By sect. 41, the co. shall, at the request of any consumer of water for purposes other than the purposes for or in respect of which the rates or charges are thereinbefore provided or limited, or at their own instance, afford a supply of water by means of a meter, & charge for the same at certain limited rates, according to the quarterly consumption. By sect. 37 of Waterworks Clauses Act 1847 (c. 17), incorporated in the Act of 1852, the undertakers shall provide a sufficient supply of water for cleansing sewers & drains, for cleansing & watering streets, & for other public purposes, at rates & upon conditions to be agreed to by the undertakers or to be settled by justices or by an inspector. Pltfs. demanded from defts. a supply of water by meter, under sect. 41, for watering the roads & gardens on the Victoria Embankment, such supply being required only during one-third of the year & the driest weather:—Held: defts. were not bound to afford this supply at the limited rates fixed by sect. 41; but they were entitled to claim rates for such supply, to be fixed by agreement or settlement, under sect. 37 of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17).—*METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS v. 173. Duty to supply water to fire plugs—At high pressure.—In 1845 an Act of Parliament was passed for supplying the town of Wolverhampton with water, no mention being made in the Act as to the water being laid on at high pressure. In 1855 a new Act was passed for the same purpose, which by its first section enacted that Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), should be incorporated in it, sect. 42 of which Act enacted that all the pipes to which fire plugs should be fixed should be kept at high pressure, the co. being liable to a penalty of £10 for non-performance. By sect. 50, however, of the new Act, it was provided that the water to be supplied from any pipe of the co. need not be laid on at high pressure.

In 1856 the two cos. became amalgamated, by an Act entitled the Wolverhampton Waterworks Transfer Act, in which the Waterworks Clauses Act was incorporated.

A fire having taken place, & there not being a sufficient supply of water, the complainant, on behalf of the corpn., obtained a summons against the co., & upon the hearing, the magistrate decided that the co. were not bound to keep the water on at high pressure, as the General Act was expressly varied & repealed by sect. 40 of the Wolverhampton New Waterworks Act:—Held: the magistrate was right.—*PURNELL v. 175. — & to allow use of water gratuitously—Water taken from private pipe & fire plug.—Pltfs., a water co., were possessed of a water main, from which there ran across a field of defts. a pipe, the property of defts., through which pltfs. supplied defts. with water for agricultural purposes. In this pipe pltfs. had at the request & expense of defts. fixed a fire plug. A haystack of defts. having caught fire, defts. by means of the fire plug in their pipe used pltfs.' water for the purpose of extinguishing the fire. To a claim by pltfs. for payment for the water so consumed, defts. pleaded that under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1817 (c. 17), s. 42, they were entitled to use the water gratuitously. There was no evidence that there were any fire plugs in pltfs.' main:—Held: the privilege conferred by sect. 42 of taking water without payment for extinguishing fire was confined to water taken from pipes of the undertakers to which fire plugs were fixed, & that in the absence of evidence of there being fire plugs in pltfs.' main defts. were liable to pay for the water taken.—*WEARDALE & CONSETT WATER CO. v. The special Act incorporated Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 7). The pipes were laid down with the approval of the co. The co. afterwards refused to make the connection between the pipes & the main. The house owner thereupon lawfully made the connection, which was then immediately cut off by the co. In an action by the house owner against the co. claiming damages & an injunction to restrain the co. from preventing him from again connecting the pipes with the main, & from severing such connection if so made again by pltf.:—Held: there was nothing in Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 43, 53, which disabled pltf. from bringing such an action.—GALE v. Sect. 10 provided that if the works authorised were not completed within the time thereby limited the powers of deft. co. should cease, "Provided that for the protection of the Pontypridd & Ystradfydwg local boards . . . the following provisions shall have effect (namely)"; & then followed provisions imposing certain obligations upon deft. co. with reference to the quantity & quality of the water to be supplied to the districts of the two local boards.

On Sept. 13, 1906, pltf. council, who were the successors in interest of the Ystradfydwg local board, commenced an action in their own name against deft. co. to enforce by mandatory injunction the provisions of s. 10. Dft. co. by their defence alleged (inter alia), that they would object that pltf. council's statement of claim disclosed no cause of action. On Nov. 6, 1907, after notice of trial had been given, pltf. council obtained an order giving them liberty to amend their writ & statement of claim by adding the A.-G. as a co-pltf. on their relation. The order provided that "all questions as to the terms upon which such amendments ought to be allowed be left to the judge at the trial of this action, when defts. are to be at liberty to raise such preliminary objections as they may think fit." The A.-G. was accordingly added as a co-pltf.:—Held: s. 10 of deft. co.'s Act did not confer upon pltf. council any statutory power to sue in their own name, & the only person who could sue was the A.-G.—A.-G. v. Right to cut off supply—Refusal to adopt new arrangement of service pipes.]—Applts. were a water co. authorised to supply water by a special Act, which Act incorporated Waterworks Clauses Acts, 1847 (c. 17), & 1863 (c. 93), & an order of 1878, which provide that they might make reasonable regulations for preventing the waste of water, & prescribe the apparatus suitable for purposes of supply, & that if the regulations are not observed they might refuse to supply water or may cut off the supply. It is also provided under the order of 1878 that if any difference arose as to the reasonableness of any of the regulations made by the water co., the same was to be referred to two justices.

Resp. was the owner of seven houses, &, by a special agreement made between himself & the water co., was liable for the water rate.

Applts. made a regulation that no service pipes for the supply of water should be so arranged as to supply more than one house. The whole of the seven houses of resp. was supplied by one service pipe. Applts. refused to accept the water rate when tendered by resp., so as to try & make him alter the mode of supply, & on the ground of non-payment cut off the water supply; but

186. Power to break up pavement—Meaning of “pavement.”—By the East London Waterworks Act of 1853, which is deft.’s special Act, it is enacted by sect. 3, that the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), except the provisions with respect to the communication pipes to be laid by undertakers of that Act, shall be incorporated with the Act, & by sect. 70, “that no person shall make, or lay down, or permit to be made or laid down, any pipe, or other means or contrivance for using or obtaining water to communicate with any pipe or apparatus connected with any main or pipes of the co., without giving such notice, & except under such superintendence, & according to such direction as is provided by the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), with respect to the communication pipes to be laid by the inhabitants.” By Waterworks Clauses Act (c. 17), s. 48, any owner or occupier of any dwelling-house within the limits of the special Act, who shall wish to have water from the works of the undertakers brought into his premises, etc., may open the ground, & lay pipes to communicate with the pipes of the undertakers, provided that he give fourteen days’ notice of his intention to do so. By sect. 49, the pipe shall be so made to communicate under the superintendence & according to the directions of the surveyor, or other officer appointed for that purpose by the undertakers, unless such surveyor or other officer shall fail to attend at the time mentioned in the said notice; & by sect. 52, any owner or occupier may open or break up so much of the pavement of any street as shall be between the pipe of the undertakers & his house, subject to the above conditions as to notice.—Held: where an owner acting under these powers opened a street & so carelessly filled up the hole as to cause damage to pltf.’s horse, the owner, & not the co., was liable for not properly reinstating the street, & the word pavement in sect. 52 applied to the street as well as the foot pavement.—GLOVER v. EAST LONDON WATERWORKS CO. (1868), 17 L. T. 475; 32 J. P. 280; 16 W. R. 310.

187. — For what purposes—To make indirect connection.—A., the owner of a house & land within the borough of deft. corp., was supplied with water for his premises through a private service pipe connected with the mains of a water co. serving the district. This service pipe was laid for a considerable distance along a road vested in defts. as the highway authority, but the soil of which belonged to A. He entered into an arrangement with pltf., a neighbouring owner, to allow pltf. to obtain a supply from the same co. by tapping, with their consent, his service pipe. For the purpose of making the necessary connection, pltf. commenced to break up the pavement of the road between his property & A.’s service pipe. Defts. by their servants obstructed pltf.’s workmen, & pltf. brought an action & moved for an injunction to restrain such interference. Defts. contended that pltf.’s right to break up the road was limited by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 52, to so much of it as lay “between the pipe of the undertakers & his house, building, or premises”; & that A.’s service pipe was not a “pipe of the undertakers”.—Held: the indirect connection by means of A.’s pipe between pltf.’s premises & the co.’s main was sufficient to bring the case within s. 52, & pltf. was entitled to break up the roadway.—PEARSON v. TENTERDEN CORPN. (1910), 74 J. P. 405.

188. — To repair service pipes.—A water co. under the provisions of their special Act, which incorporated Waterworks Clauses Acts 1847 (c. 17) & 1863 (c. 83), had power to lay down, repair, & maintain (inter alia) pipes & all other works necessary for supplying water within the limits of the Act. At the request & expense of the owner of a house the co. laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop cock was protected by a cover or guard box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge:—Held: the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—*CHAPMAN v. munication pipe, supplying the owner of the shop with water, & crossing a gas main at right angles, was leaking, & that the gas main was leaking at a rusty place near the leak in the water pipe. By consent, the owner of the shop was dismissed from the action:—Held: there was no case to go to the jury in respect of the Water Board, though an application to dismiss them from the action on the close of pltf.'s case was refused, on the ground that, as there was evidence which the Gas co. must meet, the case presented by the Gas co. might disclose a cause of action against the Water Board. The grounds for holding that there was no case for the Water Board to meet were (a) that the leaking water pipe was a communication pipe, & that, therefore, under Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907 (c. clxxi), the consumer was both entitled & under an obligation to break up the street in order to repair it, the fact that it was an old pipe being immaterial; & (b) that whether this was so or not, the Water Board were under no duty towards a third person to repair the pipe. As regards the Gas co., the jury ultimately found a verdict in their favour.—STACEY v. GAS LIGHT & COKE CO., METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD & WEST END TAILORING CO. (1910), 9 L. G. R. 174.

193. — *Cost of repair—Who liable for—Repairs by undertakers.]—A defect existed in a service pipe which conveyed water from a main of a waterworks co. to deft.'s house, the defect being in a portion of the pipe which was situate outside deft.'s premises & beneath a public highway. There was no finding as to whom the pipe belonged to or by whom it was laid, though in the judgment appealed against it was assumed to be the property of deft.:—Held: as the co. had not shown that deft. had permitted a pipe which he was bound to repair to get out of repair, they could not recover from him the cost of repair.—*COLNE VALLEY WATER CO. v. He recovered the costs of these repairs from the waterworks co. in the county ct as having been paid under duress. There was no evidence as to who owned the communication pipe under the highway, or as to how it came to be there:—Held: pltf. could not succeed unless he could prove (a) that the co. were liable to do the repairs, & (b) that he had paid the cost of the repairs under duress, & that in the absence of any evidence as to who had laid down the communication pipe, or under what statutory provisions it was laid down, pltf. had failed to establish that the co. were bound to do these repairs.—*PARNELL v. The ground was opened in order to discover where the leakage was. It proved to be in deft.'s pipe, & he repaired the leakage at his own expense:—Held: as at the time when pltfs. opened the ground it had not appeared to them that the defect was in deft.'s pipe, they could not recover from deft. the investigatory work of locating the leakage.—*DAVID v. 199. — Builder "requiring" supply for building operations—Meaning of "require"—Builder using water supplied to building owner.]—Pltfs., the Metropolitan Water Board, agreed with the Secretary of State for War to supply water by measure at certain rates to Hounslow barracks for domestic & non-domestic purposes. During the currency of the agreement defts., who were builders, under a contract with the Secretary of State for War, erected an addition to the hospital quarters at the barracks, it being a term of the contract that water for the building operations might be obtained by defts. free of charge from any available War Department source. Defts. took the necessary water from the supply at the barracks after it had passed through the meter & therefore after the Secretary of State for War had become liable to pay for it. Pltfs. claimed to recover from defts., under Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907, s. 17, 14s., being 7s. per £100 of the probable total cost of the building. In Dec. 1907, pltfs. had passed a general resolution that, instead of affording supplies for building purposes under sect. 17 by measure, such supplies should be afforded at the rate of 7s. per £100 of the probable total cost of the building after making such allowance as by their appeal & assessment committee they might think reasonable for decorative or iron or steel work not requiring the use of water. Pltfs. had not considered, in the case of the building erected by defts., whether any allowance should be made:—Held: the word "require" in sect. 17 meant "demand" & not merely "have need of"; defts. had not "required" from pltfs. within the meaning of sect. 17 a supply of water for building purposes; & pltfs. were not entitled to recover the sum claimed.—*METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. The township took more than the 25,000 gallons, & sold part of it at a profit to a neighbouring township:—Held: there was nothing to prevent

The lessee sub-demised to ptfs. the premises held by him for the remainder of the term for which he held, less three days, & ptfs., who had notice of the superior lease, covenanted to pay one-third of the water rate. The whole of the premises were at first included in one assessment by the local authority, but the ground floor demised & the other portions were subsequently separately assessed for the purposes of rates & taxes. Deft., who had purchased both the freehold reversion & the superior lease, refused to pay the rates & taxes in respect of the grant comprised in the lease & underlease. Ptfs., having been compelled by a threat of distress to pay these rates & taxes, brought an action to have it declared that their portion of the premises was free from such payments, except one-third of the water rate:—Held: that ptfs., as underlessees, were not "assigns" of their lessor, so as to be entitled to sue deft. in respect of the positive covenant by the ground landlord in the original lease.—*SOUTH OF ENGLAND DAIRIES, LTD. v. The houses were let at weekly rents, applt. paying all rates charged thereon, & also for all repairs & insurances in respect thereof. He was allowed, as an owner, under Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), s. 4, a deduction of 30 per cent. from the full amount of the poor rate which an occupier if rated would have paid. Resps. charged applt. with water rates calculated on the following basis; they multiplied the weekly rents by fifty-two & deducted from the amount so arrived at the actual sums paid by applt. for rates, & then charged the water rates upon the balance:—Held: in order to arrive at the "annual rent" upon which the water rate was to be computed, an allowance should be made in respect of "voids," i.e. houses lying vacant from time to time; & the actual amount of the poor rates & other rates paid by applt. was rightly deducted, but applt. was not entitled to deduct the full amount of the rates which an occupier if rated would have paid; nor the amount which he paid for repairs, & insurances.—

An owner & occupier contended that his house, not being let at an annual rack rent, the water rates payable by him ought to be assessed according to the annual value; & that the annual value was the net annual value, as distinguished from the gross value or gross estimated rental:—Held: the words in the sect. "annual rack rent" & "annual value" must be treated as equivalent; that the legislature never intended to lay down two scales of charges, one for tenants of houses & the other for owner occupants; & an owner occupying his own house must pay water rates upon the gross estimated rental, as distinguished from the net annual value.—STEVENS v. 212. Annual value—How ascertained—Whether deduction for rates allowed.—By Liverpool Corporation Waterworks Act, 1847, the rates at which water is to be supplied for domestic purposes, are to be assessed upon the "annual value" of the premises: & by Liverpool Corporation Water Works (Amendment) Act, 1850, it is enacted, that, if the owner of any dwelling-house the yearly rent or value whereof shall not amount to £13, or which, whatever may be the annual value thereof, shall be let to weekly or monthly tenants, or in separate apartments, shall be desirous of paying a reduced water rent by the year for same, whether occupied or not, the council may compound with such owner for the payment of the water rents payable by virtue of the Acts in respect of such dwelling-house at any sum not less than three-fourths of the annual water rent for same; & all such compositions shall be entered in the books of the council, & shall be recoverable in like manner as the rents & charges authorised by the Act are by law recoverable. By a composition paper, applt., as the owner of certain dwelling-houses let to weekly tenants, agreed with the corpn. to compound for the water rates, & in a schedule thereto stated the rental to be 4s. 6d. per week & 3s. 6d. per week respectively. The composition paper contained a stipulation, that, "if at any time it should be ascertained that the rental of such houses was not truly & correctly set forth in the schedule, the corpn. might be at liberty to amend same by inserting therein the true & correct amounts of such rental," & might recover against applt. the additional water rents due in respect thereof. The rents of the houses were in point of fact 6d. per week respectively more than the sums stated in the schedule,—applt. claiming to deduct that sum in respect of poor & other rates which by agreement with the tenants were paid by him:—Held: (1) applt. was not entitled to make such deduction, but that the corpn. were entitled under the agreement to receive the composition upon the amount of rent paid by the tenants; (2) the production of the composition paper, & proof that no demand of water rates had been made upon the tenants, was sufficient evidence that the composition had been made, without showing that any entry thereof had been made in the books of the council.—ROOK v. Applt. was the owner of three cottages let to tenants, & applt. paid all the rates on such cottages:—Held: in order to arrive at the "annual rack rent or value," upon which he was liable to pay the water rate, applt. was entitled to deduct the rates so paid by him.—WILKINSON v. BURY WATER BOARD (1905), 92 L. T. 417; 69 J. P. 214; 3 L. G. R. 715, D. C.

It was further provided in a subsequent sect. of the Act that the rate should be "payable according to the annual value at which the premises were from time to time assessed to the poor rate if same were so assessed, or, if not, according to the net annual value of the premises." By Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 68, "the water rates, except as hereinafter & in the special Act mentioned, shall be payable according to the annual value of the tenement supplied with water":—Held: the water rate charged by the co. must be calculated on the "rateable value" not on the "gross estimated rental" of the premises supplied with water.—WARRINGTON WATERWORKS CO. v. LONGSHAW (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 145; 51 L. J. Q. B. 498; 46 L. T. 815; 46 J. P. 773; 31 W. R. 11, D. C.

It was proved that the value of the house without the garden would be 10 per cent. less, & that the owner contracted to pay & did pay £1 ls. annually for the watering by means of a pipe & tap in the garden which surrounded the dwelling-house & was occupied & assessed therewith:—Held: the words "gross sum assessed to the poor rate" meant the "gross estimated rental," & not "rateable or net value"; & the water-rent was chargeable upon the gross abutting on streets in which mains & hydrants of pits, had been placed. Defts. had a waterworks system of their own & did not use that of pits, though they could have done so had they wished. The comrs. imposed a water rate "for water supplied or ready to be supplied" upon all lands in the city, based upon their assessed value, irrespective of the user or non-user of water:—Held: this rate was, under 37 Vict. c. 79, ss. 11, 12, validly imposed.—CITY OF WINDSOR v. CANADIAN SOUTHERN RY. CO. (1893), 20 A. R. 388.—CAN.

218. ———— —Held:——The special Act of a water co. incorporated Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), "except where expressly varied by" the special Act. Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 68, provides that the water rates, except as thereafter & in the special Act mentioned, shall be payable according to the annual value, which has been held to mean the net annual value, of the tenement supplied with water. A sect. of the special Act provided that the co. should furnish water at rates not exceeding the yearly rates thereafter specified, namely, where the gross estimated annual rental of the premises supplied should not exceed a certain amount, at a rate per cent. per annum not exceeding an amount specified:—Held: by this sect. the rate per cent. per annum was to be calculated upon the gross estimated annual rental & Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 68, was expressly varied thereby.—WOKING WATER & GAS CO. v. 219. ———— Net annual value.—A water co. by a special Act of 1826 were compellable to supply water to certain dwelling-houses in the metropolis for domestic purposes at certain rates per cent. per annum payable "according to the actual amount of the rent where the same can be ascertained & where same cannot be ascertained according to the actual amount or annual value upon which the assessment to the poor's rate is computed in the parish or district where the house is situated." By a special Act of 1852 the co. were compellable to furnish the water "where the annual value of the dwelling-house or other place supplied shall not exceed £200 at a rate per cent. per annum on such value not exceeding £4; & where such annual value shall exceed £200 at a rate per cent. per annum on such value not exceeding £3." The occupier of one of the houses was lessee for a long term at a ground rent & paid no rent except the ground rent:—Held: whether the later Act repealed the provisions of the former or not the case must be dealt with under the later Act; & the words "annual value" in the later Act meant "net annual value" as defined in Parochial Assessments Act, 1836 (c. 96), s. 1.—DOBBS v. The co. contended that the annual value of the premises as a licensed public-house should be taken as the basis of the water rate payable in respect of such supply, & that therefore the fact of the premises being licensed, & a premium which had been paid for the lease of the premises as a public-house, ought to be taken into consideration in fixing the value. The occupier contended that such water-rate should be based upon the value of the premises for domestic purposes only:—Held: the contention of the co. was correct.—WEST MIDDLESEX WATERWORKS CO. v. 225. ———— Provision for fixed scale for class—Water rate chargeable at maximum rate for class—Consumer not entitled to pay on annual value.—A water co.'s statute bound the co. to supply water on request at the following rates: (inter alia) where the annual rack rent or value of premises is under £5, at a rate not exceeding 5s.; where premises above £5 & under £15, at a rate not exceeding 15s.; & so on with a scale up to an annual value of £100. By another sect. the water rates were to be payable according to the annual value at which the premises were assessed to the poor rate. G.'s premises were assessed to the poor rate at £11, & he claimed to pay a water rate of only 11s., & not 15s. as demanded:—Held: the water co. were entitled to demand the maximum rate for the class of houses under which G.'s came, & the justices were right in so deciding.—*GWATKIN v. (c) Making of Rate.

226. Power to make rate—Before completion of works.—To an action of trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s mill & taking his goods, defts. pleaded a justification under a local Act, that defts., as comrs. under the Act, completed one of three reservoirs mentioned therein; that pltf.'s mill was benefitted by the supply of water therefrom; that a certain rate was made, & that the trespass was committed & the goods were taken as a distress for non-payment of the rate. Pltf. replied, that only one reservoir had been completed. General demurrer. Sect. 35 enacted that "no rate shall be levied or assessed under the provisions hereinbefore contained until the reservoirs shall be actually made & in use, & water supplied therefrom":—Held: upon the true construction of the Act, the completion of one reservoir entitled the comrs. to levy a rate on the class of persons mentioned in the Act actually benefitted by it; & therefore the plea was good.—SIDEBOTTOM v. GLOSSOP RESERVOIRS COMRS. (1847), 1 Exch. 611; 11 J. P. 569; 154 E. R. 280, Ex. Ch.

227. Power to charge different rates—In different parts of district.—The undertaking & powers of a water co. were by an Act of 1884 transferred to a municipal corpn. By s. 49 of the co.'s special Act passed in 1861, the co. were empowered to charge for a supply of water for domestic use rates "not exceeding" certain amounts graduated according to the value of the premises, & by s. 59 of the Act it was provided that "the co. may from time to time supply any persons with water for any purpose for which such supply is required, for such remuneration, & upon such terms & conditions, as shall be agreed upon between the co. & the person desirous of such supply of water, under a special agreement." By s. 36 of the before-mentioned Act of 1884, s. 49 of the Act of 1861 was repealed, & the corpn. were empowered to "charge for the supply of water for domestic use to any dwelling-house a sum not exceeding 7½ per cent. per annum on the net rateable value of such dwelling-house, as ascertained by the valuation list in force at the commencement of the quarter during which the water rate becomes payable." There was no express provision in either of the before-mentioned Acts requiring equality of rating in respect of the charge made for water to consumers.

The corpn. charged to consumers in respect of water supply for domestic purposes in part of their district at the rate of 7½ per cent. & in the remainder of the district at the rate of 5 per cent. upon the rateable value of their respective dwelling-houses. In an action brought to recover the sum charged to a consumer for water at the higher rate:—Held: no implication arose from s. 36 of the Act of 1884 that the corpn. were bound to charge for water at an equal rate in the pound to all consumers, & therefore the fact that they had not done so was no defence to the action.—NORTHAMPTON CORPN. v. ELLEN, [1904] 1 K. B. 299; 73 L. J. K. B. 329; 90 L. T. 71; 68 J. P. 197; 52 W. R. 305; 20 T. L. R. 168; 2 L. G. R. 473, C. A.

228. Power to charge special rate—Supply of water outside borough but within limits of Act.—Pltf. was the occupier of a house which was outside the limits of the borough of Plymouth, but was within the limits of water supply under the Plymouth Corporation Water & Markets Act, 1867, which Act incorporated the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), "except where expressly excepted or varied by this Act." Pltf. was supplied by defts. with water under the special Act, but having been compelled to pay a water rate in excess of the scale prescribed by sect. 22 of that Act, he sought to recover from defts. the difference between the two rates, contending that by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 53, & s. 22 of the special Act he was only liable to pay water rate in accordance with the scale laid down in the last-mentioned sect.—Held: the action failed, as sect. 15 of the special Act, relating to supply beyond the borough of Plymouth, but within the limits of supply, varied the provisions of the Act of 1847, & applied so as to entitle pltf. to a supply of water only on the terms to be agreed between him & the defts.—PITTS v. PLYMOUTH CORPN., [1912] 3 K. B. 301; 81 L. J. K. B. 1240; 107 L. T. 528; 10 L. G. R. 312.

B. Supply by Measure.

229. Duty to supply by measure—"Any consumer of water"—Person actually consuming water.—The words "any consumer of water" in sect. 41 of the New River Company's Act, 1852 (c. clx), mean not any person merely desirous of being a consumer, but a person who is actually consuming water or who at least is entitled to demand a supply for his consumption & is taking the necessary steps to obtain it.—COOKE, SONS & CO. v. NEW RIVER GOVERNOR & CO. (1889), 14 App. Cas. 698; 59 L. J. Ch. 333; 61 L. T. 816; 54 J. P. 260; 5 T. L. R. 726, H. L.

230. Obligation to provide meter—Whether on undertakers or on consumer.—The special Act of a water co. provided for the supply of water to the inhabitants of the district for "family use" at certain rates calculated on the rental of the house supplied. The Act contained further provisions for the supply of water for schools, manufactories, etc., etc., & for other purposes than family consumption, & for baths, etc., & for the purposes of any trade or business whatsoever at certain rates per thousand gallons. The supply of water under these latter provisions having been held obligatory upon the co. unless prevented by causes beyond their control:—Held: (1) there being no provision in the special Act throwing upon the consumer the obligation of providing a meter to measure the water supplied for the purposes of a bath, no such obligation could be implied from Waterworks

Sec. 2.—Supply of water by undertakers: Sub-sect. 9, B. & C. (a) i.]

Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 93), s. 14, incorporated with the special Act, which sect. provides that where the undertakers are authorised by the special Act to supply water by measure they may let for hire to any consumer of water so supplied any meter or instrument for measuring the quantity of water supplied. The occupier of a house within the district of the above-mentioned co. had a bath connected by means of a pipe with the house cistern, to which water was conveyed from the co.'s mains for "family use." The co. required him to put up a meter for the purpose of measuring the water used for the bath, but he refused to do so. He had paid to the co. in advance the proper amount in respect of the water supply "for family use" for the quarter ending the Sept. 29, but had not paid or tendered any sum in respect of the water supply to the bath during such period. The co. in consequence of his refusal to put up a meter or disconnect the bath, cut off the communication pipe from their main to his house upon Sept. 20. On Sept. 29, having cut off the pipe connecting the cistern with the bath, but not the waste or outlet pipe from the bath, he gave notice to the co. of what he had done, & paid to the co. in advance the proper amount for the supply of water for "family use" during the ensuing quarter, but did not restore the communication-pipe between the co.'s mains & his cistern. The co. refused to restore the supply on the ground that he had not cut off the waste-pipe from the bath, which he refused to do. The supply of water was not renewed till Nov. 4, when the co. restored the communication pipe under protest:—Held: (2) the co. were not entitled to insist on the consumer's providing a meter, (3) they were not liable to a penalty under the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 43, for not supplying water during the period between Sept. 20 & 29, inasmuch as no payment or tender in respect of the water supply to the bath for such period had been made; (4) the co. were liable to a penalty in respect of the period subsequent to Sept. 29; (5) they had no right to refuse the supply of water after that date, & they were not justified in cutting off the supply, & were, therefore, not entitled to require the consumer to renew the communication.—*SHEFFIELD WATERWORKS CO. v. ing the water to the consumer, but it was the consumer who was entitled to draw off from the main what water he required, & to fix pipes & apparatus at his own expense for the purpose of measuring the water so taken by him; & such measurement could only be effected by some sufficient automatic self-registering meter or other instrument, or in some other equally accurate mode.—*SHEFFIELD WATERWORKS CO. v. g. Right of water company to apply to court—For declaration that land of deft. is charged with amount due.]

which the rates were made should stand charged with the payment of such rates & the ct. may further order that accounts be taken to ascertain the amount due & may direct that in ment supplied with water, & that, "if any dispute arise as to such value, the same shall be determined by two justices." By New River Company's Act, 1852 (c. clx), s. 46, which incorporates Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), it is enacted that "nothing in this Act or any Act incorporated herewith contained shall prevent the co. from recovering any sum of money not exceeding £50, which shall be due to them for water rates or rents, or for damages, costs, or expenses, by action or proceeding in such manner as is by law provided for the recovery of debts not exceeding £50":—Held: where a bonâ fide dispute arises as to the "annual value," the co. must, before they can sue for the rate under sect. 46 of the special Act, obtain a decision of justices on that dispute, under sect. 68 of the general Act.—*NEW RIVER CO. v. 239. ——— Minimum charge made.—COLNE VALLEY WATER CO. v. TREHARNE, No. 7, ante.

240. ——— ——— ———]—(1) A water rate of £8 15s. 4d. for one quarter's rate in respect of certain houses, was demanded by debts, the sanitary authority, & paid by pltf., such sum being 5 per cent. on the "gross rental" of the houses. After this payment, debts. altered their basis of assessment, from "gross rental" to "rateable value" as the proper basis of assessment they being entitled to charge 5 per cent. on the "annual value." If the rate had been calculated on the "rateable value" it would have been £7 3s. 10d. Pltf. brought an action in a county ct. to recover the overcharge £1 11s. 6d., the difference between these two sums, as being money paid under compulsion.

There was no power to distrain for these rates, except when they did not exceed £1 a quarter, which did not apply to the present case, but debts. had the power to cut off the water supply on non-payment of the rate. Debts. had not cut off the water & had not threatened to do so, nor had they taken any legal proceedings for the recovery of the rate.

The county ct. judge held the payment to be a compulsory one, as debts. had the power to cut off the water, & gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: the payment was a voluntary payment, & could not be recovered back.

(2) Sect. 6 of Burnley Borough Improvement Act, 1883, coming under the heading, Part II. Water, provides: "The following Acts & parts of Acts, so far as they are applicable & not inconsistent with this Act, shall be incorporated with & form part of this Act, that is to say, Waterworks Clauses Acts, 1847 (c. 17) & 1863 (c. 43), except the provisions thereof with respect to the amount of profit to be received by the undertakers when the waterworks are carried on for their benefit."

h. Right to prove for taxes & water rate—On liquidation of company.—

The right to prove a claim for taxes against an incorporated co. in liquidation depends upon the right to maintain an action therefor, which right of action only exists when the taxes cannot be recovered in any special manner provided for by Assessment Act, as, for example, by distress, or sale of the land.—RE OTTAWA PORCELAIN & CARBON CO., LTD. (1900), 31 O. akt. Action for use of hydrants

The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), provides: "& with respect to the payment & recovery of water rates, be it enacted as follows." Then comes sect. 68 which provides that the rates are to be paid according to the annual value, & if any dispute arise as to such value the same shall be determined by two justices:—Held: sect. 68 of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), was not incorporated in Burnley Borough Improvement Acts, & the settlement by two justices of a dispute as to value was therefore not a condition precedent to pltf.'s right of action.—*SLATER v. 241. Whether undertakers must cut off water—Before bringing action for recovery of rate.—It is not necessary, before water rates can be recovered under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 74, that the power of cutting off the water conferred by that sect. on the undertakers should have been exercised.—R. v. HUTTON, Ex p. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, [1907] 2 K. B. 578; 76 L. J. K. B. 1001; 97 L. T. 400; 71 J. P. 424; 23 T. L. R. 642; 5 L. G. R. 914, D. C.

242. Against whom action may be brought—Purchaser of dwelling-house—Arrears due before date of purchase.—The effect of Water Companies (Regulation of Powers) Act, 1887 (c. 21), s. 4, is that a purchaser of the freehold of a dwelling-house is liable to a personal action at the suit of the waterworks co. to recover arrears of water rate which accrued due before the date of the purchase.—*EAST LONDON WATERWORKS CO. v. 243. Time for bringing action.—By the joint operation of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 74 & 85, Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 145, & Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11, if any person liable to pay water rate neglect to pay the same, the undertakers may recover the rate if less than £20 by summary proceeding before two justices within six calendar months from the time when the matter of complaint arose.

By Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 43), s. 21, if any person neglects to pay to the undertakers any rate due to them, they may recover the same in any ct. of competent jurisdiction, & this remedy is to be in addition to their other remedies for the recovery thereof.

Water rates to an amount less than £20 became due & payable to undertakers whose special Act incorporated Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), & 1863 (c. 93). More than six months after the date when the rates accrued due the undertakers brought an action in the county ct., as being a ct. of competent jurisdiction to recover them:—Held: the remedy in the ct. of competent jurisdiction was not subject to the six months'

244. Summons before justices to enforce payment of rate—Power of justices to determine annual rate.—Upon the hearing before justices of a summons to enforce payment of a water rate made under a local Act incorporating Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), the justices have power, under sect. 68 of that Act, to determine a dispute as to the annual value of the premises rated. It is not necessary to their jurisdiction before making an order for payment of the rate upon such summons that the dispute should have been previously determined in a separate proceeding before justices.—LEA v. ABERGAVENNY IMPROVEMENT COMRS. (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 18; 55 L. J. M. C. 25; 53 L. T. 728; 50 J. P. 165; 34 W. R. 105.

245. — Necessity for demand—Before issue of summons.—Where a summons has been taken out for arrears of water rate under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 45, & Railway Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 140, it is not a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of the justices to make an order for payment, that a demand should have been made for the amount before the issue of the summons.—*EAST LONDON WATERWORKS CO. v. 247. Time for bringing proceedings.—Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 43, which limits the time for making a complaint to six months from the time when the matter of such complaint arose, applies to the hearing of a summons before justices for arrears of water rate under Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 85.

When the sum claimed accrued due more than six months before the date of the summons, the justices have no jurisdiction in the matter.—EAST LONDON WATERWORKS CO. v. CHARLES, [1894] 2 Q. 248. Costs—Discretion of justices.—By s. 37 of Ruabon Water Act, 1870 (c. lvii), which incorporates Waterworks Clauses Acts, 1847 (c. 117), & 1863 (c. 93), when a person neglects to pay a rate due to the water co., the latter may recover the same, with full costs of suit, in any ct. of competent jurisdiction; & by s. 38, after a defaulter has been summoned, water rates & costs ordered to be paid may be recovered by distress. Upon a summons before justices for payment of a water rate:—Held: the justices were not bound, on making an order for payment of the rate, to order the defaulter to pay the costs, but they had a discretion in the matter.—*RUABON WATER CO. v. (b) Cutting off Supply.

See Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 74.

249. When permissible—Arrears due from previous occupier.—A tenant of premises supplied by a co. with water having failed to pay the water rate, the co., under the powers conferred upon them by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 74, severed the communication with their main pipes. A subsequent tenant demanded a supply of water for the same premises, tendering to the co. the current quarter's rate & the estimated expense of restoring the communication, but the co. refused to supply the water until the arrears due from the former tenant were paid. A magistrate having convicted the co. under Waterworks Clauses Act (c. 17), s. 43, for such refusal:—Held: although the co. were not warranted in refusing to supply water to the incoming tenant until the arrears due to them as above stated were paid, they could not be made liable to the penalties imposed by sect. 43 until he himself had restored the communication with their main pipes.—*SHEFFIELD WATERWORKS CO. v. Act which provided that the corp'n. may levy any rate by any number of instalments, & that all the powers of the corp'n. for recovering any such rate shall apply to each instalment thereof, as if the same were a separate rate. After the payment of the first & second instalments the valuation list was, on notice of objection by resps., amended by reducing both the gross estimated rental & the rateable value, & the rates were altered accordingly. When a demand was made upon resps. for payment of the amount claimed to be payable in respect of the third instalment & calculated upon the reduced rateable value, resps. claimed to be entitled to deduct from the third instalment the difference between the sums paid by the resps. in respect of the first & second instalments & the sums which would have been payable in respect of the first & second instalments if they had been calculated upon the reduced rateable value:—Held: the four instalments were not four separate rates but four instalments of one rate, & resps. were entitled to make the deduction claimed.—*HASTINGS CORPN. v. 262. Failure to provide apparatus for regulating supply—What is apparatus for regulating supply—Screw-down stop valve.]—By a local Waterworks Act, passed in 1858, it was provided that, for the purpose of preventing waste of the water, all persons supplied with water by the waterworks co. should provide "proper ball or stop cocks or other necessary apparatus for regulating such supply," & that in case any such person neglected to provide such apparatus after being required to do so, the co. might cut off the water from his premises. At the date of that Act the supply of water provided by the co. was intermittent. By another Act, passed in 1888, the co. were required to provide a constant supply of water. It then, for the first time, became necessary for the prevention of waste, that a system should be adopted of inserting in each communication pipe an apparatus, called a screw-down valve, whereby the water could be shut off from any premises in which there were indications of the water being permitted to run to waste:—Held: such a screw-down valve was not an apparatus for regulating the supply within the meaning of the former Act, & the co. could not justify cutting off the water from the premises of a person who neglected to comply with a notice requiring him to insert such a valve in his communication pipe.—*WARD v. Applt., who was a carrier, had not agreed to be supplied with water by the undertakers, whose practice was to grant annual permits to take water for steam wagons on payment, each permit being attached to a particular wagon & being available for any employee of the owner of the wagon. Applt. was summoned for unlawfully taking water for the wagon, contrary to sect. 59 of the Act. The justices convicted applt. on the ground that he was liable for the act of his servant:—Held: as the act of applt.'s servant was done within the scope of the servant's employment, applt. was criminally liable under the sect. in respect thereof.—BURNS v. SCHOLFIELD (1922), 128 L. T. 382; 87 J. P. 54; 21 L. G. R. 39; 27 Cox, C. C. 378, D. C.

266. Liability to action for damages—Personal injury—Pipes laid negligently.]—An action on the case may be maintained against an incorporated waterworks co., where workmen employed by persons who contract with the co. to lay down pipes for conducting water through a public street do the work in a negligent manner, whereby an individual passing along the street receives an injury.—*MATTHEWS v. r. Duty to prove failure of "charge" affirmatively.]—In a Waterworks Co.'s Act a penalty was imposed for not keeping the co.'s pipes

"charged" with water, except in cases of drought, etc. On a complaint against the co. to recover a penalty:—Held: defts. must prove affirmatively that the failure was within the exceptions of the Act.—BENDIGO WATERWORKS CO. v. FLETCHER (1871), 2 V. R. (Law.) 43.—AUS.

of land on both sides, at a spot where the road was carried across a valley on an embankment, & wanting to connect his land on either side, K. employed pltf. at an agreed sum, to make a tunnel under the road. In doing the work, it was discovered that there was a leak in the defts.' main higher up the road, & on pltf. digging out the earth, the water from the leak flowed down upon the work & delayed it, so as to cause pecuniary damage to pltf., for which he brought an action against defts. :—Held: assuming K. could have maintained an action against defts. for injury to his property, as to which the ct. gave no opinion, the damage sustained by pltf. by reason of his contract with K. becoming less profitable, or a losing contract, in consequence of the injury to K.'s property, gave pltf. no right of action against defts.

(2) The tunnel was formed by digging through half the width of the road, forming the tunnel, & then completing the other half in the same way. Before commencing the work K. obtained the consent of the road surveyor & the trustees :—Held: assuming K. could, under the circumstances, have been indicted for the nuisance to the high road, the partial obstruction to the highway did not render the whole proceeding so illegal as to prevent pltf. who was engaged in it from recovering damages for a wrong.—CATTLE V. STOCKTON WATERWORKS CO. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; 44 L. J. Q. B. 139; 33 L. T. 475; 39 J. P. 791.

They completed the work in Sept. 1923. By Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 32: "When the undertakers open or break up the road or pavement of any street . . . they shall with all convenient speed complete the work for which the same shall be broken up, & fill in the ground & reinstate & make good the road or pavement . . . so opened or broken up." Defts. when filling in the ground after laying their main, neglected to ram the earth sufficiently, whereby pltf.s. gas pipes were deprived of the support to which they were entitled, & owing to a subsidence of the soil, sustained a series of fractures in the months of June & Dec. 1923, & July & Sept. 1924. In Dec. 1924, pltf.s. commenced an action for the damage suffered in consequence of the fractures. Defts. relied on Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), contending that the action had not been commenced within the six months thereby limited :—Held: (1) there was a continuing duty upon defts. under s. 32 of the Act of 1847 to remedy the neglect in the improper filling in of the ground, & time did not begin to run under the Act of 1893 so long as that duty remained undischarged; (2) pltf.s. were entitled to recover compensation for all the damage sustained by them, including that resulting from the fractures which occurred more than six months before action brought.—HUYTON & ROBY GAS CO. v. LIVERPOOL CORPN., [1926] 1 K. B. 146; 95 L. J. K. B. 269; 134 L. T. 203; 90 J. P. 45; 42 T. L. R. 116; 70 Sol. Jo. 226; 24 L. G. R. 1, C. A.

270. Liability to injunction—Pipes wrongfully laid.—Where water pipes had, without the consent of the owner of the soil, been laid in the soil of a highway, an injunction to restrain the continuance of the pipes was granted; the owner of the soil not being left to his remedy at law, & not being required to establish his right at law. The facts that the soil under the highway was of no value to the owner, & that his motive for applying to the ct. was not connected with the enjoyment of his land, were held not to be reasons against the granting of the injunction.—*GOODSON v. 272. Liability to pay compensation—Subsidence of street—Jurisdiction of justices—Claim exceeding fifty pounds.—Undertakers for the supply of water to a borough under a special Act, which incorporated Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), & Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), under their statutory powers, broke up the soil of a public road, which was repairable by a county council, & laid a pipe therein, & they restored the road to its former condition. Eight months after the completion of the work a portion of the road slipped & was repaired at a cost exceeding £50. Upon a claim preferred by the county council before two justices under s. 28 of Waterworks (Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), to recover the cost of repairing the damage the justices found (a) that the whole of the work of laying the pipe had been done in a proper, efficient & workmanlike manner; (b) that the damage was the result of laying the pipe in the road :—Held: the claim for compensation fell within Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 6, & as it exceeded £50, the justices had no jurisdiction to entertain it.—*HARPUR v. 275. — Escape of water from—Severe frost.]—A waterworks co., pursuant to the statute incorporating them, laid down main pipes at the prescribed depth below the surface of the street & placed in them proper fire plugs as required. By a frost of a severity rarely felt in England, a fire plug which had resisted the frost for twenty-five years was forced out & the water escaped from the main, but owing to the stopper above the plug being covered with ice & snow, the water could not rise to the surface, but was forced through the brickwork round the neck of the main & made its way into pltf.'s cellar, where it did damage:—Held: the co. were not liable since the accident arose from a frost of extraordinary severity, the effects of which the co. could not foresee or be expected to guard against, & consequently, there was no negligence on their part.—BLYTH v. BIRMINGHAM WATERWORKS Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781; 25 L. J. Ex. 212; 26 L. T. O. S. 261; 20 J. P. 247; 2 Jur. N. S. 333; 4 W. R. 291; 156 E. R. 1047.

276. — — — — —.]—Pltf.'s premises were flooded by an escape of water laterally from one of deft.'s pipes, arising from the starting of a fire-plug, in consequence of a severe frost. By reason of an accumulation of frozen mud on the top of the plug, the water was unable to force the plug out & thus escape, in which case no damage would have resulted. Evidence was given that the plugs were known to start occasionally under such circumstances, & that the lateral escape of water might be prevented at a moderate expense:—Held: there was evidence to go to the jury of negligence on the part of defts.—STEGGLES v. 277. — Failure to repair—Broken cap.]—By a local Act a waterworks co. was bound, at the request of Town Improvement Comrs., to fix fire plugs into their mains, & to repair & keep them in proper order, at the cost of the Improvement Comrs., in whom the property in the plugs was vested by virtue of their Improvement Act. In consequence of the cap of one of the fire plugs provided under the Act being broken, a horse placed his foot in the plughole & was lamed:—Held: the waterworks co., & not the Comrs., were liable for the injury.—BAYLEY v. 279. — Projection above level of street.]—A fire plug had been lawfully fixed in a highway by defts. Originally the top of the fire plug had been level with the pavement of the highway, but in consequence of the ordinary wearing away of the highway the fire plug projected half an inch above the level of the pavement. The fire plug itself was in perfect repair. Pltf., whilst passing along the highway, fell over the fire plug & was hurt: Held: as the fire plug was in good repair, & had been lawfully fixed in the highway, no action by pltf. would lie against defts.—MOORE v. 281. Meter cover—Failure to repair.]—A water meter which was the property of a water co. & used for measuring the water supplied by the co. to defts., the vestry of a parish, for watering the streets, was placed by defts. in a box of theirs sunk in the footway of one of the streets & covered with an iron flap. Defts. as such vestry were by sect. 96 of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), the surveyors of highways, & by sect. 116 authorised to cause the streets in their parish to be watered. Pltf. whilst walking along the street stepped on the iron flap, & by reason of its having been worn smooth & become slippery & dangerous, he fell & was injured. In an action by him against defts. for damages for such injury:—Held: though defts. might not be liable as surveyors of the highway for negligence in not keeping the iron flap in a proper state, they were in their capacity as the authority for watering the street, in which capacity they had placed the iron flap there.—BLACKMORE v. MILE END OLD TOWN VESTRY (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 451; 51 L. J. Q. B. 496; 16 L. T. 869; 47 J. P. 52; 30 W. R. 740, C. A.

282. — — — — —.]—Pltf. was injured owing to the dangerous condition of a water meter pit cover in the highway within the district of the Metropolitan Water Board:—Held: the owners & occupiers of the premises, for the supply of water to which this cover was part of the apparatus, were primâ facie liable, & the Water Board was not liable, the former, under Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907 (c. clxxi), s. 16 (1), having to maintain such apparatus.—MIST v. 284. — Failure to repair—Projection above level of street.]—CHAPMAN v. FYLDE WATERWORKS Co., No. 188, ante.

285. — — — — —.]—Defts. were authorised by statute to supply water in an adjoining district. By agreement with defts. the local highway authority undertook to repair & keep in repair, at defts.' expense, the roads or pavements which had been opened or broken up by defts. during the twelve months specified in Waterworks (Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 32. In Oct. 1904, defts. opened a pavement in order to repair a pipe, & the local highway authority immediately thereafter re-instated the paving. The pavement having sunk below the level of a water box fixed in the pavement, the local authority repaired it again in July, 1905, but did not repair it subsequently. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the pavement was out of repair in Oct. 1905, & continued unsafe until June, 1907, when pltf. slipped on the water box, & was injured in consequence of the pavement having sunk around the water box:—Held: (1) the fact that the highway authority had a duty to keep the road level did not take away the liability of defts. for the obstruction caused by the negligence of themselves or their agents at the expiration of the twelve months from Oct. 1904; (2) defts. were liable for damages, & not merely for the penalty under the statute as the action was brought in respect of something altogether outside the relation of water supplier & water consumer.—HARTLEY v. RICHDALE CORPN., [1908] 2 K. B. 594; 77 L. J. K. B. 884; 99 L. T. 275; 72 J. P. 343; 21 T. L. R. 625; 6 L. G. R. 858, D. C.

286. ———.]—The provision of Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907 (c. clxxi), s. 8, which imposes on the owner or occupier of a house requiring a supply of water from the Metropolitan Water Board the duty of maintaining the communication pipe & apparatus necessary for the purposes of such supply, applies in the case of a communication pipe & apparatus already laid down at the date of, as well as in the case of such a pipe & apparatus laid down after, the coming into operation of the above-mentioned Act. Accordingly, where a person passing along a street within the limits of supply of the Metropolitan Water Board sustained injury through non-repair of a stop cock box which had been placed in the pavement in connection with a communication pipe before the coming into operation of the above-mentioned Act:—Held: the Metropolitan Water Board was not liable in respect of the non-repair of the stop cock box.—BATT v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD, [1911] 2 K. B. 965; 80 L. J. K. B. 1354; 105 L. T. 496; 75 J. P. 545; 27 T. L. R. 579; 55 Sol. Jo. 714; 9 L. G. R. 1123, C. A.

287. ———.]—Failure to fill up cavity.—Pltf. was walking along the pavement when the toe of her boot went into the circular orifice of a stop cock box which was part of defts.' water system, with the result that she sustained personal injuries. The stop cock box had been constructed by the Lambeth Waterworks co., who were defts.' predecessors, under statutory authority. It had an opening 2½ in. in diameter & 3½ in. deep to the point where the spindle was reached. It was the practice of defts. to fill up the space between the spindle & the level of the pavement by means of a tight wisp of straw with mud or earth on top of it for the purpose of protecting the mechanism against frost & grit. Upon the occasion in question this wad only reached within 1 in. of the top of the stop cock box:—Held: the original construction of the stop cock box was lawful; there was a duty to supplement the construction of the box by a wad, but there was no duty on the part of defts. to renew a wad which in course of time had become worn, & from the above facts the judge might infer that after the occasion of the last user of the stop cock box in question either no wad was put in or an insufficient one, & accordingly he was justified in coming to the conclusion that defts. were liable.—OSBORN v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1910), 102 L. T. 217; 74 J. P. 190; 26 T. L. R. 283; 8 L. G. R. 170, D. C.

288. ———.]—Pltf. caught her foot in a stop cock box in a highway & sustained personal injuries. The stop cock box was placed in position by the Metropolitan Water Board under statutory authority. It was the practice of the servants of the Water Board from time to time to fill up these boxes with wads of straw for the purpose of protecting the spindle from frost & stones. At the time of the accident the wad of straw in the box in question had become so worn as to leave a hole some 2 inches deep. The judge held that the Board were liable in damages. The Ct. of Appeal having ascertained from the judge that he had not applied his mind to the question whether these stop cock boxes were a source of danger unless filled in with straw, but had assumed that they were by reason of the practice of the Water Board:—Held: there must be a new trial.—ROSENBAUM v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1910), 103 L. T. 739; 75 J. P. 12; 27 T. L. R. 103; 9 L. G. R. 315, C. A.; on appeal from 8 L. G. R. 735.

289. ———.]—Injury due to malicious act of third party.—Where the proximate cause of the raising of an iron plate, lid, or covering of a water apparatus in a street of the Metropolis, above the level of the pavement so as to be a dangerous obstruction by sticking up, is the malicious act of a third person against which precautions would have been inoperative, the Metropolitan Water Board is not liable to any one thrown down by it & hurt, in the absence of a finding that the occurrence could or ought to have been foreseen & provided against. Although bound to exercise all reasonable care the Board is not in the absence of such a finding responsible for damage caused by the malicious acts of third persons.—*SIMPSON v. 290. Valve cover—Failure to repair—Projection above level of street.—The iron cover of a valve connected with a water main was properly fixed in a highway by defts., but in consequence of the ordinary wearing away of the highway the valve cover projected an inch above it. Pltf.'s horse using the highway stumbled over the valve cover & was hurt. In an action against defts., who were both the water authority & the highway authority, for the injury to the horse:—Held: it was the duty of defts. to make such arrangements that works under their care should not become a nuisance to the highway, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—*KENT v. SUB-SECT. 2.—PROFITS.

See Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), ss. 75–82.

294. What profits include—Rents & profits of landed property.—(1) The New River co., by the New River co.'s Act, 1852, which incorporates Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 75, is prohibited from distributing amongst its shareholders dividends exceeding the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

(2) The “undertaking” of the New River co., including its landed property, is all one undertaking, & the rents & profits of the landed property are part of the profits of the undertaking within Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 75.

(3) The undertakings of the metropolitan water cos., on their transfer to the Metropolitan Water Board under Metropolitan Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), ought to be valued as subject to & not as free from the obligations to contribute to the sinking fund created by the cos.’ special Acts.—*METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. 295. Dividends—Limit of dividend—Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 75.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. NEW RIVER CO., No. 294, ante.

296. — — — — Provision for payment of smaller dividend.—The Weymouth Waterworks co. was incorporated by an Act of 1797, but was subjected to the provisions of an Act passed in 1855, which incorporated Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), & authorised a capital of £40,000 to be issued, but did not fix any maximum rate of dividend on the capital. In 1907 the co. was empowered to raise further capital to the amount of £60,000 by an Act which contained provisions that, except as by the Act otherwise provided, the new capital or the holders thereof were to be subject & entitled to the same liabilities, rights, & privileges as if it were part of the original capital, but limiting the dividend on the further capital to 5 per cent. per annum, unless a larger dividend should be necessary at any time to make up deficiencies of former dividends. These deficiencies existed in respect of both classes of capital, & there was an anticipated annual surplus which was available towards making up the deficiencies:—Held: in making up the deficiencies, the co. was bound to preserve, between the total amounts paid by way of back dividends to the holders of the two classes of capital, the proportions of 10 per cent. & 5 per cent. prescribed by the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 75, & the special Act of 1897, as the maximum dividends on the two classes of shares respectively until the arrears were paid.—WEYMOUTH WATERWORKS CO. v. COODE & HASELL, [1911] 2 Ch. 520; 81 L. J. Ch. 11; 104 L. T. 587; 18 Mans. 385.

297. — — — — Meaning of “prescribed rate.”—A waterworks co. was formed under a special Act, which incorporated Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17). Under subsequent special Acts, which incorporated Companies Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 118), the co. issued preference stock at 5 per cent. & 4½ per cent. respectively. None of the co.’s Acts contained a prescribed rate for the division of profits among the undertakers:—Held: by virtue of Companies Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 118), s. 13, the rates of interest fixed by the co. on the preference stock issued by them were “prescribed rates,” & the whole of the paid-up capital being subject to prescribed rates of interest “the co.,” by the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 75, were only entitled to divide as maximum dividends 10 per cent. per annum on the ordinary stock.—*CHELSEA WATERWORKS CO. v. 298. Surplus profits—Arrears of dividends—Rights of shareholders.—Under an Act of 1845, the dividends on the shares in a water co. were limited to 10 per cent., after payment of which & providing for a contingent fund, the cl. of quarter sessions had power to reduce the water rates. By a second Act in 1854, the capital was extended & a variation made in the shares & rate of interest: Held: on the construction of the second Act, shareholders under the first Act were not deprived of their right to payment, out of any surplus, of their arrears of dividends existing at the passing of the second Act.—COATES v. NOTTINGHAM WATERWORKS CO. (1861), 30 Beav. 86; 4 L. T. 607; 7 Jur. N. S. 790; 9 W. R. 799; 54 E. R. 821.

water co., one of whose special Acts incorporates Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), has no power to apply its surplus profits in making up to its ordinary stockholders any deficiency in the prescribed rate of dividend, or a full 10 per cent. dividend, if that is the prescribed rate, for any years before the time when Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), was made applicable to the co.—*KENT WATERWORKS CO. v. SECT. 1.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD.

SUB-SECT. 1.—FORMATION AND CONSTITUTION.

A. In General.

See Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41).

301. Transfer of undertaking to Metropolitan Water Board—Distribution of compensation—Rights of different classes of shareholders.—HILL v. CHELSEA WATERWORKS CO. (1904), 48 Sol. Jo. 708.

302. — Power to pay gratuities to employees.—A scheme prepared by a water co. under Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), sched. 4, for the application & distribution of the compensation moneys payable upon the purchase of the co.'s undertaking by the Metropolitan Water Board does not empower the co. to pay a certain sum, part of the compensation moneys, as gratuities to those servants who had been for a certain number of years in the service of the co.—WARREN v. LAMBETH WATERWORKS (1905), 21 T. L. R. 685.

303. Limit of supply—Effect of Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), s. 34.—Prior to Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), the Lambeth Waterworks, under a power given to them by an Act of 1848, by which they were incorporated, to supply water in the parish of Morden, had laid certain water mains in that parish, & had also, but without any authority to do so, laid water mains in parts of four other parishes. Pltfs. under their Act of 1871 were given power to supply water, among others, to the four parishes, & also the parish of Morden, & supplied such portion of the parish of Morden as could be served by them. The Act of 1902 gave deft. board power to acquire & carry on the undertakings of certain water cos., including that of the Lambeth Waterworks, & to supply water in the parishes in which such cos. were authorised to supply water. Sect. 3 provided that deft. board could exercise the powers previously vested in the cos., & that where any co. was supplying water in any parish in which it was not authorised to supply water the Act constituting the co. should extend & apply to that parish. Sect. 34 provided that "The provisions of this Act shall not empower the Water Board . . . to supply water within the limits for the supply of water of the Sutton District Water co. as defined by the Sutton District Waterworks Act, 1871, except so much thereof as was on Mar. 25, 1902, supplied by the company of Proprietors of Lambeth Waterworks." In these circumstances pltf. co. claimed a declaration that deft. board were not entitled to supply water within the parish of Morden except within so much of the parish as was on Mar. 25, 1902, actually being supplied by the Lambeth Waterworks:—Held: the Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), s. 34, was not confined in its operation to the four parishes to the exclusion of the parish of Morden, & pltf. co. were therefore entitled to the declaration asked for.—SUTTON DISTRICT WATER CO. v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1926), 90 J. P. 61.

B. Transfer of Obligations.

See Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), s. 45.

304. Obligations—Contribution to sinking fund.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. NEW RIVER CO., No. 294, ante.

305. — Allowance of rebate.—The Metropolitan Water Board is not bound to give a reduction in the rate to water consumers, although such a reduction had been granted by the waterworks co. whose undertaking had been taken over by the board, & the profits had exceeded the prescribed amount, for, as the waterworks are not now carried on for the benefit of the undertakers, the sect. of Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), which regulate "the amount of profit to be received by the undertakers," would not now apply.—CHISWICK URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. METROPOLIS WATER BOARD (1905), 69 J. P. 457; 21 T. L. R. 620; 3 L. G. R. 917.

306. — Supply of water "during continuance of existence of company" — Dissolution of company.—By an indenture, dated Sept. 25, 1841, the S. water co. covenanted to supply water to certain houses at certain rates during the continuance of the "existence of the co. The S. water co. was scheduled to the Metropolis Water Board Act, 1902 (c. 41). As compensation had been duly paid, the S. water co. was dissolved under sect. 29. Pltfs. said that sect. 45 (b) bound the Water Board to perform the contract of the S. water co.:—Held: the contract could not be enforced, as it was only made during the continuance of the existence of the co.—EDGE v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1907), 97 L. T. 279; 71 J. P. 436; 23 T. L. R. 698; 5 L. G. R. 1183.

307. — Payment of King's Clogg.—The King's Clogg, now consisting of an annual sum of £400, is an obligation which has been transferred to, & is now an obligation of, the Metropolitan Water Board, by virtue of the Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), & same is under sect. 4 secured upon the water fund established by that Act.—*METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. 308. Benefits—Agreement to pay company for supply of water.—By an agreement made on Nov. 4, 1902, M. agreed with the West Middlesex water co. to pay to the co. one guinea per annum for each of the twelve hydrants fixed at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith. In 1909 the Metropolitan Water Board, to whom the undertaking of the West Middlesex water co. was transferred by the Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), sued M., under the agreement of Nov. 4, 1902, for twelve guineas in respect of the water supply to the hydrants for four quarters up to Mar. 31, 1909. Deft. contended that, having regard to the terms of Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), & of the Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907 (c. clxii), the agreement was determined by operation of law on Apr. 1, 1908, when the Act of 1907 came into operation:—Held: the agreement was not so determined, but was saved by sect. 45 (b) of the Act of 1902 & sect. 35 of the Act of 1907.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. MULHOLLAND (1909), 74 J. P. 27; 8 L. G. R. 88, D. C.

C. Transfer of Employees.

See Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), s. 47.

309. Remuneration—Power of Board to alter—Although no alteration in duties performed.—Pltf. had been employed by a London water co. whose undertaking was transferred to defts. by Metropolis Act, 1902 (c. 41), the appointed day being June 24, 1904. Down to Nov. 1906, pltf. had received certain extra remuneration for overtime work under a verbal agreement made with the water co. in 1899, which had been modified in 1902, but in that month defts. gave notice to pltf. that they would thereafter pay him nothing additional to his ordinary wages, & after the expiration of that notice defts. refused & had since refused to pay the extra remuneration. Pltf. now sought a declaration that the agreement of 1899 was valid & subsisting, & that he was entitled to the payment of arrears. It was found as a fact that since Nov. 1906, he had performed the same duties as before that date although his rate of pay had been altered:—Held: notwithstanding that Act provided that pltf. should receive not less salary, wages or pay than he would have been entitled to if the Act had not been passed, there was no right given him by the Act by which he was entitled to say that his rate of pay could never be altered so long as he was performing the same duties.—ROWSELL v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1869; 79 J. P. 287; 13 L. G. R. 654.

310. Superannuation allowance — "Existing officer" —Officer not permanently employed—Discretion of Metropolitan Water Board.—Pltf., originally an assistant engineer of the New River co., continued to hold that office under their successors, the Metropolitan Water Board, from 1902 to 1910, when he was informed by letter that the works under the Staines Reservoir Act, 1896, & the New River co.'s Act of 1897, having been completed, his services would not, after the expiration of three months, be required. The Board had determined, & their decision had been upheld by the Treasury, that pltf. was not entitled to compensation for loss of office under Metropolis Water Act, 1902 (c. 41), s. 47; & he therefore claimed a superannuation allowance under sub-sect. 10 of that sect. It was found as a fact upon the evidence that no limitation of his employment had been communicated to him when originally engaged by the New River co., & that no limitation had been imposed upon the authority of the chief engineer of that co. who had engaged him:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a superannuation allowance, as having been "dismissed" on a ground other than misconduct; & even if his original employment had been of a temporary character & had ipso facto come to an end on the completion of specific works, there was nothing in sub-sect. 10 of sect. 47 to limit the rights of existing officers or servants to such of them as were permanently employed. But as sub-sect. 10 enacted that an existing officer upon ceasing to hold office was to be entitled to a superannuation allowance "upon the terms & conditions & according to the scale specified in the Superannuation (Metropolis) Act, 1866 (c. 31)," the amount of pltf.'s superannuation allowance was in the discretion of the Water Board.—WEBSTER v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1912), 76 J. P. 474; 10 L. G. R. 1025.

312. Burst pipe—Opening street to repair—Notice to reinstate—Validity of notice.—Appls. having discovered a leak in one of their pipes caused the roadway in the district of the W. city council to be opened, & after repairing the defective pipe, temporarily reinstated the roadway. Resp., on behalf of W. city council, served the following notice on applts:

"Take notice that the W. city council require the Metropolitan Water Board forthwith well & sufficiently to repair & make good such part or parts of the pavement in Vauxhall Bridge road by 189, sunk, broken, injured or damaged by reason of the breaking, bursting or want of repair of a pipe belonging to the board. Further take notice that the city council will make good the pavement, or surface, or soil, when broken up instead of permitting such work to be done by the board, & will charge the board with the expense of making good such pavement, or surface, or soil, so broken up or opened. Please inform me when the board have broken up or opened the permanent surface or soil in order that I may give the necessary instructions for the pavement or soil to be made good." Appls. did not carry out the work described in such notice within forty-eight hours:—Held: the notice was a good notice, & appls. were rightly convicted of committing a breach of the provisions of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 112, in not within forty-eight hours next after the service of the notice carrying out the requirements thereof.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. 316. — House or building occupied as separate tenement—Intercommunication between adjoining houses—Supply of water to one house only.]—Defts. for the purposes of their business established communication between two blocks of buildings occupied by them which consisted of what had formerly been separate buildings. To one of these buildings a supply of water was furnished by ptlts. by means of a communication pipe which was unconnected with any other part of the premises. Persons employed in other parts of the premises were accustomed to come to the building actually supplied by ptlts. for the purpose of obtaining water for drinking purposes. Ptfts. sought to recover from defts. water rate based upon the rateable value of the whole of the premises on the ground "that it was a house or building occupied as a separate tenement" within the meaning of sect. 8 of Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907 (c. clxxi). The county ct. judge held that the building to which the water was actually supplied was a "house or building occupied as a separate tenement" & that defts. were only liable to pay water rate based upon the rateable value of that particular building:—Held: there was evidence upon which the judge could so hold.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. Failure to repair service pipe—Right of undertakers to cut off supply.]—A water co. in the metropolis, who were furnishing a consumer with a constant supply of water for domestic purposes, the pipe communicating with his premises being attached to the co.'s main under the roadway of a public street, opened up the roadway & found a defect in the communication pipe causing a serious waste of water. They thereupon gave him written notice to repair the pipe forthwith; & upon his failing to so do, they cut off the water supply to his premises at the main, & refused to supply him until the pipe was repaired. By Metropolis Water Act, 1871 (c. 113), s. 28, in the case of a constant supply every owner or occupier, upon whom notice in that behalf has been served under the Act, shall provide the prescribed fittings & shall from time to time keep the same in proper repair. By sect. 3 the term "fittings" includes communication pipes. By sect. 32, if any person supplied with water by the co. wrongfully fails to do anything which, under the provisions of the Act, ought to be done for preventing the waste of the co.'s water, they may cut off his supply & cease to supply him with water so long as the injury remains or is not remedied:—Held: on the facts stated above, the co. were entitled to cut off the supply until the pipe was repaired, & therefore that they were not liable to the penalty imposed by Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 17), s. 43, for "neglecting or refusing" to supply water to consumers.—*GRAND JUNCTION WATERWORKS CO. v. 326. Alteration of apparatus—Cutting communication pipe & affixing thereto pipe for adjoining house.]—By Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 93), s. 19, it is made unlawful for the owner or occupier of any premises supplied with water to affix any pipe to a pipe belonging to the undertakers or to a communication or service pipe belonging to such owner or occupier without the consent of the undertakers, & by regulation 5 made under Metropolis

Water Act, 1871 (c. 113), s. 17, every house supplied with water is to have its own separate communication pipe "provided that as far as is consistent with the special Acts of the co. in the case of a group or block of houses, the water rates of which are paid by one owner, the owner may at his option have one sufficient communication pipe for such group or block":—Held: this regulation did not justify applt. in cutting a communication pipe & affixing thereto a pipe for another adjoining house which formed part of a continuous row of houses without the consent of resps., & by doing so he had committed an offence within Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 93), s. 19.—KYFFIN v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1908), 99 L. T. 809; 72 J. P. 517; 7 L. G. R. 15, D. C.

SECT. 5.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF METROPOLITAN LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

327. Cutting off water—Necessity for notice to sanitary authority—What amounts to cutting off supply—Question of fact.]—Water was supplied to a dwelling-house by a water co. by means of a service pipe connected with the co.'s mains. In this service pipe at a point between the house & the main was a stop cock provided by the landlord of the house, to whom belonged the service pipe & stop cock. There being a leak in the service pipe between the stop cock & the house, the co., after notice to the tenant of the existence of the leak, turned down the stop cock to prevent waste, & thereby turned off the water supply from the house, & the water remained turned off until the leak was repaired by the landlord, when it was turned on again by the landlord's workman opening the stop cock. There was no intention on the part of the co. to withdraw the supply except for the immediate purpose of stopping the leak. A magistrate having found, on the above facts, that there was no "cutting off of the water supply" or "ceasing to supply the house with water" within the meaning of Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 49, so as to render it necessary that notice should be given to the sanitary authority:—Held: the question whether or not the water co. had cut off the water supply was a question of fact rather than a question of law, & the magistrate having found that there was no cutting off within the meaning of the sect., there was no ground for overruling his finding as being wrong in point of law.—YOUNG v. SOUTHWARK & VAUXHALL WATER CO. (1893), 69 L. T. 144; 57 J. P. 806; 41 W. R. 622; 37 Sol. Jo. 509; 5 R. 432, D. C.
